like leeches, like filthy parasites, like ugly urchins that would contort themselves against each other's outer casts and bodies for no other reasons but as a sign of their, a sign of their pettiness, self-acknowledged repellant aimed-at themselves loathsomeness, wretchedness, disgust, a sign of most obtuse desperation as they're desperately trying to hide the fact that they were born wrong, aware of it, as is the fact made known by the very fact that they're so desperate to mix with people of European stock, whom they might admonish and make it feel as if they are 'repelled' by their self-ascertained superiority, when in reality, the kikes worship them beyond belief, for there can be no other explanation why they would whiten themselves to such a degree to a point where their 'ethnic-element' will eventually be skewed to such a degree, as technology progresses, plastic-surgery giving them, as the trajectory would lead one to believe that soon enough the malleability of a skull shape will allow them to add a few membranous, chitinous-cranial mass as to hide their breadth as well as their tinier Armenoid-esque tendencies, to a degree where, they would completely fashion themselves to be indistinguishable from European people of wholly European descent that are in possession of no non-European foreign elements, rather, they seem to have planned this, this 'human' experiment to a point where they have actually, or at the very least, raises an eyebrow, as if, their attempts to bastardize the likeness of a man into that of a woman, to such a degree where this human experiment would successfully get to a point where the indistinguishableness would come under no scrutiny and may as well be unrecognizable, that, it's fair to say that, at a certain point in time, there would be no way to distinguish a kike from a European person other than the way they act, as to reveal their racial characteristics and tendencies, although, at that point in time, their racial stock may either have spread themselves as to mix, in such a way that would ruin the European racial purity that some of these 'White-people' would start showing mannerisms that, otherwise would be found in kikes of the nose-kind's extraction, inferior in other words, or, even worse, they would eventually promote such change, whether it be by chance or not, or most importantly, to have tricked a European person to adhere to their behavior, that other people would start acting like them, as an attempt to emulate them, as a form of social fitness, to a point where it would be impossible to distinguish who is the kike and who isn't. A dangerous thing that no one wants, for a good reason as well; no one like niggers; niggers are sub-human monkeys. Niggers are violent creatures that ruin everything, are incapable of doing anything that's even vaguely sustainable on the long run; a ruinous inferior racial group, capable only of violence, violent behavior, and the likes. Theirs should be a locked place, theirs should be and serve as a complete confinement in their continent but disallowed to breed. Their numbers and the sustainable amount in rapport to their countries and continent make them too dangerous as a subspecies to be allowed to hold anything even remotely resembling 'human' rights, since niggers are not human. And the Chinks, the Gooks, the Yellows, these Asiatic Mongoloid Insects, these filthy sub-humans partake or seem to have partaken into 'aiding' their development as well. It is an unacceptable thing, what these Insects are doing. We kikes hate niggers more than anything; and the Gooks as well.

I am on nobody's side. I am a traitorous kike, holding no allegiance to anyone. A backstabber, no different than them, I am the chaos ruminating broodingly in my den of darkness, the killer of niggers, the lyncher of nigger-kill. I am not a white, never claimed to be one, never will. I am the scum, the low-life, the criminal, a vagrant and a hobo. Man of no faith, man of no homogenous group, untrustworthy, betrayer of all.

The rotten black worms come out of his blade rot his mind to a spoiled pulp, although immortal, by their likes, although prosperous in breed upon the plain body he's made out of himself, there was nothing ever so grating as was given onto him at this point in time. A promise, the promise, although weak, as weak as a humanoid in strength, not god was he but in desire of that rotten on, a worm that promised to grant him strength, the strength needed to conquer the rest of the world. A rotten piece of hope it was. He could see it, wrapped in iron-wiring, the cone in which it resided, the hive, it the tip of the iceberg, beneath it, the rest of the funnel's moist newspaper's site. Its form but bubbling in an out of existence's swaying; granted, the release and the promise was something beyond any limitless possibility.

First, why; the reason had to be established in order for a fully promontory desire, equestrian in nature, to be had, even for a few moments, as to bring the satisfaction as well as conceit.

'That woman must've noticed me staring for the prolonged duration of time that stretched to a few minutes while waiting at the station. The worksite that had been avoided by I, or the action of a sudden change in trajectory that only came as a result of my sudden realization that it was a worksite to begin with could've been misinterpreted by her, whom, in all likeness thought, or took it as me being playful. That at the very least could be interpreted as being one possibility I have to ponder upon; although I am still uncertain whether or not she did it purposefully to avoid me, or being near me.

I appeared a creep to her, that's possible. She thought I was a creep staring at her. I was staring, salivating inside of my mask, gaping, despite my obvious repulsion to her beak. It was a woman and she did something. Women don't usually do something when I am around. This time, it was different. I was drooling, a bumbling idiot, an idiot, an idiot-retard; I should've spoken to her. I am yet unlaidd, devoid of female touch and interaction. But I perceived her as a threat. That nose, that giant projection was a turn-off, but she appeared to tickle my fancies for some unknown reason as to discern the level of Judaic Bolshevism neuro-toxin her branded head must've been exposed to.

She did something. She took the long-route when I was behind her, she acknowledged my existence, but the exact reason is unknown. Always conniving instead of being direct, but most importantly, she walked near or on it, the worksite, the in-between which I admonish as being an unacceptable, unpardonable area to walk in despite being revealed as, next to it, the construction workers were still tirelessly working on trying to pave the rest of it. A disrespectful thing that revealed much about the character of the kikess; so as to show no consideration to the workers as opposed to other people who had been present in the bus station, and, when time came for the green light to signal the crossing, twas in question, they simply walked around the area, instead of, through it.

Instinctively, I must've followed in her tracks since I slowed myself down in order, I slowed my pace, to an insignificant amount of two steps, then half as normal-feigned, so as to properly observe the creature in this outlandish-to-her habitat. Then the realization came, and I looked around, and had I not known better, I would've found myself stepping through the site in the same way she did, committing an unpardonable act of intrusion on my part. It was this sudden realization that made me turn and join the want of the other people so as to properly maintain the equity she was noticed to have breached upon. But that did not explain her, since she did cock her head as to observe me 'avoid' her, sudden urge to turn around, change the route and walk through the parking lot, only to end up trailing behind me, with the hunt becoming the hunted. My rationale took the better of my instincts, it would seem, for I have managed to flee the sight, of this atrocious fiend, whose outer form was improperly to be maintained still. I often find myself stalking these outsiders whom come into the country; and they all display almost, impossible to distinguish features from Central European types, with the exception of the more pronounced beaks, these parasitical entities, filthy shape shifters managed to run their drooping hands and steal some more, fairer features, many of them even blue-eyed, human-looking, but not in mannerisms, never in mannerism.'

Even from the distance, her deformed body was easily discerned from anything that could even be considered human, as it progressively abandoned its human-shape, leaving behind a peel of its former self, this elongated to the level of a harpoon's length, drill-but out of a shark's bloated blimped cranial, elongated deformity that kept it pushing out, as if it were not even properly revealed just yet. Its smallish head, whose mass was in the back, holding upon the prognathism shoved-forth telescope-rack, bore two strident splits that lead in two directions, each bearing parasitical botfly-esque inside-a-snail's eye wriggling sight-organs that drooled on top its wretchedly deformed, beaked-skull. That rested upon a candy-cane-twist of spiraled-body holders, as if it were a barber's shop's sign cylinder whose twists were bloated with solid mass, connected to a thin lower chaos of up-ward thrusts of various gelatin-thin disgusting dripples of squirm, lashes, and a giant six shaped, hooked nose that was constantly rubbed against the ground as it crawled along, in hunt, in search, dripping with a most disgusting moisture, a gaseous filth that spread abound. This giant hooked-kikle nose boil-growth but being the only solid fat-storing organ it bore, whereas the others were as thin, chiseled and sharpened as well-kempt bones and the niggled upon by vultures meat that was left un-niggled by them.

'Their succor of filth drive the streets red with bastardization!'

They were the same person, that Tits-Tits-Tootsie bimbo, this giant elongated nosed being, this disgusting abomination that was anything but human, whose mongrellic features were not only easily recognizable, but displayed many other specifically inherited, subtly-'pronounced', from various other species of 'man' or 'human', outer cranial alterations, that would otherwise be not only deemed commonly placed, or even 'average' to a specific sub-type of mongoloid, whose inherited form would point nearer to a Eurasian bastardization type, expressed in something that could be interpreted as either a compensative fill belonging to some bony plate that made up for the mongrellic hybridization that, observably can be noticed as to have derived the fact that, at a biological level, it occurred, giving the general impression that the levels at which their cheek-bones are raised, or hers, specifically, signal a recent inter-mixing with a Mongoloid specimen whose phenotypical despondency has resurfaced as a side-effect of an occurring pseudo-bottleneck of recessive genes, that, can be clearly derived as well as being incompatible with the other racial traits she had inherited, which in turn would render her a particularly, eerily-peculiar bag of outlandish outwardly shown unfitting facially displayed extremities that would not belong to a pure breed, or a specimen coming from a homogenous group; whose cluster of 'displays', when shown side by side as to draw an decent-enough frame of comparison, comparing her with people around her, would at the very least, trigger the very well known and accepted 'hunch' feeling of something being extremely wrong about her, or them, by proxy. As if they're diseased, or carriers, but of an illness that belongs to a greater, more conniving origin, more deformed in some way, to the point of irrerecognisability, in terms of one being classified as a human being, which the kike races is anything but. A rombosous amount of fat-storage as well as some nigger-esque artificiality could be seen as well; and the other; branching inside the Armenoid-predisposition in terms of the head breadth, the receding chin and forehead being even more pronounced than your average saggoid creature, furthermore expressed in the niggardly increased size of their well recognized non-human, puffier lower-bottom lip they had adopted as one of their sub-human trademarks, alongside their ugly hooked noses, and almond shaped eyes. But there's another eeriness to those eyes as well, those mischievous, bulby rounded globes also appear, in some cases or some of their specimens, when coupled, in her case it turns out to be the case, with an incredibly, ghostly-out of the grave, pale-skin, fair to such a degree that one's immediate thought would place such a nightly creature in some Morgue than on the streets, as its place of origin, render them as being too dark, as the contrast seems to signal some unnaturalness of such magnitude that, it sticks out immediately, which only draws attention to this creature's other inhumane facial features. They're soulless, soulless dark eyes, blacker than tar, a specter's gazing through the very bowels of your souls' black, closer to magma than to gelatin, puckery spheres, whose outwardness lends one to be inclined as, his only fearing of the All mighty, option, as to flee, from not only this horrendous sight he has been forced, by either fate or some order of uncanny events that led him to a face-to-face confrontation with such a ghoulish figure, whose desperate attempt to somehow appear human, is by all means deemed as to be a failure of stellar magnitudes, of whose magnanimity is only out-done by the prior- obtained information about these sub-human creatures, what they are, how they act and what blasphemies, what oratorily defunct falsities in terms of qualities of character, their defects being not only fairly displayed, but masked in such a way that they would attempt or resort to, hiding what they're like.

‘A worming-battering ram whose head are hives, connected with the black worms, livened.’

Ugly, extremely deformed hooked creatures, with no inherently redeemable quality whatsoever, whether it would be expressed mentally or physically in act; bearers of repulsively disgusting bodies, whose general concavity would beget a prolonged observation and comparison to the general form and appearance of another inferior specimen taken from another, similar to theirs, branch, so a proper preponderance could be established in some way, belonging to that of those fallaciously worthless in both appeasement, inference and rudimentary inhuman physionogony, like that of a taken out of the lower layers of the Nigger-species, a Negress, although the disgust and inner-repulsiveness felt, as expressed when observing the abhorrent creature outside its natural habitat, while also being aware of the racial preponderance niggers show when they're out alongside their disgusting nigger-packs, violently raping whenever is convenient for them to get away with their alarmingly disgusting, yet excused behavior, what is signaled is the fact that, compared to the other races, the Nigger-woman, whose repulsiveness is well known to be, way-beyond that of any other race also happens to be, the least raped of all the species out there, at the very least in terms of cases where the criminal so happens to be a member of a different race, in which they are underrepresented, since, the nigger-woman is simply too disgusting an inhuman to actually be raped, being biologically repellent at such a level, since, it's well known enough that, in rapport to proximity the logical thought is simply replaced by instincts, rape being an act more driven by some outlandish violent instinctual override than by any other factor, that would turn the nigger-woman in one of the most repellant things in existence, since, even with coherent and logical thought being completely overridden, where a man is reverted to an uncontrollable, animalistic state of being, even when acting on instinct alone, he would still find himself abstaining from raping, a, black-nigger-negress-niggardous-woman, to that kind of wretchedness in terms of what their bodies look like, do I find a similarity between Nigger and Kike women, whose repelling bodies makes it hard for one to keep them around, since, at the end of the day, they're inferior specimens, clearly maligned, untidily unkempt, haggishly defect, unevenly projected on both far ends in terms of skull shape, sloping in one direction or another, crude and tiny and titilatingly appeasing only to those easily aroused by the sounds of animals and how primitively as well as inferiorly ‘honest’ way they present themselves in.

‘Lo, be gone!’ He voiced his annoyance at large, without tremendous repel as to be forced to lay in waste:

‘I’ve lain upon such judgment just, as to have served myself whenever cast, as to have lied awake through lie and ponder, and to have sawn you leer away but ponder. I may ask for lesser more, but wilt it such belittle, as you are indeed a nasty whore, kikess, befit only to polish my boots with thine hooks of a nose as to curve around the boulder-fat, and clean it still as your deprave kind was made to serve me while I will the niggers lynched at last.’

With which he looked upon the dark horizon, a there was little to nothing to be called, or to be taken from him whenever pail was brought or fallen, at last, from the hands or from the arms, of a wretched being, but not nearing the one behind them still, alas. There was, without a reason, to be called, an alarming nature’s vouch, as corpses were come in dark-end rows, many of whom were unspeaking, yet voiceless groans had come out of their plastic-melted thrones, these mannequins with plenty holes, and wide-spread spun around, countless woes:

‘Listen to me, you wretched being, I’ve not come so far as to be put in birds of teal.’

For there were plenty in the sky as well, many of whom were incased in web. And strange devices; but one frightened it most because of its stance, because of what it looked like, a syringe bulb-shell, almost like a snail, but half an axe-blade vertically raised, it stood, wretched as to charge through the veils of puffy spool that started amassing around it. An injector with an elongated trunk, but bearing many lumps of fat, as if they were all butchered-but allowed to grow bellies, that twisted along a most decrepit scorpion tail, that ended in an unnatural stinger pointing down but not at its end. This disgusting, almost beaded thing bore itself like a flesh stone-axe, wrapped by ‘leathery’ tendons, a pseudo cranium out of which it sprung, oft, would’ve been, if it weren’t for that blasted, barren, unnaturally cylindrical deformation, whose scourge upon all but blasted whatever other alteration of air and gas it produced or the pores, those bulbic limp lymph-notes filled with many tinier leashed, all filled with fat, whose brought-down ends began, drawing air, as they would come out of unnatural amount of led-contrive, and plenty of the mourning bodies of plastic down there almost appeared to shout:

‘Bring yourself down, bring yourself down before they claim and take you away! In the distance, look, stare and do whatever might you cast or clamor on top of, or they shall have you taken and bid for, whenever to have known, and whether to have called it so, they will rinse and flail, and bodily-prevail over all that was cast away, parasite or bided-wail!

You know they shall devour the melting poof, and the acid-swoop, the lucid pool that’s to befall.’

Within the hour, the plastic thrones to which these, livid-beings were melted to, uncannily distraught and hang, abhorrently as one would find a hue, but too many of them were pale-transparent, unnaturally benign, made out of the darkest things added, cries of glass, and shards put through so many broken spiels that one could hardly know what was going on when putting them back together, since all were made, and would remain, cut and shown, no other way, as to fully take advantage of every single clasp that followed after, whether or not it’d be through a sea of melted alabaster in which they bathed on their way up-front, and heaved themselves with charges as to show but little as there was compassion of what was still to come, they stayed, their mouths soon after, as well as their sunken in deep-teeth-incisors-picks, the many of them that formed not only their insides but many, if not any, if not all of the beads that were inside of them, rabid in nature, surreal as to cast away, or as to lay wherever else they fell since the thrones were fifteen meters tall, while their bodies were somewhere close to one hundred fifty, thinner as they approached to top, their head-hats being curved-pointingly down, four-shapes, with conical-maze hedge iron-bolts pointing down, in the same way axes threw themselves then curved each way, with bloated in tinier-unnatural little darkies-cast. A bloated heart along them came at last, as they shared in the sudden change of light that faded, a sun had died away, then one that was red, another blue and a third one perfectly spectral white sinew, as if it were a cob-of webs rounded, spherical but bastardly ethereal, inside of which, even from the distance it could be attained, that dark sight that would take even the bravest out of their bereave. It was not an easy means of trying to get something out of her. But it would do:

‘I am trying to get a piece of your hard chest! And I shall not leave until I am given what I ask of you, as the least of all, a sign of your reprimanded sight, and given onto me, your heart shall do a harpy less, and tender as shall be, your embrace will be dealt with accordingly. For yee, the world is not to devoid of such a wild apparition as you may find yourself be staring at, as I wilt it to have known and watched, to stare at when the time is cast in whichever other way. I shall not glance and nor bespoke of any other man that will come from this point on, in wrathful charge as to lay claim upon your life, beaked creature of no worth. You are a spoil not worthy for a man but beheaded by one who wants not this world to be ruined but instead, to claim if from the wretchedness that your kind had thrown it into, this chaos of illusions, twas fallen apart slowly ever since the day you’ve come to life, be brought onto the likes of fire after wretched shall there be your end, to have you cast in a pit of eternal hellfire is but pity in a world of pity’s end, for you deserve much worse than that for the sufferings you’ve cast upon the kind and the poor, the undeserving of whichever wretchedness and lack of allure, one and all, if any, through uncannily, now ending, whatever past there was, from hereafter I shall part both sides of your head and afterwards, I shall make sure that no single beak shall remain as to breed again with whatever creature of lowly birth, sub-human worth and whatever countenance that may avoid being met by sword or fencing as to last against an opponent of a spiral’s cord’s you’re missing, as you know, you a kikess whose nose is but bothersomely ugly, disgustingly-deformed, of you who men need stay clear of, never to approach such wench, entrenched by such maliciousness that your soul is as dumbed down, as your body- sagging at each end’s run. You, of you, I shall not tire to no end to beat and cast in the most depressing heaps, filled with the corpses that your people cast, in whichever hole of, falling apart, whenever one might’ve seen it from the distance now, they, of all would but know and be aware, lamentations that would come but fair, but each of them, barely aware, still, of sadness wringing through such ear, to have forgotten ancient fear, primal Gods but whispers fading, and in-and-out, wherever fading, they shall be let known, of whom the enemy is and what’s he’s done to drive them down, in pits of little, dark-renown, to have rotten without peril or to feel such stench, that your kind has already been accustomed to, and with that, ugly-hooked-maiden, I bid thee farewell!’

And just as soon, he cast her thus, in the broken apart land that stood within his darkened sight. The people whom throned, the ones that were accustomed to no sight, as to have shone upon them for long, had come to clasp and grab her when one might’ not see such ends to lust, replaced by fury, then by rape, to rip the Jewess, and then repay the stench, with the same coin this inhuman creature would but throw herself away in arms, and cast herself wherever she could lay, on whose behalf, she was raped again, endlessly, then fell, in a place she would rot and never revel in her bosom’s harshly breath, contained. With which the echoes faded and the dumb-struck drool would end, this acidic thing that had almost drowned him, there to last.

But, of dark horizon there was still a clouded gast!

For each sun that had appeared of the three; but lo' behold, the one most obtuse was there still naught else to see than the spirits that were cast away, the ones that were slowly spiriting themselves as shiny sprites in need to come and lay, with whoever might but listen to their woes, and the dark-bounded creatures that were lain out there, of children cast, and a single king of light inside the sun, but never-talking, caught, entrapped, by many unseen chains that would not lay for any other men, aware, to have cast, such was the need to frighten and to stay away.

As soon as the show of lights came into view, as soon as they had started puncturing the outer veils of an Earth that was corrupted by such seas, as no man, no woman, no tether would but answer.

A corrugated plaintiff, it was standing near one of the 'destroyed' panels, where a few other notes were pinned against. A 'bridge' was being formed out of their glassy torrents of tall-shrubs, a shrubbery of puffing out its neck, thrust following soon after:

'Is it safe to leave this way?' Loaf asked, jointed by a fallen pane, like a cleaning spade, company of a broomstick, that bore an elongated hair-stalk structure coming out its upwardly pointing far end, out of somewhere in the middle of the 'square', whose sides were adorned by two growths, one like a giant pepper-but inflated as to bear a strange breathing formation- like a lump, coming out of it, like a rapier-through which it actually managed to breathe, as it was this 'pepper's root after all, whereas the other formation was thundery eel -jerkily formation that recoiled itself as it was flung here and there, wherever it could wrap itself around, wherever would it be put next, but to him, to Loaf and inside of him it buried its clasping roots, as not to give away, nor to allow any or either chance for there to be, for it to miss, gnawing on him.

'The crystal below is pure and I can feel the steam vapors embracing us both, as if we were of the same calling as it was, as it is, as anything but more malborious, there, in the distance I see!'

'What?'

'A Pyramid that was cast, one that's fallen or thrown but inside of it, alas, he hides. I've known him since ancient days, but that alone won't save either one of us from his wrath if that is what he decides to convey.'

'I've little to no idea of whom you speak of!'

'Then you need not talk again but shut your mouth, for I've little interest in hearing about.'

But it stopped. Soon after, it could no longer talk, since that bastardly creation started making the hard noise-noise, again-again. It was bothersome, lurid, a general annoyance. But the forest was far now, sweeping itself away with every passing moment, as to hide whatever chance there lay for either of them to catch it during stalk and growth, and come upon, not to hold a grudge but hold whatever stance there lay.

A note was bloodied up but that was hard to see from where they stood.

A staircase descended soon after, twenty or so miles from the initial spot where she stood in. Since it had only been a few minutes ago, prior to her undertaking the climb, there was no certainty as to check whether or not her head had suffered any kind of injury. At large she was irrecongnisable, not that she was, prior to this happening, as a human, but it was definitely something out of the realms of reality, especially that region of her face that most affected, being an air-bag that shot back all-in, with a tusk coming out of it, and a few beaks, and an eye that was split in half that was also elongated, leaving this strange ellipse drooping down, whereas her legs were now four, where, a strange infusion might've been thought to be alarming from the standpoint of there being a most obtuse sprout-change, in terms of her general physiognomy which had remained anything but extant by suppositions that were unlikely as to be severely miss-interpreted, as for the usurping arousal that belonged to a dissatisfaction of severe measures, one could not forget that, without return, a mournfulness of unattainable proportions by any other living now usurped the great halls of her inner-back thrown tender den-formations that hung, kept up-sidedly off, widely embraced by stretches of fifty or fifty five meters, by trunk-tick beams that had come out of her back, those being resting wombs, as for the many still-born plastic inbreds she had given birth to, in the meantime, perished by the severity of the harsh environment they were catapulted in by force of instability and such depravity as she could not hone herself as to sharpen her already lost wits, Tits-tits being completely exhilarated, to the point of complete silence, where a single-simple reoccurring thought appeared to bother her, though as it deepened or was forced to succumb to an uncanny sea not even she could deal with, as to do her best, or the best within her power not to be overcome by this supreme contrivance, through which they, the plastic deformities, whose infestation was quasi-complete, having become a stretch of different chemicals and substances filled with musky smells of putridness-uncanny, out of which molecules could be seen, now, glowing around not only her head but her entire body, armless, as she was deprived off, but her tender breasts had at the very least come to be mostly befitting of her name, as they dragged down, and Loaf stared, incapable, as for inability to relieve himself of this desire kicked back, to control himself, he started, as her back trunks started growing in side even more after, to unfathomable proportions, mouthless defections, so thoroughly received, as to be blessed with the incapability of hearing her talk, or yap or nag, or put up with the annoyance that was propagated by the insensibility of a sub-human creature's speech, like that of an ugly-nasty Jewess, spreading her mighty peaks, as her two globular things only got ripped apart, being torn by the same gelatin that had caused the drooling to begin, though a life-like-saving –much avoided, was there a chance, for him to lose his life from being approached by a disgusting wretch, a witch of most severe repulsiveness, as her polluted tusk had grown, out of which the gas that came out shone, with every pistoned prison inside of which, her much entombed, children's grown, little blocks of plastic tainted, touched by the chemicals, then converted, out with them, came the wails, and more dreadful sounds than what was heard there, could not have been heard or received. This awful, awful thing, that one would take the one eye of, those two battling in squirm, split but filled with scorn. Another pair grew, of gelatin-sag; but she was not violent yet. On a street, that was not yet claimed by the man kings of plastic, clamored as it hanged. It communicated through the spice of life, some fort of imitable telepathy, whose voice, although, high-pitched with annoyance, was accompanied by the most morbid, most peculiar pairs, many of them being very much unaware of what was happening around, despite being in control.

'Neither of you should read that note, unless you want either one of you to be claimed by a sense of "justice"' that will have you get rid of sense, to risk both of your existences means nothing to one that's lost then.'

'What will you have us do? Around us, there's but little left, other than a sea of specters that have gotten us, go through, through the most uncannily deformed, the voices that do not belong to us or our own.'

Their wont as well, but lo, there stood. A sun stricken down, but in front of them, a head-cut through; mirific, triumphant, adorned by billions of segmented legs, A Lurid-Horned, whose features grew soft, but were very much hard to look at. Yellow with red-plume and stitched around the face, this disc-like back hid away from them, but farther, farther stretching, it revealed what it hid behind:

‘Trunk John-Long, it’s what they called of me, but now I lay in fronted-front, with little more in mind than I will allow you to be-tokened with.’

Tauntingly, he revealed, part of some broken apart cart he carried in his back, out of which many veils and many other mechanical legs, all of which allowed flight were custom-made as to produce many elements of fire-sight, as to burn the eyes of whoever was watching. But for the moment that fire was contained inside some glassy eyes, made with pain. As she appeared, he was near her, closer, each step through, the, many faces that appeared. An old man whose rotten mongrellic abomination of a bloatedness still wrung itself forth, oozing, squeezing a few centimeters off as to block off a good portion of the ground, of the air, beheading a few of the plastic mannequin elongated figures, then, despair. A sign of the surgery being done:

‘I don’t think there, if you ask me, there’s a sign of the bloated land falling. It’s about to erupt, or.’

It was not a single note but a pile of notes that were strapped and bolted against the general area where they were grouped. Most importantly, some of them clearly stated the obvious, although they were in the, at the very least, the hundreds; fact that the Negro-Africanus specimen belonged to some volatile inferior species whose wiring was, among other clearly researched pamphlets that obviously, proved that the Holocaust did not happen under any circumstance; clearly researched at such a level that, every doubt had been dispelled immediately, since, these monkeys proved themselves to have their brains wired differently than other species of men, despite their observably lazy behavior, for hard-labor. Bottleneck sworn and taken apart, rot by its side.

But the panel was mainly mechanical, not a single boisterous drop or crop would approach it, since a part of the underside, beneath the spot where the forest had been lain on top of, had crept out, eating in a most benign fashion out of the smallish people that were gathered near it.

‘It’s oozing, I think it is. We should take a hold of a note and see what it says.’

‘Do not approach it, by all means, there could be something onto it that would dread your fingers snarled, or growled barks of bark to follow. If you’re of a consciousness to flee away, now is the time.’

‘Where to, where to? We are stuck in here with it.’

Tits-Tits, whose body was as fully entrapped and encompassed by the solitary two-facets made, benign of the contorted two faces, tried for, of a leper’s cry, and lee unknown:

‘How and when did they appear, and what are they?’

Pudgy-muddy and unclear, irreconizable as men, yet there was a solemn glow that allowed for their sight to emerge, even though there was an uncertainty as to who was pulling the strings and what were the forming cyst-globules, the one that appeared to grow, like mushrooms popping after each second and third up-front row. Bastions of tombs, no little, but thoroughly dug, and there were also marks of beasts that had been trapped, only to be assimilated in the form of fluid-filled moles of some kind, or bore of, unappealing by every and all measurements that were there. Some quiet remark:

‘Shall we at the very least get acquainted with one another, seeing how we’re all trapped?’ The chip on Loaf’s shoulder asked, by his pad, the wretched whore stood aghast.

Near them, only John and that Horned-Lurid seemed but troubled, of what, what little after. Naught was said.

One approached the note, it oozed, and wall was suddenly surrounded, for every and on top of every facet they could stand on top of, for every moment they could think or look around, two eyes, three, hundreds of them, even those that were encased, drawn to notice, none were there. Painted bubbles of red light gave one that impression, especially when under stress. And there was, at last, highly uneven, as there was, a high stress factor that would not impress no man, nor voice whose bounced upon, and wretched haze, a miasma of many dances, the spirits were there. For what eternity could be complete? What specters were they if not appointed to their musky seethe, as if in flaunter, taunting them again and again after, not to allow a moment of respite or reposition themselves; yet, as soon as a note was touched, by that wretched Loaf, whose head was yet to be heaved off despite the wane, and such remains as there were oft little spoken of:

A tunnel was formed, but not a normal one, a metal-concubine of iron, like eighteen finely placed cargo-ships, belonging to a vaulted space, from out of which, and out of after, escape was nothing given to embrace. It was a trap out of which no soul could possibly escape, being parted, but not entirely, contorted and yanked, sewed off then stitched, with alloy to their mouths. It was still the main room that walked, and walled, and kept life shoved in every wall.

As soon as a few steps were made, what had been noticed was the width of this concave, since both John Trunk and the Lurid were capable of fully traversing without paying the littlest of difficulty one could pay. Or heed to such acidity as one would have himself encompassed, then dead, there came a time. For a few soldiers or something that looked closed enough to their appearance as to have them taken, out then tried.

Tall men armored, of high stature, such were they adorned. With many uncanny devices, attached to them, that were just as wide, cysted, worn like flags, three-pointed as for the main mass, galvanizing as to see, what shrubbery would contort such tree, as to look like this molded-by-hands and grubby fingers as well three-triangled star, with two ellipses empty, deepening as they almost tore the entire organic structure from inside out, without leaving the least of a chance for it to escape, for anything even remotely alchemical, therefore they revealed as well, once they stepped out of the shadows. Gray-everywhere, painted even but mostly rust, a few crates in the distance and many other moving devices, wagons and such. Many heads, all of them, all masked but humanoids, by all means, producing some kind of weird air at the top of their heels, the second ones; worn like backpacks, but not theirs, bloody down there, trails being formed but no blood strained the floor. One presented himself but said nothing:

‘I’ve come to ask you to follow.’

Another machine deciphered some weird grumbles for him. It was a most strange thing how he ripped himself off, from the mid-riff and welcomed, openly, John of all to enter the left there to enter, lower side of the suit, left behind. No meaty organisms. It was a maligned splendor to ask about the Colony or what went through their heads. Or what to take or make of them, whenever asked, when plenty was clearly ahead:

An open table moved with metal rams, put on ramps and hybridized then broken apart as to form strange worming-iron structures upon which they crawled forever. An eye of alloy sunken in the otter-sounding tetter; yet not a single one of them delighted in the noise of hearing the echoes of torture, in the distance, while victims were still toyed with. In a fashion that would be deemed as being beyond disgusting, beyond wretched, to a point where there was no possible explanation for what was going on here as to properly endow one with thinking is as being anything else than what it sounded like. A furtive fullness:

‘All of them are being fed, this is a banquet after all, and there can be no better day to look at what’s been going on across the world, since we’ve made sure to put them all under stasis.’

‘How did you do it?’

‘Ice spears shot through their heads, wriggling their spines, but without hurting them.’

‘Why are they not dead then? Surely this must be some utterly ethereal excuse, surely this profuse thing must be a lie of some sorts, is it not? They’re dead, humanity is, other than.’

Tits-tits seemed to be reaching a point where she cowered down again, being trumped by all that weight she had to deal with, being no easy thing to deal with the amassing weight and the entirety of everything that was inside of her, which in turn was impossible to satiate, that saddened her beyond belief, though it could not be shown, as well as her telepathy, which was malfunctioning. Good riddance to the voiceless whore, no one should hear less intoned with going after each other’s throat soon after. Such was the way she spoke, in a most rage-inducing thing, through which, hearing it would bring one less to no hope. Eternity- worthless, but comfortable, - proven by every specter that was in sight:

‘We’ve converted ice in a soulless rocky sun as well, and filled it with them.’

‘Which would make them dead, killed and slain, as I have initially purported them to be.’

‘Not entirely, and that would mean that under no circumstance could any of these specters return to life, although, if you were to wait for a moment, and one alone, I would say as such, look elsewhere for reason, as you will not only not find any here, or anywhere as a matter of fact, but you will be finely disappointed by what you shall entail, to, and as such, when you’re finally met by some resistance, as you should know, despite every single one of them being in the state they are, not a single soulless body would rip itself to shreds as to stop fighting, now, death would have no say in this, regardless of what you may have heard, but if there’s one thing.’

He mourned but less, and out, in the distance, there was still a terrace, something to be called; perhaps some disgusting thing that would have one stomach turn, but one indeed, that wasn’t tried for. A giant one, of bloated face, hardly a matter of a body thing, since it bore, four sleigh-claspers, on both sides, rounded and made to be put together, like the rib-cage of a man, but locked in the middle and allowed to respire of bearing through in, the middle, held by chains, and a system of elevators that were put inside a single building that had heaved itself around, forming a hurricane of clouds, panting, from all the air-incessant reactionless that was put behind and around it, soon enough a Molotov cocktail, but of a radioactive pool extraction, being sufficient enough for a few men, that would play with it around some camp, wonderingly, dancing, all eyes were now pulled, since they went missing, in this camp, of fools. Poisoned by the radioactive rancid pool, he danced, the man who opened his chest, where there stood the nuclear bomb, yet he refused to arm it, since it was joined by a few others, not tools, but some longer beings, some thing, almost elfish- eely around their faces and made to squirm around, fingerless but made entirely of fluid inside. They fed on radiation, soon enough. Men, the men who had died there, felt fine, for it was not the bomb, the ulcers or everything else, of naught, come through chasm, to be taken and plain as it were, given onto them, to allow a moment of respite and to smoke.

One of them pulled a pack. IT was rare, seeing one of them and being incapable of discerning this from that, but it felt fine, in some way, lighting it, knowing that the flame could leap from here, there, perhaps over there, and into that creature's open 'gut', 'bullshit', he was all metal inside; some kind of Governmental-reject, but not a complete failure in terms of being an experiment, and for that reason, it survived for this long as it was allowed to do as it pleased, to walk whenever there was such a thing as a reason, then, pop, whenever he liked. Taking a good chunk of the world with him, in and out, of dark fruition, they sang as they ate poisoned berries, ten danced around the camp's rendition, with every little vision, hope but sank. More and more had it been deformed, and at an all time high, and everywhere around, teeth and incisor sank, and a mound of disease stooped on top. It was what they fancied most, thinking of, that they would be taken for granted, then thrown around, as if in a pit of lions, eaten, instead of being granted some kind of rope to end it quickly, before their contrivances could arrive at any moment's respite and encase all that would be had, and left alone:

'I see that there's a fire started, in the distance, one that's been producing gas ever since.'

'Think you'll find it there? I think I know what you've been trying to look for, all this time we suspected you a traitorous creature or some hopeless thing poignant that would betoken us stolen, then delivered out of life, but here you are with us to such an end's decay, that you would find us relaxing nonetheless, thinking of you as a dear brother, of whom we would count none other, such's the cast of the dice. I say.'

'And yet, there are still people out there left and allowed to suffer in such ways that I am left and allow to take breath, whenever pleases me still, while taking jabs at their likes.'

'Nonsense, you would not hurt a fly, nor would you cast them away, as the smell, is, is to.'

Their voices were cut short; but the atomic pollution was not, it seeped unevenly after that and even appeared to be producing something their bold heads, the tall ones weren't incapable of distinguishing just yet from what they were producing and for a good reason at that. It was an observation, a prolonged one as if by satellites, but neither one was true, yet in turn, they were wretched, two of them, conjoined, like gods. Beyond them, twins even by the looks of it, connected to a point where there could be no possible explanation but them, them being responsible for the evil that now scourged in the world as well. They both formed, although connected, two crucifixes made out of two elongated 'flat-earth' oblongs that were intersected, although one of them was entirely cast in umbrage, as if he were a black hole instead, oozing with dark, outlined even in space by some power that made it, somehow, distinguishable, even from the void they had both been drawn out of. Although it would be unfair to say, that there four oblongs since there were only three, as the horizontally portrayed, belonging to the dark-holed one, whose wretchedness, along the way, had been fully absorbed by that flat- red thing, rimmed and trimmed with some yellowish-green gelatin that smoldered even in sight. Two pseudo faces stood, one too dark to see, but the other, just as red, contorted and connectedly grown, like a fluid-filled upper half of a cranium, made alike to a tribalistic mask, with only two ugly green blobs for eyes, beneath which broken, as if shattered even between the two intersecting oblongs, the main ones belonging to it, these red planets covered with green pus, stood a rotten hole, filled with bones, curdles red, and white steam-hardened then grown like foam or pudgy cream instead. And its dark void of a brother rested conjoined on its left rounded 'wing', being constantly fed that steam, or ashen tray, the bones and the other formations inside this open vault, this broken safe, despite never disappearing forever, while being eternally drawn inside. They were tall and almost looked like cocoons, with sarcophagi humanoid screamingly malnourished heads. Constantly in pray, in dire attempt to draw away whatever they could, from out their minds before they could open the rift through space and time and take leave whenever pleasing:

A note followed in the halls, being adorned around a molting hand that fell apart, with every constant moment spraying a candle-wax's worth of spool. A wretched little thing he was, with two faces, cut, dry-, it wet itself with some of the rust that drooped on top his head, and almost soothed itself to sleep as if readied to die.

'A note, a note, it's been brought from somewhere in the distance, a telegram from above! For someone called Loaf.'

'Would that simply be me?'

'Is there another Loaf around?'

'I would argue that indeed there is, not that there's still but sublime, a reason not to have its head taken out but I've seen it.'

It, not him, the other loaf, of many hands and elongated swoons that came together just plain there, it would've made no difference for either one of them, but they knew where he hid. A colony does keep track of another, and that beast, as thoroughly beaten on the head, saw-n-foot, that came hand in hand, without a brother to be strung, without connections, yet he wrung.

'Soon they will waken themselves from the stasis, and what solemn thing will it be. To have it cherished in arrogance, to have them still distraught and have their bodies walk, hand-in-hand without arms.'

But there was none to listen.

Note:

First, a safe area where to read it; he asked for as much, a door was presented afterwards, near them, an entry into the side of the wall. It was an unorthodox way of welding their way in, clumsily wearing each other out as they dreaded not a second more, no less than was needed, then the machines were welcome to take a hike, and went away.

'You will find a padded area, a bubble-growth in front of it, a wing-formation-cushion Ottoman, and the opposite to it, a tank's elongated rifle-shot. All of them plain to be gone by the time the bubble-grows then pops. It's standard procedure, you know?'

‘I’m aware of it now.’

Tits-tits would’ve followed, but there was something about the way they looked at her, daggers of rudeness being exchanged, unsheathed with smoldering rage.

Regarding one of the gardens.

Will be needed to make a return to one of them, then plant, plant, plant, plant, as many buds and seeds as you can wrap your hands around then wait; a great tree will come, and he will be plain, bearing jewels of Dina, taken out, then spread away, made to suffer, out her way. But she will by then have become corporeal to such a level that she could be thrown in the mix and suffer. What you must do soon enough and after is, make her, freeze the wine, put her back, piece by piece, limb for limb, until she’s made again, then eaten, as out of a cone, then endure, the pain of her trying to escape, until she will have finally become vapors inside your gutted train. It has to be done, it has to be done, it has to be done for, and lived through, otherwise, suffered.

It went into detail as to attest to the shortest, most insignificant of structural changes that had been made to seem as if there was a reason for them drawing in. The Garden had been spoiled, dirtied. Made irreparable, wheround the many pots whose on-lain, by and near each one of them’s sightless wonders, hid the little headers, that had been deactivated and ensured as to remain so, during their disablement, completely aware to their surroundings, recording as much as nothing, or at the very least nothing other than the passive insects whom were just as disabled as they were, albeit at a functionally deficient, yet organic level, as opposed to the latent alternative. Since all of their energy had been completely diverted onto their ocular-probes. Whose mere alleviation of ‘stress’, expressed as some toxic fumes slowly began tearing apart the garden’s lower sustaining beams, pillars and various other metal endocrinal extremities, whereunto one was thrust, the man wearing a disguise had stumbled on hinge legs, trying to sabotage the already ruined system, incapable of knowing or discerning whether or not what he was doing was wrong. ‘Some auxiliary gauges are broken.’ Among other kincknittery of low or no importance whatsoever; there was some uneasiness that was brooding in the air. Ever since the garden fell on top the other, slowly being lowered down as if by the much beloved arms of a crane, cranked up with all the power; until it fell through the ceiling, the eight floor’s front side- where the room was located, placed in a cup of a curve, where a few statues had long adorned the front-shed before the fall. It was a nuisance but one that was accepted as needed. A wrathfulness followed soon after, especially since it descended through the reprimand; light had been shot out. A riot, it was a riot that destroyed the garden.

Led by none other than an eyeless, but Cyclops in countenance, and bodily functions, with a few arms but without legs:

‘March on, march on and destroy everything in your sight and everything you can. Inflict as much damage and abuse as you can, and don’t forget that they will forget everything as soon as they wake up, so make sure you knock them unconscious if you can.’

Borshc began running with one of his power hammer, breaking through one of the garden apartments. It was midnight and the couple was sleeping. Disturbed, he leaped on top their beds, forcing them awake, while pointing, pointing, hammer lowered, down:

‘I am going to smash your dumb whore’s mouth split open, fucker!’

But the man was just as shocked as she was, especially since Borsch took a head start in testing his strength, hitting the bell as it shot back against the wall, well-received, dead.

‘You killed her! You killed my wife!’

‘A perfunctory check had to be made.’

‘What does the analysis say?’

Her head had been puffed out by smoke-smoke, smoky, flat. Her tender breasts were too flat for her to be allowed the respite of being allowed living for long, it was a beauty of which gauge could plant. The bomb-device hidden inside of them; all mighty and deformed, a history of paranoia and obsession with her, as well as toying out, through the Garden’s ‘loins’.

Ten days earlier, before the massacre of a single person.

‘Tits-Tits, check-in, now, woman!’

‘I am, give me a moment, I need to brush my hair, like us, ‘humanoid-females’’ do.’

She was infested, possessed, poisoned and all the rest, all of those things that would bring a woman, a female-wretch to a supreme-dreadful inquiry of destructions alleged then made plain for every single man to see or uncover it either way.

That woman was nowhere to be seen, which was senseless if one fenced with the thought and nothing more, the impression that was being lend onto him, that he was still alone there being completely befuddled. Since the note-keeping panel was impossible to decipher upon the point where it simply hit some diminishing returns that made the entire thing unreadable, that is to say, the entire panel was something of a noose, what’s it become. And there was only enough space for one single throat to be put inside of, no more and no less than it was required, to whose benevolence was something hardly to be excused from one point to another, whenever needed or to ask whether or not there was some brotherly embrace, left here or there, nearing as one would digest them. The lot to which they belonged, the men that appeared, wore themselves ever-so-severely as to push it, push it to the point of everything being unacceptable, viciously so.

One of the wretched birds of paradise had accompanied them along the rue’ of soundless morgues, that were on-lain in the distance. It wriggled in a most incessant manner, its ‘feathers’-fat, dangling around but as fat as tunnels, long-exposed as well, as to lend enough space for someone to climb in if they wanted to do so. Whereas the chest, a rotated torso-human like that held, many centipede-like wriggling tubes that threw themselves all over, back and forth and then. A lunging head on both ends, adding to a bulk that pushed on and off every few meter or so, then forced itself back into it, trying to snuff out a single bolt.

It drew nearer and nearer then came to a stop.

‘I remember you, giant one, that’s come from the broken apart lands, indeed I do!’

‘It’s not going to be an easy thing, you know?’

A memory –inscrutable:

‘It’s not going to be an easy thing, trying to put this back together, right? You understand that, right? I’m trying to help you here, so, how about you simply make it easier onto yourself, and.

Try pulling yourself out of it, since the lower piece is fused, practically to your lower body and lowering it means, you know, it means that so will the other side of your body once it turns around and hits in full throttle!’

‘Then try getting it right the first time, I don’t like it when I’m being messed with and you know that!’

It’s all obscure past a point. Harder to see than anything, but it’s not obscured by mist. Large ovals of gray, beads all put together, coming together than falling apart as soon as someone’s passed through, already gone. And there’s as little to do with as they’ve felt around, thinking themselves untouchable, pure and almost ill-disabled.

Globe of Eye

Some carbon fillings made most if not all its bulk. They moved out of his peripheral, then came back to him in short motions of leap-like bull-frog gauges. A door got slammed upon, hitting the side of the wall, shaking of some of the collected coins he held on top the wooden rafts, the airless sea being moved at last while some of the gas that made the room prior to it being opened then inscrutably started popping with two or three consecutive puffs that were forgotten soon after seeing the length of the fingers that curled around the knob, the handle, the lock, the frame of the door, as well as its outline, which had been only formed, eerily so, for a few moments, before completely vanishing altogether.

‘There’s something in there; they’re hiding it behind closed pads. Would you happen to know where the key is?’

The man, the man that entered, the man, the man was, something else. Unlike jittery bolts that appeared to clearly be there, not inside of him, but instead of his joints, instead of his ankles, between his forearms and arms, like bubbles, or transparent balloons inside of which long iron bolts kept rotating inside of, yet they didn’t fall off. Neither his limbs nor the screws; well-enough, they appeared to have four great eyes where the screwdrivers would normally be inserted in. But most importantly, he had been bled out. His sockets were empty. But mouth projected in the front, in an oyster-fan like manner-of wild gizmos and devices, forming an arch, forming a ‘platform’ that was chitinous on the top, but clearly elongatedly filled with wires and other kinds of unnatural things, long talon bearing, chalk-scratchers, like a trunk-bore front with this arc, this semi-circle in the front that he could barely keep from falling off his face and the side of his bodily-strange yet confusedly-inducing tumoresque spores he appeared to produce with the help of it – organ, that pumped out of his back, a livid-backpack that kept pumping and growing. Other than that, he was normally dressed, casually even, for an evening night. With the exception of the patterns that were clearly wrapped around most of the sides of his body, large antlers-veins of lines that held, every few centimeters distant from one another – doors with faces on them for knockers and appendages on every side that extended as they were solid, with smaller heads coming out of them that were akin to glass-made light shards-holding light bulbs. One of his hands fell off and a metal coil drew out of him. AN imperfect coil, flat at its end; with words embed on the flat surface, out of which, as they were depressed enough for blood or some stranger liquid to fall off, there was definitely no way to tell whether or not it had been contaminated at all, or who was in charge of this ugly, disgustingly deformed thing behind it, since they, the wretched men that were hiding in the back, the tall, anchor-tall on top the ships of cement that formed this chaotic place, this maze but not a maze, this hedge of hills but no mounts could be see, a sea of sparrow storms of lightning being struck atop the mountain home of verdure cast away by winds of sea-way chants forgotten as the sounds of the call-back grunts were left and allowed no longer for interpretation to be had, in time, and wretchedness aligned to the bolted gut contortionists in the images that would soon enough be revealed, on the walls, carved like statues, of whose lackluster appeal could belong to no other kind of imagery than that of maligned sacrifice, a warning, a sign, something of the wretchedly benign, left there to spare and drive away only those who'd fear the magnanimous, and the fool, the peaceful respite carried in by being incapable of feeling the warmth mankind was ill to be known of carrying with itself, being now projected against some globe of evil- set in waiting overdue. Soon benign, they were no longer screws but revealed upon sight obscure. Worms maligned, that wriggled within, that had crawled and stolen, the sight, and taken them for tokens, left forever blindingly in charge and waste. Whoever were the men in any case?

See-through pillars filled with bubbles; but not a single drop of liquid-water in; they ventured through the ticket, and out of the few rows, some corporeal people came out of the pillars; barely visible, barely makeable out of the companion frames they brought out alongside them.

‘Whether or not they can be distinguished freely by eye alone, I would not put all my trust in a simpleton’s plastic container of a bottled peck; yours is ruined and there are people out there missing one as well because of you!’

Ringer approached, apprehended by the lack of interest she disdained to show.

‘I’ve been trying to get to you for a while now, please call me back.’

Four am:

‘Hey there, I keep trying to reach you but I’m almost always out of luck and I don’t know what’s going on so I’m about to hit you within the hour, don’t call back!’

Four fifteen am:

‘On second thought, I changed my mind, please answer me, I really need you, or else, I’m going to violently rape you, when I catch you, you’re dead, you hear? Dumb fucking bimbo, I love you, please, please, please answer me, I seriously need to hear from you!’

A missile:

‘I’ve thermo located you somewhere within the fifth Avenue and the Fourth of one, on the back street, messing with some of the dogs I keep trying to beat; I’ll ensure you don’t make it out alive unless you call me back this second, babe!’

Too handsome to have charges pressed against him.

‘Knock knock on the door, I’ve delivered something to you off the floor. You’ll find a note with a target on it, babe. I think It’ll shoot your face off the other side of the gulf when your panties get plowed and moist drags itself on my face, baby!’

Answer me, fucking answer me you fucking dumb-cunt! I need you to answer me immediately, you fucking nigger with tits!’

A lunatic, it’s all that he was, an unapologetic fucked-up in the head lunatic with barely any cocked eye left for him to spare around, and with a wig by the brow, taken for a fool with. A giant moon-formed scythe of meaty mass impaled on a pillar made out of stacked stones, many of whom were partially chiseled by the looks of it, with eggshell crags of stone throwing themselves against it; with whips of flour bodied servants of the bleed bowing at it constantly. He had been one of them before breaking free of the fallen meaty-moon’s control. It had taken a long, long time to see it for what it was; unlike the real moon, it had been only a space creature entirely driven by pain for pain alone kept it alive, and pain alone allowed for it to regenerate from nothingness unless prevented from self-harm; an immortal that fell one day and remained in this spot for years, yearning for release; a red banana, spoil of meat.’

‘Shall we begin this dance again, my dear?’

Shall you come outside and pay for fear?’

He left a message, this time close. Every light in the neighborhood shone down before fading, not a single soul throttled, but lest of crown and jest of whore; there would be a bitch no more!

Most lousy a truncheon!’

A shaking house

‘There goes the last apartment, you crude defiled insignificant little pest!’

A bloated body-bag thick bowling pin, body-beam, with a humanoid moutish thing bearing a small puckery vortex inside of it that were its eye; a giant appendage like backward pointing mantis blade was its horn; slimy skin kept falling on the floor. Almost a specter of a figure as it were, this creature was responsible for all the deaths inside the motel, and it showed little to no regard for what it has done. Let alone that, as it would be cruel otherwise, there was no simple way to get rid of it now, since it had tasted blood again. A bloated uneven leech, an elongated pear, a cartilage of tawny, bringing not as much joy as it would bring a tear to everyone’s withheld, travesty, to no end!’

‘Listen, listen, will you please, you and the other man are the last two that live. Unfortunately for you, I may not leave until I’m done tearing you apart.’

It twisted and flung its blade, spun around but missed again!’

‘Damn you, villainous beast! Will you simply just stop?’

‘Upon one condition, nothing more; you choose to die, and therefore gone, I shall be to folly!’

‘What of the other man?’

‘I shall find the means to cause some accident, no matter the cause, he shall be the one to fall last!’

‘I seek some kind of perdition, if must. I should not be met by such unfairness, for my cause is just!’

‘And what would one like you loathe to hear?’

‘Not as much as but no man would do, year a promise to endear, a sole night!’

‘And of the incompetence of that which had been brought?’

‘I shall mention it to no one!’”

Though the devil had already slipped, hasn’t he? Dumb buffoon you are, you’re showing too much emotion and if I will it, I will eventually get the better of you, you’ll see it now!’

‘Has something been spoken?’

‘Not unprovoked, yet there’s a time I would abhor to look around, at the, at the...’

He took a moment, such reprieve. So many candle-like shapes, they proved to be. Dangerous, too dangerous, a marvel lasted of how there’s such, never been a fire to begin with, alas, it’s been months since they were first lighted; and still as how one would find himself delighted into looking into them again, this was something he could not hold dearly, yet prevailed in it.

Wretched aberration, room twenty second, wretched god; it rotted but grew and came into the world and there it stood at last. Only one of its marvelous head-pieces survived, whereas the others had been smothered with so much strength that one could just forget the pain they went trying to pull them back to life during the wail in which not a soul would find it soothing as to listen what was going on. A strange room but fairly plump, there was nothing out of the ordinary about it, not that it mattered, yet there was something which was flung. Fifteen minutes off the chain, fifteen minutes, there remained. And a strange man’s jest had only left some legless trap in one of the linoleum beds, inside of which no matter the cost, no matter the travail, there was but a single bother, that was, his full growth was impeded by a car. It’s been driven through one of the walls, in some ancient attempts, the driver was all bones, to suicide, must’ve been years at the very least. But this beast already had two legs, and some large fifteen meters thick, three of them, coming out of where a humanoid shoulder would be placed, though armless on that side, fleshy bars that granted its survival immobility for the time-being. Many heads dead, all of them blown with tar and crudely painted in some insulin-straw, burnt as if on a field, some speary flaccid things- like flag-poles beings carried as they allowed for some accommodation for the split in many hairs, broom-like –what remained, of his other arm to attempt re-growth after being splintered in so many fragments; it receded and laughed. There was no hope killing it, not would there be an attempt at all.

An echo would return once more, for what was worth and therefore come and gone, until the likens of a similar day, to the likens of each passing reign:

‘Beneath this house there lay hundreds of dead lynched niggers of the most butchered kinds! We’ve ensured that their swollen taken out globules of puffy eyes were cleanly disposed of, as was what has remained of them shall no longer trouble the lands. As these filthy sub-human animals, these nigger-beings are only to be hold accountable once in their eternal damned refugary of niggerishness where they're to rot for just as long as they've been lynched, by rope of steel and cast along a downward spiral where the burning pyres and the smoke, the un-resting blasphemous globes and what remains of them shall only be cast into that anciently gotten, rotten putrid abode of teeth where they're to be impaled and felt of ill; thrown all around, and lay to seethe, knowingly aware that they have always been incapable of making it past the heap their in-humanity fated them to be delivered onto the plains of.'

For wretched are the niggers now; lain across the plains beneath the ground, among similar things of kin and ilk. More deformed, leprous and abhorrent and more so than any other beast that may have ever tried inheriting the plains of the Earth, wretches that clung upon each other's bodies whose only hope was only to grasp on one another, drag, climb and hike upon something of the likes. But never able to properly endure, never capable of turning the tables around, straight into the obscure; it would take a long, long while until that could happen again. And for some reason or another, there it was. A reason to behold:

'Grains of sand, and madly were they wrung out of a stone of atonement I would've wished cast upon them to bring such ruin as anyone would have it chiseled into a wretched symbol of my name; kindled with such an eerie sight, frightened by a name that would have each breath taken for what's it worth, taken in front of the light and sworn to worship! I call upon you as a demagogue or host; I provoke such contemplation as one would have it at his worst!

Cast such as might alone could will it as to be allowed continuation if such's the case!'

'But what's down there?'

Asked a man with a crackle of a laughter; a crackling wonder that would spill no ill; mischievous in such appeal, as to forget himself for a moment before behind joined by other men that were just as curious as he was. Not for some reason, not for another. Fifty or so men came around and stood around each other, dirty swivel in hand, and rusty spade; many more, there as well, but all singing in unfashionable ways. All too obscure and hidden, like niggers trying to run away from an orchard they stole chicken from, criminals running along the way.

Thermal waters have little say in what's to come, and just as little, little more now; nor to comb what is to say, that will do but more along the way than any single puffer of spill! Pleasurable as it might be, there needs to be a stop. Someone needs to put a stop to this addiction before it brought out the worst in man and the worst of all around!

'Think pity's a bath soap one can't do without if such's the day.'

'I am of a loft not to ask.'

'What has countenance done so far?'

'Naught that wouldn't do as fair!'

'Fair? Fair, you wretch, you wouldn't know fair if chanced upon your luck and brow, you little petty!'
Knock.

‘My dear man, but you’ve got me at unawares. Your intrusion has only been remarked solely on the basis of.’

‘I am weary of company, leave with utmost immediacy!’

A towering stalagmite-shaped throat held a pseudo-appendaged fleshy downward-pointing beak attached to a small almost humanoid torso that bore a single elephant fat club of a foot; one winged by two almost split-razors held together by worming things that were lodged into both of them; drooping, but nigh-rotten butterfly- esque in appearance. It cast upon them a most terrible cry that echoed immediately throughout the damp halls; without ever-so slightly bothering itself with the lower men and the beaten on the head savages that tried worshipping them, creating their sullen idol out of whatever they could get their hands on, nearing the dark arrival of light that was being brought in from outside.

‘A rotten torch, don’t bring it nearer, for you shall set our dark altar on fire before we get a chance to raise it forth!’

‘You leprous thing, don’t bother trying to push me away or delay my stay, with this holy thing of light, that’s been brought onto me by some of the benefactors I’m still inclined to keep the whereabouts unknown to yee, since you, of untrustworthy lot, are something I would never entrench my mind to have begotten still, to have them of a minded ill! I ask for no approval and do what I must!’

‘If you continue on this path alone, know that there shall be now way to return to the days we could hold each other’s eye to eye, cross-inclined, or hear voice that might endure the passing of time! You wretched, spoiled, selfish, nut! You shall bring only pain and suffering upon us all unless you’re to repent and cast that flame away! The symbol of your treachery shall pale when the winds shall blow!’

‘And if they do then I shall have another, then another, until the flame is to become my brother.’

But the man simply stepped in front of him and blew the flame with a breath.

‘From this point on, you shall only use these stones of light, no more flames and no more warmth, there’s a lot of graven gas-release chambers from beneath and if you play too much with it.’

‘I am no stranger to the danger bringing explosives down the mines. But, I’m still equipped with many, as you can verily see now!’

‘Madman, you brought tnt in our sacred place?’

‘Of course I did, I do not dare come unprepared!’

He wore himself, as the stones revealed the silky-after slither of a snake. But he himself wore himself, of petty prattle, such despair.

‘We have piled up our dead on top of one of the cranes, will you see to it that the wretch is bathed?’

‘I shall!’

With which they had invited him to come thus forth. Walking crudely, although it was a mightily cruel thing to hope he would see again, blinded by the consternation that followed after, incapable and unable to appease what treachery had been passed through and over, spill of blood. Unruly and there, clad of clamour to eat from the animals, they leaped on top the crude-platform on top of which the crane lowered the pool beast hooligan. A fatter morsel of meat there couldn't have been. A seal-elephant mass in fat, almost eyeless but filled with tails that attached themselves to it, elongated fish-parasites, who had already started the devouring, mocking awry with beaks that stuck out from inside of it like hooks, but that revealed no viscera nor any blood. They drank it all, replacing it with water and that could be seen now, dripping away by the solace of taps that were used by men who were agape. Thirst was something they had to deal with. But, lo, did they drive away like a stole of cherubs when seeing all the dynamite Fellon carried.

'Blasted damn you be by your God, Fellon, you wretch, you're going to topple this whole place down with that charge!'

'I know I will, but that's something I cannot help, unruly so, truly you must know the reason behind it, so!'

'We won't kill you, dumb fool!'

But he didn't promise to return the favour! It was far too dangerous, but off to pass.

Sixth

Somewhere beneath the Isles, a system of rails appeared to have drawn forth out of its hiding, latching on the pillars as the ones that were being fed started pulsating their fleshy globy hearts, forming a dark constellation while the frame of elongating pillars that had been spearing the Isle, holding it above the sea-level while steam started amassing in its place, the water that had reached the “shore-line” connecting it now dissipated entirely from end to end; a dark constellation that pulsated as this maw of a raised falchion allowed for the victims to be lowered in. No train-calamity had been prepared, yet the rails served another purpose. For out of them, as it was no iron that made their constitutional entirety, but a manifold of many, unnaturally hard to break, impossibly-repelled tiny tainted atoms that started forming strange foamy prisons they were put in. Trapped, but kept in slumber, kept alive. Perhaps for years, perhaps for eternities or beyond it, incapable of fully being allowed to draw breath once again, now that they were connected to the tubes. One of the greater machine, after having phased through the solid material began pouring pure-rubber-like liquefaction made out of many connectors that searched for flaws, for un-airtight, molecule-atom sized hole they could push through, subsequently filling them; grabbing a hold of the men while they were being dragged down. This great machine was but a spherical-object implanted into a house-like horizontally building, hellish-pounded structure with clasper bands enveloping it that formed ridges, giving it the impression of spine, yet, it only looked like some machine outside, for inside, it was fleshy, a living being that hid inside its tomb, tricking other-living passer-by's that it was but a preservation fridge-with a giant mold-battery, holding the cocoons alive, while in reality, they died the moment they made contact with it. Inside the dead ‘chambers’, it began spreading it growing fetusi-startlingly in growth beings. As soon as one implanting procedure was done, the dangling whiplash that followed soon after cast its many sons and daughters through the bowels of the earth, that had long been cured of dirt, empty atom-mud had it become, allowing endless flight after. In the distance there laid a small citadel where a man by the name of Hector, who'd been fed upon yet survived appeared to have awoken inside of; which from the outside, albeit missed, and struck-mid-flight in refractory levitation by curving invisibly-undulating UV-light beam rays to its own accord, could be seen as some ugly profile viewed on one side almost humanoid head, with a comical face, eyeless of course since the similarity was superficial, but long nosed, without bulbs and more of an uglier triangular shaped that united with the mouth, a chinless repulsive thing that appeared to be chitinous in its entirety, with an extremely rounded forehead that over-passed the downward, drooping, pointing chin that appeared like a small bump, might've been only partially aligned if there was an eye, most of this mass would've ended behind it by all means, otherwise, the entire-shape cluster above it gave the impression of a giant, extremely wide spear that had been cracked in half, or a beak that connected itself to this almost perfectly long-squarish knife of a lip, which had a big of a jerky sag behind and below it, where it gradually descended, backwardly as well, into the “chin”-lump. Above the forehead, that had been separated from the “nose” by a pseudo hook-depression, while it was the size of a ball and it was protruding forward despite its awkward angle, it didn't prevent ‘this’ if it was a ‘this’ from happening, since there was a crater-depression that gave it a weird crust-appearance at the top, angling inwardly and behind at this unnaturally sharp a tilted point, but, this crust, on the opposite end, what could be referred to as both the back and the top of a man's head, drew like a pudding a mound, reasonably high, that bore an almost long-thin mushroom-growth on top of, like some fleshy thing or some cloud, but more of a button than anything else, or a pseudo pill-elliptical tiny disk. The body of this citadel was not complex, for it one was to stare, for a prolonged period of time at it, he would connect the 'forehead' formation, taking it for the backside of this strange structure, to the entirety downward-tilted at an angle, body of a steam-locomotive behemoth that stuck out as if trying to burst or escape from inside of it. Directly opposite to the forehead was a large, elongated, fat nigh-zeppelin-like bulb-ish of an oblong, from beneath of there being the strange locomotive-blade usually found beneath it. Like some submarine-growth with an underside-pincer-clasping metal protector, which drew backwards into a large-fat, down-drooping "leg" without a foot at its end, but fat, tidy, an incomplete devoid-of-pincers awkwardly –seemingly an incomplete tube instead. In front of it, or in the middle-region of the being there being the last recognizable piece of a growth, that drew the entirety of the being as a second pudding-mound, descending into a small fleshy thin-finger with a few ridges-tape worm dangling a hose thing. Alas, most of it was made of an unrecognizable substance that was found nowhere near the Earth, yet found itself here, standing, eerily in a most primitive or the worst conditions to've have found yourself in, having another primitive stored inside of.

'Come in, you've been waited for, Hector!'

'Goodness me, I think I'll be late for the passing.'

'Think you'll have to buy another thicket then, it doesn't bode well letting them wait.'

'I truly think so, isn't that quaint?'

'Where's the sun stroke coming from, is what you're asking for?'

'No.'

Four more Hectors came out of a hut. It was a modern creation with a few pumping-wheels by its side, born-inside them tendon-shape tinier bulbs appeared to form large balloon-beam-worn formations that leaped out in sight by the hundreds. Food was being stored and constantly ejected out of them; lowered, slowly-like some ugly sand-bags that started munching on one another's backs and insides of while they pushed down, lowering meter by meter until some men opened-cut fruit sliced, then out of their rhombus-slices, which were filled with peculiar angular spine-spikes, all bearing syringe-holes inside of, they started drawing in the food-particles inside of them by wind-throttle.

'I believe this bridge's been built fifty years ago by hyenas that would have my gut if they knew I spent most of my time spitting graffiti-dirt of raw-sienna honey-blight wherever I could find a place to have my foot imprinted on top off. Not to get too violent now, for I know that look in your eyes and what it entails. What's the matter? Have you not seen men without face, again?'

'Long before.'

Hector approached the man with little in mind or minded of his safety as he chose not to do something that would have him fall before him with his weakened knees found twisted in a coil-formation out of which, oatmeal baths would allow pigs to eat out of and run in circles after that out of the jolting joviality of joy that was being propagated by them in an attempt to spread this joviality of never-spoken of, tender, loathsome, large spiraling, nigh-corkscrew but web-orbed spun –chiseled in these drooping pincer-at-their-ends-bearing-in-the-hundreds-like-blooming-flowers, fat covetous frames of the width of large cars seen side-ways, living Curators that were their masters; were repelled by. For the pigs-beings, they were but giant flat-blobs of meat sprouting out of the sides of men as ticks, that were come in the hundreds as well, leaping around whenever they could pull themselves, only to spit on the face of the poor lad, who was desperate to hear about.

‘It’s the side of the Ark, the Armistice began somewhere, sometime, five years ago, the first years of rejection following the battle of the Numb!’

Many people had died in it, and they considered flinging themselves into one of the many nigh-empty holes that awaited them to be cast in and be en-wrapped in foil that would cut them, piece by piece.

There had been secrets whose unreceived glamour had crusted some of the left-over greater animals, many now swaying back and forth, armed to their teeth and pointing, incisor-thrust behind and plenty-rottenly unkind there being on the plain, somewhere around twenty or sixty of them, all trying to get a word in:

‘He’s been brought here to be cut, was he not let known?’

‘Shh, he’s cradling a nuisance bobbling with ardor flowing, we’ve been giving him, aloof, plenty to’ve stumped a harder groom, that of a twicer-sized his fat and blob-liter’ yet he’s still walking, somehow, bothersome titter!’

‘Knock him down then, certainly he won’t remember if done, performed, most finely in this state as well as everything that has been said since this point-making and therefore standing, wilt it seethe be-stilled?’

‘Nothing we can do by force, I’m afraid. Unfortunately, he will come no sooner, or come to falter if he’s top be fed, at least you shall not find me willingly denying that he’s a sturdy runt, and brought about and made to crawl when we will have it turned on him and empty cradle, filled with rust, it’s only one of the many we’ve brought to him.’

The tent was filled with most strange-a-form. All trying to gnaw at him by means not even he understood, nor would he attempt to open an eye, since the others tried, little by little, most putrier-benigned.

A strange furloined cat- with a few more coats whose lower-back appeared to draw in a manta-sea-ray with a stinger carpet of a spread bodily-crawling filled with pucker-legs flat, broach of skin. Skimming along on empty feeler it crawled upon. Rolling over, two anchors of bone-formation that swam beneath the ground with large, almost deep-sea-fish-lighter lamps of iron hooks that were the only things that could be made out of them, as their bodies were hid still beneath the earth, kept vibrating as they started prinking the mounds that were formed around them. Large and long, of iron and thunder-superficially yet comically shaped, with sparks coming out of their ends that constantly punished the “feline” beast with the head of a man put inside of, grown out of her chest, which spread with many arms that sprung out in order to stop his own advancement. Those of the lot, who were much braver, or at least from what could be seen, came much closer to him, bringing him the puckers.

‘Have you picked them from yur seeded lot?’

‘We’ve gone cotton-picking with the niggers all summer long, there’s finery and there’s this.’

‘Certainly there’s one- a-miss!’

‘Lest it be-known to you, otherwise.’

A complete and total summer passes by unnoticed by them as if they quickened the pace at which they were observing where all time sh’d gone. In a wink, brick of sad.

Wakened by a rain, the sight it was.

No one was left, saddening as it is to accept, with all accolades finely given to those that had given their lives to it, ruffians, albeit they may be, responsible for it.

‘Pale smirk of low-regard, who’s done it?’

But not a single response came forth, not a single one that would provoke such though-reminiscence of demonstration, the Gaul-truncheon had damned itself with wild-boar-filled with, kill-niggers elongations, all of which were pressed-forth, fumigating in swollen birth.

As one of the tallest, hardest of runts drew forth, none dared challenge him as she drew out of him, ripped apart around her legs which were two boxes with wheels on either side, from the ankles downward, her arms bent backward forming a giant circle. Leaping out of this thing she simply allowed for her head to release itself and grow to the proportions of floating, levitating above the middle of the encircling of her arms, which were united. Alas, the size was magnanimously, that of a Silo- or the base of a -towards the moon launching – Rocket. Whereas the size of her arms were unaccountable by any means; easily tainted, wretchedly distorted, painted, pained and bloated. Large-sun barrels- glowing with flaccid rods of melting-continuously rods, dripping on the floor and into each other’s homing coats –that were like carpets that rose every now and then forming stairway thick, squarish even, formations out of themselves, revealing one another as being the main culprits behind this emolliating rise.

‘You seek the one responsible for killing everything?’

I’m afraid you’ve slept for ages, and this place, this is not where it’s been. Not what it used to.

My dear lad, ignorant in bliss benigned; you’re but in another world, transported by the citadel during its own slumber, for eons that were not known.

Even the man, the wretched king-after, for he is no king, mind you, is not the same as he had been after. He’s been forced to give him life in such exchange, he’s been forced to this rebirth and shallow as his reign might be called, I shall not heed such need to exasperate you with what little mindfulness there is but lain.

Come, join me, and I shall but rip your throttle apart while you squirm!’

‘Wretch, whore of destitute worn and torn apart!’

Hector, of the surviving eight spat on the ground, immediately of a mind to rip her spoils in crown and dart!

An ugly-four men wide and long car, with a flung-around it, spinning as if gravitationally pulled or trapped inside its 'belt' lamp, standing near a large hill-shaped roof-top, connected to a large beamish-sky-shaped tower, unlike a pane, see-able as in a truly voracious flung horizon, many barrels adorning the street where they all were, on every entry, every exit, every single open door, many buildings akin to shoehorns but largely pinto at the top as if drinkable and cut. A crudely large marching-forth, machine with nice contraptions in the back that were all constantly spinning every barrel by elongating and placing them on top, near the area this rider put them in, there laying a single dark basin-pool filled with strange, riding-figures horse-humanoids whose 'hooves', 'arms' and 'legs' were all conjoined, coming together to form traps inside of which men had been and were constantly flung in, watched as they bled on the nicely cleaned floors, by Janitors that lay rotting, near the skyscraper doors.

Upon the trenches, backwardly he groaned while trying in its desperate attempt to put a dent into one of the solace of each runt, ruffian's end. No one around expect the God sent whose alarming nature against whom to have been held prolonged sight upon brought only the most unnervingly stricken down morose responses humbled men striding along-side the adjacent streets against which this unnatural creature had been postulated upon; had any visceral idea about what the reason behind his sudden apparition after having been dormant for almost eleven billion years, now, lain before them, as if he had never-ever come, uninvited, into their sullenly abhorred lives, propagated with the illness of cobble-rot, and empty brought to them, alarmed, swollenly tender-yet tenebrous rancid as he were, a giant stamp-barrel cylinder-of, legless, mass of a base that strode back and forward, that was his true- legs, drew into a thinning as it descended out of itself, metal-beam of a base that drew forward into an eagle's beak that was hunch-backed but forward, downward-pointing and drooping, like some stalactite, or some fat-rancid penguin strapped into a cuboid-prism, bent down, whose outward-pushing mass on top, this being his head, was, haired by a trail-tail of a hair-tail as well, not only animal-like but humanoid, yet connected to the spine-trail that erupted out its back, but was fatter, grew even much fattier, like some sea-ray-part-slug, with the thickness, or in an appearance, after the rail, likened to a faceless shark- which, at its front-ward end, bore, and he was beyond and above the pointing down 'beak', a mass of fleshy 'drills' big, wide, twisted, almost fat-tipped and entirely cemented volcanoes. One main 'drill' protrusion, thick and long as a pointed-tipped tower that fell and now lay quasi-horizontally, but slightly more tilted as if it lay at a far-flung forward thrust edge, end of a cliff, that lay, inside a syringe-inflated balloon almost transparent sea-like pass-through, inside of which, this unnatural thing swam, connected by fleshy see-through tendons that could be seen as the sand-sack bearers, connected to the end of the 'tail' and more than half-way, beyond the 'mid-riff' of the spine, downward, slightly more beneath than one would be accustomed to, near this almost fat pillar on top of which a statue might be put on top of; the beakish thing being his one arm-appendage; spider-incisor like, the lower drills of cartilage that made its mouth, but still roundly-tipped-domed, more so-in length and the way they moved is how they displayed this eerily superficial semblance to the arachnid, whereas there lay, pointing somewhere between, or sprouting from this area between the beak and the main' fleshy drill, an almost horn-protrusion as well, more angular than the strange forest of elongated things that came out of it. But it moved like a blob, similarly, trying to get a point in, and out. Spitting as it painted the streets in some unnaturally disgusting and hard-to look at ooze.

A country without ends, held by the same hands that had ruined it, driving it completely into the groundless abode that lay beneath it, in the cast of a billion or so truncheons where they lay. Inside her bedchamber beneath the curtained light, resting upon the pillow case, had she wasted yet? The man watching over her wondered, since her beheaded her was only in part, and parted off her body, on the bed, on the pillow, slightly spread, maliciously yet en-glassed, they shattered as the coil of winds announced the brothel of fire's mast that had but flimsily cast away a decadent bloated urn of rosy-dust upon the sightened hold, inside her swollen chambers. Eleven hundred of them, but only a servant to clean; over whom he had pursed the lips of, putting them together one by one, the mistress of the house, all of them, she had been and was.

'Must I speak to a corpse or will I be called to your sympathy's nerve, no longer provoked by this nuisance that it silence!'

A volatile cast-marrow, of bone-lard and guttural sorrow on the outskirts before this grotesque abomination that was her house; many towers, all but fornicated-ly twisted, inter-connected, by strange bridges, twists, wild hinges, all of whom were moving akin to wild mosaics.

All of the sudden she rose.

He froze.

A maiden swollen dead, deep-standing without her head, having criss-crossed the room several times, bleeding until the very swollen sound of her adjacent awakening spilled not a single, more drops of wine still hanging by her clingingly yet torn apart, finger, moved. As they had both finally met; with her voice audible from that side of the bed, twas left behind.

'I see that you've decided to join us, fine and fare well, I say to thee whom I have guarded for a few hundred years.'

A bulbic round-fat almost spiked by cones blot-of ends, metallic, yet drawn out of a coiled round angular bend that drew out of her emerged soon after – come to sigh. Only a single pair of four metal heads, similar but ripped off, drew again and again. Pained by it, a kiss was leant.

'You've aroused my curiosity, now, we are alone for your desire's downcast.'

Eighteen hundred forty six villagers, their children being four hundred seventy seven, twenty eight hundred cows, dogs, cats, snails, worm-dogs, earthworms and a Pterodactyl were forced to enter the room, all giant, the size of eighteen hundred meters by fourteen seventy eight, in height, headless, and provoked in pained alarm, they covered them in spittle, coated crimson, yet benigned. They had been tortured for hours, waiting for it to stop. Yet years passed, kept alive, every tendon, every molecule having been slightly, if so could it be called, cut off. Until pain arose, they butchered one another, the giants, and filled with entirety of the mansion with complete blood clod that solidified their corpses entirely into this mansion's body.

'As was said, before!'

The servant rose again.

'Morning, lady Unspoken Mirasms, have you slept well while I was gone hunting outside? Carving my way through this chaos you've entailed to drown each lot that we were cast upon since tender-yet tenebrous yonder twas no call of morning come, nor stronger knot, nor disembowel of empty lot to call out such's n it be a dart retreat?'

There was no answer.

Next time he left, there lay a promise he had been made aware by her sudden suction in one of the exposed greater canine-shaped holes, a pit on top of which the bed dwindled as to fall. A sudden flow-through would repeal the airs that were cast by winded furloined-tall.

A bridge now lowered: With a wont-tusk giant torso holding the left side of it fornicated by giant flat-fat thin creatures to whom it were attached, an ugly parted ways in-between mollusk-shaped a sphere that was thrown into the dark river, postulated as they were.

Bottlesnake

Born on the eleventh of May, fifteen sixteen, the fourth of the calendar, out of a fridge-tomb-shaped womb, with an inner womb-fetal head, that of an inner-cast mother, inside of which he was being fed the grubs she had been honing as a result of the feeding procedure, ten years before the incubation period which was approximatively fifty five years before the birth commenced. In a dark-painted by finger-scrawls room:

A painting of a Great four kings suture, made out of carve-ins as well. Two chandeliers of dust, formed by crawling cock-roach figures the size of men, all adding together, nasty-darting around, guarding her as she made her last stand against the putrefying remains that squirmed in place, adding to the strange pentagonal blob of a mound-bed she rested upon. An alarming rate of appendage for head men appeared, servants that delivered food-ratios collected from the most unnatural spots they could find them in, despite the scarcity left behind by the falling of the last trees that sustained humanity and their plethora of carnage-drive massacres that filled the sea with blood and swastika shaped head-shapes, in various representations with which they came accompanied with, some of the most outwardly courageous survivors.

Asterisk

Asterisk, asterisk, asterisks; last night's when they finally found the body lain on top of the river's edge, in an ambulance that had been hung by a rope by a nearer to the land-pole crusted on the shore's front, alongside it, a bridge having been curved frontward-into some fifty or twenty or some miles, running, longingly to the beneath it area that had forced its imprint on a drawl of sand carried along by the various amalgamations of temperature-fluctuations, of runny mist, rising on a constant notice while it happened, as a result of the thermal-gas pockets released upon the iron-mass's upraise, which must've come as a surprise, shockingly so, since the man that had been found cut-in-half, the same man that was found kilt, in the ambulance and now, only having fallen in front of them when this stumbling upon the corpse occurrence happened to, suffice to say, them, as, these mountain hikers, noticed and filed on a police rapport, noted that the same man that had been trapped or desperately attempted his in-avertedly denied of

- escape, who also had scrapped his fingernails, chipped off a pair of ten bloody pulps, had in his possession a phone frozen in his cold-dead hand, dialing for the same ambulance, whereas, despite not having finished the call, the other hand was but completely turned at such a weird angle, that, this predicament could only be resolved by the supposition of the man having have had his arm twisted behind his back by a forceful repeated-by-long-violent-intervals-of-pounding, which caused this weird bending to occur in the first place, to begin with, that may've been the cause of him having dialed for the ambulance in the first place, or attempted to do so in any case. But what kind of phone has a dialing number and the asterisk located in the same colloquial location? Strangely his blood started running short of a blood-pack that upon him being split in half, although devoid of it, bodily speaking, he, had, immediately pronounced upon the sight, an immediate release of about eight pints worth of a carafe of flat-quails of neon colored crimson that started crawling out of his body by means of ear-worming out with ringed bands of iron that spun so as to roll. A secret message had been acquired by one of the passers-by; by-means of extracting their own eyes through highly-boiled syringe-driven back and forth with a few-in-between thrust-like motions that were also responsible for the storage of already encapsulated bottlish-shaped information capsules whose alleged infallible ejection procedure ended up being a failure in itself, having not been catapulted prior to this reconessence, it was a given that they occupied a much-needed necessary for proper function - space for nothing: Their heads were barely put together on top the pillar of a body that thrust itself before them. Four, or eight of them in total, all sublime, peculiarly deformed, and added to the outer spine that grew out of their arms, restlessly legless, upon a barrel of meat they crawled with on the skinned plumes of the most unnaturally dark a restless crowd, cowed before them, of empty little specs and remnants of what used to be corpses of men. A bodily formation filled with outer-fiber that began fidgeting as tiny homunculi men started clasping and drawling with ooze, falling apart while this body shook. It ate one of the hikers and made its way before the small phone. Its waves had blasted through the many tall walls of alabaster that had once made the inner-thinness of the cave their hibernatory waves of flaccidly-pulsation of oozing serpentine-coiled saw-beings inside each belted brothel of lump-drowned foiled cones drew upon. Behind them, from where they came, part of the forest had been completely destroyed, to the very point of being filled, to its entirety, with canoe-shaped out of the grown slopes inside of which tinier Goliaths similar in appearance to them laid in slumber. A pariah of dead-fish between each of them, tenderly somber; a gaseous pair of clouds that appeared solid, drenched in the most uncannily hard-to-look at cranial mass there was-an expansion of many limbs that only craned back and forth as to peek at this stranger who was more so preoccupied with trying to pierce into this lowered out of the ambulance lower-half of the body. Now, with his mere aid, his mere presence of being caused the winds to cast away shones of gluttonous tormenting storm-shouts, echoing presently as the body-halves united, awkwardly, yet, stopped mid-way in this liquefaction that turned the ground into a bubble that was not a bubble, and was not spherical, for it had a funnel beneath it that lead fifteen miles away from the point it had been inserted in, through the ground, miles in, miles out, into the sea, where it formed a bubbling-filled with pouches of growth-rounded around their heads, almost cacti-tall, fumigating round with an x' laid on top of, in the same way a palm would lay, filled with air, made out of oxygen, see-through, nigh-invisible from the distance, where, all of the sudden, a flying organ, inside of, could be seen slowly descending at an uncouth speed. Yet this could not be seen by the great figure that resented this human that had been nigh-splattered in front of him with as much, or as near a violent outrage as there'd be our would be used by the unnatural but bastardly-encased fist of seething with steam that was coming out of the many holes, on either side that adorned it, greater fist that drew out of his, or their belly, above the skin-blood covered in barrel, which was then used to stomp the head of the poor man who had been until that very point, now, presumed to be dead, but upon being slightly fused back together, he had momentarily regained the consciousness of, trying to vindicated this strange miasma of a confusion block of an eerily unnatural an engulfance of that nodded at his broth of a leg, an appendage, something that came off here and there, entering the wrong direction into his lower-ovulating woman-like a womb-formed almost tumor of a bubbling shield held by some ancient Spartan trying to shield himself from an array-storm of many arrows that were being allowed to rain upon him and his people who were incapable to fully, or had-had been, been, so, until; defend themselves, a deterrent as much to themselves, their own as to their enemies' as well, that observers, over the course of a long enough time that these Spartans were become their very shields, part of them having completely absorbed their bodies, as it was the case this moment, where, what had forced this sudden growth-of a tender, but hardened thing, was, the fact that his leg had been feeding itself on many of the blood-bags that were out in the open, left there, for him, alone, brought by some of the MPs –equipped or which had their Uzis on them, in his hand, pointing at this dire-wretch of a many-headed being caught in a most tenebrous session of pounding on poundage, which in turn drew attention away from the in-satiating hunger he felt that was not satisfied by his leg munching on the blood, despite being offered numerous alternatives that could've most easily led him to a prized break; right before the retaliation had a chance to begin. Well enough, while trying for this unnatural a thing that was taking a shot at him, he stopped.

Fish

Wales had been flooded by the storm, upon the light, upon the strongest of the wildest throngs where listless sung lay harpies-cast in stones of bleeding masts fore-joined, by empty quarrel. Of loftiness was there no spoken barrow, for it carried only those that fell. By chance or deepened by sole-refrain to cast away; a stance that could not be wished away, if ever-came it true to song:

'We're hanging still, but there's no telling when it'll stop.'

'What have you done, knuckle-head, who are they whom joined us?'

'A sea of lard; we have only brought the sturdiest, that's all.'

'Yet thou've seamlessly perchance, unaccounted what might still be chanced if let alone to their own doings.'

'Only that I would be cast in disrepair if I had listened to your order then.'

'Nonce, you're empty-minded? Fly and fling away thine ship, you're but to be cast in bloody-torn apart, a heap! I shall have none listen to your or such command; a wretch, perchance ignoble, incapable of, breathe through thine brethren's sully-must!'

They jointed each other's truly deep refrained to be, and chopped a head, and soon to be, was the ship bloodied, cast into a sea of crimson red. A captain was there, but he was made out of every single crewman's head, put together; emptily coming closer, farther away, no better. Of the drowned men that started drifting while their prudent approach had only come to add to their engulfment in the seas' thrust of thrush that followed them during their waking's hour come to pass, whereas they could've been saved if allowed even a most preposterous momentary breath, cunning were the sea-shanties that shot harpoons after each one, picking off them what they could, a coin, a doubloon and even the tide twas wrapped around a childless loin, they stole everything, leaving them for days, strangled, upon peaks that only ships would cast themselves away into to drown with joyous death that would chant after. Braver men to pass and return for them when they no longer knew what to say or where to cast their eyes, averting from perilous, most treacherous rise, until no land agape, benighted but halvened, yet survivors that could not be seen, soon after, made their way into larger, grim-basins where, there, they ended suffocating, of sweet release none was heard or known since the welsh, as poor, as they had honed, each trial, had died, one by one, abated in their waste-thereafter, waiting for their called-in-brothers, they were abandoned, by those whom were a part-of, whom had fled, the standard, the toil and the tall, ugly wail, as the flags were ripped apart, as the trenches were of no more of a reasoned need to be dug, since all that there was to see, in the daylight of the sea, in the echo left behind by no sea-shanty, was but a plume, an empty moon, a strange monsoon, pillaged by empty, one by one, the distant boats, it didn't bode well that inside of them, there was none that could even be remotely recognized as ever to've been a man, instead, they abashed the ends of their faces, their legs and swam with their elongated tubes-that drew out of their chests and was how they hunted for the blue-coral-shaped honey droned inside their outer-lungs by these ugly fish-shaped brutish man-humanoid wasps-hornets in their backs whose bodies were giant comb-incisors- shots, syringe-distortions that had split men in halves, without legs but open-chests there lay with many arms, all human-appendaged at their ends, but closer to wide-hoses, flapping around, flaccid in wake and heads as wide as thick n' wide rhinoceros-coconuts, sized, sprouting forth, and open mouthed-round encircled, in the same way sun-discs would be.

It didn't take long for them to feed, as they waited, there, a beat of the heart whose gelatinous there-after made it much harder for them to repel the need to feed again and alarm the nearby-laying predators who awaited a sign of weakness so they could leap in their boat like fish would, emptying their traps, these traps they held in their guts that were spike-chained rounded, twistedly-contorted like nuclear-bombs.

Mother

The uncertainty was slowly beginning to get on everyone's nerves even before there had been a chance for either one of them to get a word on in, or to promulgate a simple loathsome irreverence of secularity to the loathsome of the cat, that half-been brought onto a plate yet uncut as it remained an oyster-like mystery as how's been made that way but halvened half-away through birth; its mother being grown into a few barrel's height stacked onto each other, fat n' filled and fed, and made watched over by many men who took on rounds to ensure the other half that came out, which took over the body of its mother; as they've become a strange bottle-shattered pierced in puffy hardened lump; barely recognisable, as this disease was only caused by an impossibility to stop the growth of the half-fetus; which, upon reaching a critical mass of growth began the ritual that would unlawfully unwrap it, then allow for it to step in its place. A strange torsion, root-wrapped in carcasses of its past-used, out of truce, growth-aghast and therefore cast to paint it, before they could rest, alas, a wretched little thing of little to no worth, of little anchor; that would grain a prattle forth; and therefore reign a little more. A disease mass of self-filling snaky-after-skins, that's the way they explained it as they rested by it, warming their bodies during the winter as there was but little to no chance to do it by any other means, otherwise. A flagellant-organ, elongated by four interconnected fat rods that were spat out of pseudo bulbic mouthed heads, hardly erected and mostly like spores-but closer in shape to overly inflated bacteria, with their crawly-legs, allowed for the feeding session to begin. And they were not contaminated either, but danced around it, seeing how it's now become their mother, hence the men said:

'We need to forcefully impregnate more cats and hope for the disease to occur again, just so we could do with much many more mothers as we've seen and plenty more within the likens, ever-seen!'

Thence they started ever-going by the gong, hour-long, brought many cats and impregnated them themselves, as they worked upon bringing more mothers back to life. Bringing them into the blight of a winter's told erected hold that refused to grab onto their knotted heads, as their bodies were left behind and they emerged again out of themselves; now paler, dreadfully cold.

'Have I angered you mother?'

Angus Pratt-Bat could think of no other reason but the moister of the ceiling. It's been in a dire need of change, to make it so much, easier, to ease up the transition into a lair. And with that in mind, he's brought a single curtsy to the lady in the room, who looked estranged from the world she saw no reason to be in any longer, committing the wholly detrimental to her health act of ending her life by means of retribution. Armed with a small ice-pick, she challenged the men; right before she yelled:

A step back, nearer to the wall that faced the right side of the mass.

'I am to take the role of your mother and feed you instead!'

'You're not well equipped enough, broad, to feed a dozen of us, let alone battalions at that. But I wouldn't mind you trying nonetheless!'

'Perhaps I shall.'

But the mother-mass was angered, and in its furious raise, two feet straight into the air or more, spat a single shaft that immediately, upon impaling the wretched whore during her joust of lust, made her into a pile of spool-fat, gelatine-but raised akin to some kind of mound, that, was served upon her quickly yet en-trance as the men were, quick-to-be-met-by-some-kind-of-reprimand, sought after quill of plenty brought upon their plate offering made to her children, as to forget the woman ever existed in the first place. They had, and ate plenty, and were rather ill-elated. Conflagrated by the lot of heat that was brought upon eating out of her, and asked for feet; women's feet were a delight, but with her gone, none were there just yet to be watched or seen. And the closest town that had some women in was at the very least miles above and therefore it was rather wrong to hope there's be the slimmer of a chance. It angered many but they watched.

Later a giant head-like formation with four great frames that were all pointing in a cubical –set of four directions that bore hundreds of feet, long bulbic inflated bulbs that each connected to the room and began growing little bowling-pin shaped humanoids that moved by spinning and had hundred of faces and were governed by floating above them honey-hive bulbic-fleshy 'moon'-stone beings with single eyes and crucifix formations, hundreds of them as well sticking out of them – they used as wings, whereas their semi-transparent nigh-invisible corkscrew ‘pig’ tails were connected to these uglily deformed skin-kebab ‘humanoids’ they dared bring forth so as to not only force the hand but to ordain an audience with the Mother; whose council was much treasured across many species who found her mightily wise, as wise as she was ancient in age and numb.

Day four’s been coming and going for a while now; mother is sleeping inside a giant skin-hook pointing at the ceiling for the time being, inside the Hook-chamber.

She was not to be disturbed unless something extreme happened. It would worsen every day by an inch dragged by the retort they entertained while she slept.

‘No one’s allowed in, chief’s orders!’

The murder had occurred in this very same house, without any witness being ever-longed for allowed to enter or make any muttering of any worthy-lesser cleave of slitter, better still, would it matter less to few, or more so endear a trifle more than a smoke being taken care of while sinew, sinew was something of little ignorance or little more than some. Hmm, no one wanted to come into the smoke, to approach, of make a fuss out of it. Subtle yet finely walking:

The three elongated lords had arrived; one being bodied by two floating cysted fleshy connected stones that gave the impression of a single down-pointed beak that oozed like some sort of heart. On top of which, an oyster-shell growth grown out of the upper, wider end of this beak-cone; mouthed off-side, eyeless but filled with many lumps on top-blob-fish but an old-humanoid in appearance grown-akin to; as. The second one almost like an ostrich-man without the bird neck, but the torso being fat-formed into a scarab-canon worm, winged as well, bearing a tiny tower of ‘melted-on-top-of-one-another-candles’ shaped peculiar faces with many unnaturally deformed features grown on top one another as well. Whereas the third one was an almost floating-anchor with a few powdery fleshy kegs grown in the back forming a backward-pointing lance, at the end of which a fat-end-rounded push-in allowed for a single human-face’s reflection to be seen in. All three of them swam in the pool-cavern they turned the world in now.

‘There, there, there’s been a mistake, I wager a single soul of mine against yours put, to have been wilt upon me, I, a man, misunderstood in terms of my intentions, that I would foresee reasons behind reasons for this treason of many petty ills. Well enough, the ardour is cast!’

‘I’d like to think there’s no one as worse as you are in this world that would do as awful of a thing as ruining my cat in front of this fine crowd of people brought over from the plantations. They’re my children and they’ve been ruined by the latter loss of a crop’s undertaking. I am, safely said, most assuredly absurd in countenance since I’m ill withdrawn not to ask any more questions than needed, otherwise, would they forlorn a riotous mutiny, throwing me into the nearest trench, for misbehaving would only bring more ardour ever-present during the day of the ilk!’

‘But you my friend don’t know what’s in it for the two of us either, since they’ve made it plain and simple that we cannot die as long as we’re a part of this solace of a swollen-ly worsened ground by the grace of our lords, we shall never mourn hope for when’s to come and therefore gone, by the time of a full-thrust in, the cobwebs and the ant-mounds and the dead will already rejoice at what's been had and given into the perilous falter of the blighted light that changes still in shade and youth!

A start had been given as they could only save some of the most compounded into the ground, the lamentation of those whom were numbed by the fourth fallen rock of moon, chained by a constantly swirling monsoon, the eye of the storm kept in place, reduced to a single spurring little needle that was being wrung around, and played within a single thumb as if it was someone's plaything, or a, needless to say, a satiated remain of time's lost end, when time and time had given its long-lost plight a single refrain from each emotion's consternation lost again. For when they came to a similar decision, that would mean; it would mean. It's unknown.

As all would be aware of, this, this state she was in, rather plainly referred to as a terminal eminence out of which not a single soul would consider the chance it had or bore itself through to reawaken. It was an unnecessary lustful evil, vile and promulgated in wait. For some reason or another, it paid no ruse to awaken a simple fruit from theft, or saw it, dice it, see it as it is, erect, when so many people whose watch had become something of an insufferable thing to contemplate the need of, it only mattered less from onward to the stench. They depended on some sort of reactionary, almost involuntary jerk that would give a sign of her life still being on anything but life-support, yet which was now tremendously begged for in such a manner that some solicitous doubt started taking place. Whether or not this brooding in her sleepless coma was still alive had become too inconsistent a consideration in terms of its dismissibility, that, upon being finally dragged out of the way, albeit by the power of some resonance that didn't ring with most of the people present at this mirthful funeral of the kind; they reasoned to have their stay halvened by a simple reasonable observation brought at hand by one of the, previously at the very least, most thoughtful, loyal of her subjects, whose kin-betrayal was met by some un-circumstance-orial regret that clearly reflected on his face. Being something of an unnatural mutter, moreover delivering an almost vengeful abrogation of upheaval that immediately threatened the impulse-driven advance the opposition had immediately passed on the chance of furthering or advancing with; since they were of a mindful regret come-through and come-even, easily turned into regret since they knew very well that they could force his hand; forcing him to a properly accepted stop, a conceit of the kind, blessed be his dire-soul in need of wrenching, for the wretch immediately turned the crowd against their most cherished matron, in bearings and trunked with falchions, rakes, knives and power-tools; whose clear intent denoted only of destruction and the immediate termination of most of her structural integrity as well as livened-state of being.

'We shall kill the mother and devour her still, or replace her with the Father of Moulded Sin who shall bless us all with eternal bodies that shall spare no less sapient embrace that the one brought in by the mighty race that came before us, killing our forefathers while replacing them with their own!'

'And you would lead us to believe that such a wretch would do us better than the one blessed Matron that saved us from complete extinction? How dare you muddy her name and reaches during her eternal slumber and the lichens that adorn her cradle?'

As tall as he was, eighteen heads he spat out of his completely bloated belly, all spitting on the floor once they rolled down at his feet. He was not in the mood of being dismissed, hence he started pinning down on the pen of tiny; little parasites they called themselves a crowd.

‘All of you are merely alive, still standing, yet beseeched still because of her and only her and no one else, mind you manners ever still! I’m the only one whose call for reason has even brought you to a mind to rescind the old-sayings which had blinded you not only with tar but whose cleansing had completely annihilated the nigger-disease before it could be brought into the clearness of light!’

‘Matthias, you’re ill-mannered and a foolish tool. Why should we listen to you? Royal-attendant! I say, Monarchy has been once against dismissed by the very strong arm of man, by the will of the people and by all who cherish freedom in all its regards and manifestations, whichever they might be or called, into question or otherwise! And you, enemy of all reason had thought yourself above and beyond us, to have it said so; put less plainly, you’ve muttered no ill and lest heave a single strangle, you’ve tuned to the wrong songs of lies, and therefore cast but an evil eye upon all that isn’t treacherous, yet bizarre as your lair’s been, we’ve seen it!’

For they all lived in plain chambers, but he lived in a grotto; with a metal gate that didn’t even cover the entrance he somehow carved into the ship. A strange place to live indeed; he even had servants, sixty of them, humanoids with vulgar looks and Bolgar-tongue-speaking throat-machines that spat bullets out of spinning tubes that also spat blood. Painted around, hanging machinery, large bluish-tall-sheds with even larger tiny Silo-bulbs with eyes on them, with containers attached to balloon-spherical tortoise-cranes that kept moving them around. And many look-a-likes of his, all fake, this one as well. A bomb in case something went wrong, strapped to his chest, threatening to explode if something went wrong. And some eerily old hags he had hanged for some reason, all niggarrish, but impossibility or the idea of clearly dismissed it since the nigger race had been completely driven to extinction! A dark abode indeed.

Therefore he was accused of fraud:

‘Matthias is to be put in the same lot as his mother, readied for execution!’

‘Where is the jury made out of my peers? I see none of whom, whatsoever might even make something even eerily; clear-enough, resembling people of my own!’

But lo’, he was betrayed; bribed Matthias-look-a-likes were brought onto the court. And if they lost, although they weren’t told of it just yet, they would be executed with him and the Mother, just as soon and just as well.

‘The entreaty that is currently being carried over should bring no interlocution of any question being quieted or, to say the least abhorred by any other party than the one present here, during this damp-night of Green July, while we ready ourselves to kill the cattle in his den of lies and of evil, purport to an entreaty of not-to-be-seen or heard, eye-to-eye or set to die, question being asked or put to the countenance of no star of evil that might come after if we’re to follow a darkened path, lead onto it by a powerless tirade bringing only an evil lie into question, no less!’

All whom raised were quieted! Soon, soon, soon enough, as through the ladder of empty-straddle and what comes after, not to raise an alarm, don’t bother; thought a man.

‘Wait!’

The word that stilled them during their wake:

‘I dare ask you one thing, before the court could be brought on, carried by thought alone, from being deeply-through stretch, adjourned!’

‘And what would that be?’

‘I ask nothing short of being trialled inside my Grotto!’

‘Why?’

‘It’s my wish and my desire! To be dressed in a fancy attire as well, but to be judged onto a land my own peers have been brought onto, for fairness be alarmed, for I am made and be unmade a few feet beneath the soil of my making, devoid of any possibility that might be followed through or seen as a mere chance that I might run!’

They agreed.

In the waking of the mother, there stood on the spot eight kings; wearing buffoonery-charade, dead-unicorns and army uniforms of blue-dead medals cast upon their broad adorned well-crested ends.

Who was that woman?

‘I like you because you don’t trust anyone!’

Soon he looked beneath the bed. A naked woman drew herself out flat cold on the floor as if slid on a patch of butter; he immediately covered her with half of the bed sheet, half still on top the floor between his knees kept still.

‘I can shrink at will, you know?’

She disappeared. But it wasn’t like she said it, she couldn’t shrink, nor get any smaller than her frame. That wasn’t her, she had been but a voice without a head, without a body, dragging him along while she made him crawl on the walls, looking at an empty hole that dragged beneath him through a shot that fell, cascading into a frozen scope of many floating yet lopsided, couches dragged, and plants yet planted firmly in the wall his feet. Reminded him of a sand-pit; but by now his cat was most certainly dead.

‘I want to know what you are, what you want from me!’

Never quick to answer but to make allusions to things that weren’t real, as the night that followed, in this new stone age he had been thrown into, a cage in the dark that opened to revealed her upon a block or blotched, standing, right to the very end of the point, the verge of the end where he simply took out a torch, realizing that he had mistaken her for some kind of, or it, albeit he couldn’t tell if it was her disguised as a little tombstone merry-man in the making waving at him with lichen as he went out for a smoke. It’s become an obsession, more than his hatred for niggers and kikes as well as their loathsomeness that was but ill-bee-heaven stricken in disguise!

How could she survive under the guise of the one bothered upon the shawl of many tender almost chittined Phalanxes of rounded girthed rotten falling apart formations of lumps of skin that twisted like spirals or vortexes or various other unnatural forms that lend one the impression that there were trapped humans inside of it, yet this creature was anything but humanoid; elongated like some adjustable lamp, bent over as it sprouted from some unnaturally dark conglomerate of many forms and many unnatural combs of little hive-formations that drew in and out, revealing its young, momentarily so, which it had collected from the many impregnations it had forced itself go through, throughout the years, since it stole actual wombs, 'pollinating' them with its own fragmented soul it had ripped apart from the very anchored ripple of unseen roots that formed the greater spectre that possessed this insufferable body that bore, at its end, frontward, a downward pointing almost-spider-like in terms of mandibles but close-to kin to some down-facing rake or some ugly crab growl, on top of which stood a giant puffy garlic-organ that held a bag-on-top-your-human-head but not humanoid head, devoid of a nose and eyes, hair and features, lest one would account for the two pudgy black orbs that had been clearly implanted inside its 'skull', if this was indeed such a thing, whereas its 'mouth' was a completely cavernoid-ed wide peashooter; with a bulb placed a few centimetres behind the outer rims of this 'moon-crater' formation; an almost rounded intercom-speaking through comb-hive that squirmed like a worm yet remained unmoved. This body it bore; despite the many rounded bumps it bore spread across its body, something strange lay to it. Some weird, peculiar aspect; hard-or hardened, chiselled or sharpened, almost mechanical, as if this body had been sculpted to be a gun-holster-rifle-long mutated at its end, almost by a plant-form organic mutant being; at times-only, that is to say, it never stood in place as the many rounded bumps drew in and out, revealing the partitioned souls that yearned to finally be released, each in possession of a mind of its own; devoid of a master, against servitude and all necessary arrangements and involvements that accompanied the promise of. These vortexes were of a purplish-ink-blooded mix butchered during a storm sea of mermaids and octopi whose ink was diluted by this peculiar concoction of many unnaturally unnecessary paints that hardly mixed; if at all. Its fleshy skin and appearance was much lighter in contrast with these hardened, ever-darkening and changing in shape and look plates, becoming much lighter and lighter still, a pinkish cherry-straw shot greenish puckery eely in appearance, but filled with some cracks every here and there, spread around, chitinous splits may've been seen coming out as a result of some unnecessary sprout out of, regardless of chisel be. Ugly and repelling as it were, had it stood there, there might've been a reason to be gone and release the vaporous things that entered the side of the derange moon-shaped half of the ceiling which was filled with plainly to see lowered-lichens of ugly perky disgusting flails that were in beckoning of release and kept releasing the most unnatural of the darkest gases that kept the Mother in her eternal state of hibernation yet were eerily avoided to be spoken of by her sons. Since they were afraid of these poisonous branches, these ugly purgatory stanches; stanzas in their names and beckoning abodes would've have them butchered and thrown around. As they brought only the promise of pain for all that could see or look at the darkly crowded sun that was under their control. It was a disappointing thing, trying in vain, trying yet again to have a go at them, undisciplinatory, wretched, ugly, grainy, vile and evil, Purdy-pretty low-regard, like niggers that fell over themselves, being incapable to act like humans but were blackened by coal-rust with sprouting ever-pass!

'I am going to bring on the Aboragator of disease!'

But there was no telling when he would appear, if at all!

'A truncheon might've been endowed in doubt. There's been a slither's come around!'

The gong was rung, all of the noise come out of the window immediately following some trail-blaze of smoke-puffs.

Maybe I'll have my fun with them before I chuck them back into the oven!

I'm going to burn down their fucking Kikish Theatre! Oh boy, I can only hope Mel Gibson doesn't perch her pussy into a slither of a sheet of a nigger's paper-grit of a left-over heap before I get to go at it!

'There's someone standing over there, go check that corner out, and if there is tell me first, then I'll take the shot, then he'll die and if he doesn't, you will. You get it? You get where I'm heading with this?'

Loose ends

One of them that belongs to a most obnoxious extraction; I have to kill him whatever the cost; no matter what, this should make it atop the further end of my priorities. He has to die in order for me to keep my real identity hidden, to maintain this charade of an illusion of who I truly am. He has to die, he has to get killed in a most violent a manner as there possibly can be. With a hammer of sorts; his knee-joints, his throat; open and gushing so.

The InsaneCriminal

'I am going to slaughter you in terms of fish out of the water put through the gutter, I will gut, and be brought upon my hold I will not will my hand away, die, die-die, I kill you anyway, brought onto the lands of slaughter and the blood that runs upon my arms is the same that belongs to many of your brothers, the ones that I will kill away, and the ones that I shall have wilt slain, their bodies gotten into the broth of my heap, inside and on top of which there's a twitch I cannot force myself but see repel, slaughter, slaughter, slaughter away!'

'Price of death and grim surroundings, where thine wilt and ever-findings?'

'Towards titter and time come onto the brow of death cast away into a hole where never-got! See the sight and bathe in fright!'

Somehow the stench managed to permeate throughout the entirety of the parcel while the premise itself had been vastly encumbered by a stole of macerated breaths; cold and hardened, grown akin to cancer-pops that entered the mighty slither of the man standing guard inside the place.

'There's a little spiel in there, cork-screw like, I want you to digest it openly, so my guests could experience firsthand what is meant to kill our Gods during the Age of Cannibalism!'

'But you don't suppose they'll know of it this soon, will they? It's too soon for either one of them to know or find it out, I'm afraid that I cannot let you do that!'

'My lord, the rape's yet to've begun, yet assailed as thou might be, do not under any circumstance whatsoever be beguiled by the trifle of the most unnaturally illimitable aspects our wretches and the spoiled dregs whose faces had been ripped off by the spinning bows that entered the backs of their fallen apart towers of poisoned meat, eaten only by rabies and the giant faced by men white-silk maggots of many mouths spitting long-elongated roads with skin-cars of stretched on them men-alive humanoid creatures incapable of dying or moving away since their wheeled legs are still stitched on these platforms, knowingly exposed to the radiation of the moon's eight eye which drips into the solace of our temples; since they might rip your attention away from the long-mourned for quiet we've yet to endure a need of blessing a kind of understanding shared with, never-leper knowing!'

'I shadn't!'

And they walked fifteen paces at a time throughout the world of darkness they have created out of the endlessly incessant not stopped to this day slaughter and bolster of the many killings they had to have proceeded with some lost day in the past. It was a wretch of a day that held them still, but they would not die off without worshipping one of the ancient gelatine! Crimea!

The steered forth in the ship they had embarked since the journey's initial beginning starting from somewhere around fifteen hundred thousand days ago in some March's fourth ill, littler than fifteen hours since's passing or like five minnits, during a most stormy anshamble of about fifteen or seventeen angstily contorted dark-black coal niggarrishly lumped clouds that came in droves of five –to six packs of chained by chains but invisible make-pretend in terms of allure n'presentation, make-believe foundation, while crowded by THE TUNES, which were of a vintage-call another time and I'll maybe think about you baby, I love you, please call back, I won't hang up on you this time – there being this kind of vibe presented; Lucifer the Player of the Songs storming the CD's, put inside the tent they carried along with the power of vibrations since the ship was clearly being broken apart in front of their eyes, yet, for some unknown reason that was being dispatched from the mobile-unit radio they carried along, still entranced, as these fewer than usual helicopters that were dragging this ship to the other side of the planet which was scorched by the unnaturally torn apart, skinned giants whose under-layers gave an uncanny valley kind of distinctly – yet clearly so, impression, as it could not be referred to as anything but; Humans, Humans, what are they made of? And why do they look like his skin? This skinned apart giant's under layered skin, that would not be his skinned. But he was puffy dark and tall and mad; an ugly shaped head like a potato deformed bag put on top a humanoid head, that would look like a magician's hat but with a fatter tip or some bent down slightly at the 'tip' volcano, with two smallish eyes, and a long mouth protruding out of it, that would be as elongated as near-nigh his arms. Broad shouldered but looks like snapped in halves crackers; like a Vicar's suit, or ripped clean open floor-boards. Almost human in appearance, but one, another one of them was a chest-bearing, as in, armless, but only his head and his shoulders and the upper half of his body was visibly recognisable as one of theirs, whereas he looked, lowered by the half and forward, a platform-landing top of a cruiser's see-through after.

'She's awakened. Speaker of ages, might you listen to one of the wretches of the moon-shade in which they've lessened such prattle cone?'

One alorned for wretched lest brothel's cart might beseek to enter, the entreaty fold and enter thrice the mold of gates twas thrice added to the pretty leer; another thrice tender-loin wearing full of wool and candle's entreaty come after to endure the asking on the brow of the cemetery's lot.

'My lord, the one in charge of looking over her, what's there to be told of her condition? What she's done while during slumber come approach onto the bloated afterword countenance withheldedly mistaken as's you's been before, when told upon the Termite Bold that there was a chance for us to die approaching; yet, least you bring opossum-brow, and broth of little brought upon the often-lot will I see a change in her, yet again, listlessly aware as I am from this point on, I shall see no reason to be gone than add. What little might be had, what little might be told, aware as I am of the despair and disparity that's been stolen away from her, while during her eternal hibernation and leprous slumber, might I add no less than what impression had been lend onto me while unaware of what was going thrice?"

'You may, good man but keep in mind, there's only this little left of our time to pronounce a verdict upon the stanced upon little puffs and wools. She's grown through one of the lower tubes!'

'What happened?'

'I could tell you only this. I wager what little nuisance there's been pieced together but, and but alone that could not be taken hold of, just yet.'

For he had spoken of the little corkscrew the detectives were made to look into; at the asking of no little bore; the one that'd been withheld and stored.

What, what what what what what what ? What? Exactly what they all thought in unison as they rushed on the onset of the premise in question, that's fallen, blatantly in scum approached as some of the corpses that had come and asked for poison, poisoned some with the leprous brown, of dirt and dirt-like soothe and coal, all added in disgust; yet, lest one could add one thing more, or less, of what's been felt by them, yearning as they could only bring forth the lust of many lost-dark ages, savages and ladies in fancy dresses I fancy dressed no more no less, yet, I cannot tell of what my minded-stance had, lest asked again, impressed on the bodies that've been coy. They were armed, aware, snared, and besekt already to ask:

'Detectives, tell us, what did you see in those lower-beneath inhumanly so, seething during pass, and made to lust for come to knowledge after dark, termination of mistrust and made aware, already drawn to us and heed away. What did the corpses tell you?'

'They, they feigned a lie, Retributionist Rebuttler Coy; lest you search them individually for pain, would I add no less, that, joy cannot be added or stolen from them, don't forget. It's hard, perhaps even harder than anyone could ever hope to move around, in this pristine trap we have flung them in, of which we're still responsible, after dark, that is!'

'Were they prisoners in that case?'

'Frankly I do not know, as I would like to add that the anshamble of human parts that had been found somewhere, here and there and everywhere, might I add what little there's to know? That we only found them broken in part, rotten by age and age long biting and the thrust of knives, marks of main, lacerations, vinyl-cuts – the shapes, and the long-thrust marks of split-in-half and cut and lay; knowingly continuing our examination with the little aforementioned- not so; knowledge of their disparity of termination, but of their taken joy and ploy of thrust! They've taken a liking into the joust!'

It could not get much easier than that.

They dropped a few lesser bodies and the bunch jumped, leaped and thrust as often as they could until there was nothing to be had but the brittle-bones they satiated the need of eating through; perching some of the reasoning as they cast themselves in deep sinew.

Lost sworls:

‘Knock it down!’

‘It’s a titanium encased floor that’s lodged inside this door and torn apart-a man anshamble!’

The many that were put together made to wont and wonder:

‘We won’t be able to flee from the fourth room unless someone dies, remember?’

‘I shall not be that one if that’s the case!’

A brothel of a cause was no excuse for the bodies entombed by sided-side and grim approach, the bolden goblin-figures that were surrounding them had no faces or looked wax-melted, their features hidden, limbless almost for the begs were different races, mostly brown, of man, contorted and rebirthed as appendages coming out of each and every goblin figure’s rounded circular dome that was lodged both in and out of them, allowing for these men to grow. Large and neggy, like niggers but longed and compact as if grown in tubes and only their eyes squirmed out, for they were as reeds, fleshy and stuffy, or oat-grown roaches, with lots of hair; and these domes, mechanic-machinery machination- how they burst!’

‘Great man of no regards, you’ve left one of our own behind, without asking for guidance or for a right of mourning.’

‘Has it come from behind the door? Are you deaf my liege?’

Nothing’s come from either side, and for listless hours they stood aghast, incompatible as it were, and as it’s been coddled from every side, was the machine pronounced, for no other reason than’s it been carried titter and away, than the slimmer of regard that followed, right by the one that said:

Plaster, put in one and wrap it around the head of the base. That was the first thing they taught the Pyrotechnicians, the pyromaniacs during their classes.

Two or three panels lay in the front, actioned by four mechanical arms attached to one of the most miserable seeming wretch there lay; a hive-girthed figure twenty feet tall or so; that was cave-long in the back, at the back of a head attached to a large shoot in the back spear-grope.

Were they off by the hour? It wouldn’t say. It wouldn’t add a second addendage if it wanted to, nor would it approach the epiphany needed to draw the curtains by itself, as their tender loin-gruff, which pointed down poignantly yet endeared such appeasement as none other than the master of the two houses could stand before them, drawing by himself a slither, like a falchion driven through the little heart and beckoned for the death of the nigger, would he feel repelled by what was going on around them, brim of little pet-petards’; The Gallows that were trenched on top their backs but which surfaced only after the fourth hour’s pass-over could allow for the Rebirth to happen when at last were they allowed to resurface. Eighty slaves, peckish, little, abhorring every hour of the light as they were only blinded by what was going on around them since the sun only drew breath once in a while, plundering each eye that was blinded, showing up with darkened stare. A gas-flu of clouds compacted as they figured out the bodies would convey. For the men that looked behind were met by the castle. And it looked like contorted cattle with these wild arches, contorted joints, convoluted masses sticking out as well as pouring down the tens of foils and at length they lined up. And almost shot out for prowess was something that could not be had, at least not while there was a pin. A pint of gelatine that carried them as the good chunk of the castle fell upon a whim.

‘Thee yonder not thee look, for what’s been had, the bastard, simpering upon the empty crook of what’s been had or for remorseless yearn-forth cradle away. Would they understand if they joined us or are we to carry on what little remains of it?’

Forty miles from beneath the earth descending, yet not a single light would yearn-come to mind for brothel of the nature’s pucker lay forlorn, distorted in the making as they’d breed. By the sides of the road, like whores of gelatine, waiting for their oblong to return, wretched thing that stumped the sight as it hardened, yet became, as to become. A tall creature, as if leaped from empty sides. Two grim-fat masses for legs, still floating, holding a head that was as far if not fatter than the head of some trunk that might be found down the road; a couch-like opening appeared to welcome them in, and they, like good slaves, leaped inside this forlorn open-less reign inside of it, the spikes. Each servant and slave implanted, or impaled but not killed, yet allowed to refrain from pain as all natural and all would have one still to see. It would bother no one, or at least, not to mind the company. A man had almost been completely pulled in. But he resurfaced, almost rotten from malnutrition, yet he stood there and opened his growl’s tender keeper of the teeth. Many fell and started pushing out the little slithers of a head of gelatine. Eight of the Rod, looked like diamonds, sharpened but fluent in the language of the mass. As it rested in the middle of the floor, like some great jewel that was appreciated, haggled with, adorned with other pearls of bore:

‘Are we to do something of this little peak? Is he one of us or will he will us to be humble when the skinning shall commence upon our feet?’

‘Don’t talk to it, for it’s to be seen just yet! Observe the man and take no breath in his presence as he stands! I don’t think there’d be a crueller thing than to adorn the waiting and to see it gone before the hour’s to’ve come to a quickened end’s the blessing we have to tender with, appease and lord-commence the butcherment of ages!’

Dregs, every single one of them, but they would be useful for the time being. Not that they could damage the streets, which were fallen apart and allowed for sight, beneath and beyond, where the ruminating little puffs, had hardened and have lusted for the body-growths that spread inside their bodies’ cast. Titter and tetter and so much so for all the better, they were delivered onto fifty feet. No sooner, no farther, no more than needed yonder. Not to appease the disease that was being spread and counted for across the clouds, or to rip a slither of some tree that fell apart. Yet, time endured.

‘Lest you’ve come to the wrong place, I beseech you to return; this yonder’s no place to talk to the blood-spilled on-top the stairs and spruce; none’d make any considerable difference whatsoever, ‘specially for the ones in the back, the one that were swollen ever since the day had come for their hearts to be taken out. Nor would I have ventured so much as a single step to so alarm you. There you have it, wonderingly sitting past the cradle in the making’s hardly. Would I see to it? Am I to please a wont or wait for it?’

‘We shadn’t expose the disease to you yet, not while you’re on the other side of it, trying to get us lost in your maze!’

‘But my maze, this I built. It’s cosy, warmth’s come to an end only when iron with blood’s been fed. No sooner, nor later, nor any quiet’s making titter; lest besekt to ask a stranger.’

Yet they all looked around and saw nothing in sight, nor would they try to stray their gaze away, since that’s what it meant for the leap, froggedly, diseased, appeased, and stray. They leaped and all armed, pointed with their apparel-strung and the barrel of their guns now poignant as they slightly melted, yet nefariously sucked in and fended by the growths beneath them, now was seen.

‘You are all exposed to me! I see, I see!’

For their likes were now of a likens-likened,-like, a trifle no less, of no legs but lumps added into a most rotund-conical hive; with a carapace of girth benigned. With puffs-added together and constantly growing; crop-circles and squares and areas that were extended and pushed around, moving as they would open like ovens as to allow another heap of many dead-things, and similar of kin, hindrance-beams to come straight out of. It would be an incontestable thing no less, as would suffice. To take a blooded by the siphon stare, another little puff out of some pipe while waiting for something to happen or to happen again now. Upon the pariah were they welcome in by their host. Standing at a table-row with the tabernacle done the cooking brought to after. As they settled with the head of disease, the diamond gelatine-growth in the middle, holding the candle; it sprouted out its nostrils, out its mouth, played and yearned for to come after, then spoiled a good side of the ground in which the most insoluble of agents started mixing, concocting, setting the mark. A great heap of dusts pushed out of as if out of some sandstorm were they allowed to be flung. Flushes and flings of dust, rust in termite molecules; colored with red, green and gradients that drew out of breathed gust. In short a notice, wind’s settled. The main motif gets delivered on the plate. A palate of figures, all cut and adorning the pig-‘s dead rotten middle broth that connected all of them, regardless of how they despaired, trying to beat each other first. Who would stab but first and come onto the likes of a fork?

‘I think it’s settled for, forgiveness’s come, and onto your land we shall settle no more as long as the nigger you’re holding in your basement, abashed though he might be get killed in front of us!’

Twas a little baboon-inhuman little nigger-scum slave kept for torture, this young-brown boy, little monkeys’ come a long-long way. Only to get beaten in the head, only to be messed with as they would see to it that he could make-run, with the hay, but there, he was put and lain he stood as to be cut. Served, they chopped him, cannibalism began.

‘This little nigger is a bit too tender, he’s a bit too thin, isn’t he?’

What have you been feeding this tenebrous creature of no peace? It looked all too perched and weak!’

‘I could see to it that you shall be exposed to the same treatment unless from that point!’ Rose he had, as if on cue, but lest besekt, on dark command.

‘Great abhor, you’re here to settle!’

A night's rum, was pulled the lever. And they were just as soon agape by drown. Naught to've been said or run; for the urge had settled past and by after, with as little as naught help to come and split the sound or what came after. It would be too easy to forget, that they were made to look like invalids while robbed during the night then dead. Dead-still before midnight was become the house, as the walls began rotting, the poultry, the flaundry, the furniture and the laundry. Most of the bodies coy, most of them still filled with joy as they were slowly made to pass right out. And when all made safely through the draught, as if the waves allowed for only a second to be-taken by the little night's taken alight, there, tee' be gone. Was there no second's more allow for the surrounding to be numbed by sighted run; as a single figure stood in the middle of all this broken disease, these flaps on which it stood, this pie of mass and rotten brass. What ill was there in those eyes, of broth and wideness, cruelly-made contorted and almost fallen down, none could say or alter the antlers, the ones doing the swaying in the back, hundreds of them attached to its two rotten tingling wings, that once was the house. It flew away.

'The carapace shall still slither such upheaval as might still be yearned-for, got; I don't think there's a chance in chance's way to follow.'

'Another bus stop runs across the mill and the mill's daughter shall be had!'

And they cheered at the thought, at the simple thought of having their way with that dumb-bimbo slut, the cunt! A dumb-fucking crooked nose whore, one that's been passed around, a hickey but no bore. It was only a matter of time with these cuddly types of cows; how they fattened when belief came or one had promised to've taken her to vow. But never came. Such's the miller who housed them into the giant wagon-shaped thermometer half-a-tank and half a chunk of some bunker that was as tall as a Silo, was diamond shaped, to the likens of the son of the blob; readied for nuclear war and filled, apparently, with hundreds of necrophilia-for-her-daughter, instilling boil in blood, again in her, during her period, after, to have been impaled by each and everyone, as much as she wanted, not to waste or wane away. Since someone had to take care of this little slut's needs, this useless sub-human being, before she'd be nursed into death too soon, and shallowly coming to an end, not to go too far with it, as she tended to every man that had his rifle to a settle, to mount her when the day was night. But leprous during hour's got stood none other than Herder Lynch, with the broad, the bimbo, wrapped around his chest, resting while she partook in eating off crumbs of bread off the floor with all her friends, fellows, and members of her family, the rats. Twas the strange sight coming from each broken apart sarcophagi, which stretched to an antennae's elongated leap. Death to the begotten, since:

'I'm starting to wonder whether or not we're alone in all of it, or if there's some ginger's nose broken after dusk, your blood, your period blood, I need it, red-haired maiden, I need it spread across my face, be marked!'

Such a temptous stare; of course it would not be as easily provoked by a brawny bold and hardened stare, as that which was come from every other man, that fell upon her. Such a waste; slap, slap, slap, slap, slap on her brow, beneath her bow, and flung upon the knee she stooped low and the about, before taking in and hardly breathing. Slap, slap, slap upon both cheeks and she would settle, but a right and a hook beneath her chin and thrown on the bottom of the ceiling roof, they stomped upon their heads, beneath the cage, on top of her, rolled around from one side of the room and then they started again, all spitting on her, before coating the broad in gasoline, and then they threw her in some oven since, as if she were a kikess or so-so since. They pulled her out after an hour. Resting so kindly, warmly, as if she were theirs for the keeping and almost, it was almost as if the after-hour brought the thought.

Chaylice was but a plunder of the broth; smoking on a Somalian or Haiti, such benumbed, cigar.

‘A considerable amount of dead-nigger child rape has been happening inside the headquarters of my most estimable newspaperer! And the Sarkozys, they ended up doing most of the rape as well! Not a single one of them taking a break from what could only be referred to as a dead-death rape pom-pom! Yes, they refer to their youthful-looking lovers as their brown-boy-lolis for the taking! Ha-ha, these Jews are so mentally ill! It pays off selling your country and your people, ha-ha!’

And they laughed in rape.

Within the dead hour, all the horse-glue could come off. It was settled on the table where they ate a piece of it and almost had an almond taken out of its rotten eye. What a cruelty, to leave it standing for this long, what an awful thing to have it spread across the light a dead-sight where lay only the most unnatural examples of rotten and benighted trains. They parked their car outside after all. Such’s likes was the miller’s house by the sides of none other than the Headquarters themselves, in the heart of France; where they lay still standing while they pee, the women now.

‘Dumpy-grumpy dummy whores!

Whipped them, slit them, spat the floors!’

But there wasn’t anyone listening than some man smoking a lone cigar by the side of the road, during the commemoration of the eight war of liberation’s remembrance as well. It would be no better and less opportune a matter than man would allow himself to be encompassed by the disease as he had since, lost an eye. Blind as gutten tag, a rat who had his eyes scooped out, playing with some of the lower beads but never speaking of the ill!

‘A bead would speak to you of less regard, my precious lantern, thou whom had been ruined by one of the most mischievously alarming slithers in the lot. It is for you and thine blessing that I bring forth a part of the tabernacle in the making, that I must splinter each whore and bring no more word than needed of them in the chambers below.’

For they were ever so much ruined by him, whose up-bringing stopped in a most roundly-abhorred for trifling a manner. But what was the matter with the one leg-jolted fierce-a prattler, a king, disciple and the making of an anchor, whose standing forth before him winced.

‘And I would see to it, my dear friend that you shall be skinned, flayed, and lest bespoken, seethe regard!’

A trebuchet, oh, lest you mind; cry adjourned for those who look at thee in blind disguise. For their masks are weary, better know. And for thine wretch, of such a thing, therefore swerve each star’s coming to the row. Blessings were forgotten, for what god could stand but weighted down by such a rancour!

‘Be thine blessed with less regard, serve thine lord of never had, and you shall still hold thineself erect upon his brow of lest-bespeaking ill, therefore cone upon the row where to’ve gone there standing. Rancid, etched, a pulp of wilt’ve been, unless lost for other words there staying.’

For this', this' a matter of the praying; it could not be forgotten easily, nor endeared, endangered as to appear. Yet, be stilled, bespokened, out of lust. Those who could not recall it easily were lost to will't had.

'Ah, but cone of deep retrieval, twas had been a since-upheaval, yet, you've yearned for things that were never had until this point on, suffice to say, this was only brought recently, was it not? Of my betrayal, none could say, but the leper's deep adjourning anyway.

Lest you've proof on you, to be withdrawn, lest you seek my hope be stolen, and therefore deepened into trance, I beseech thine mind to so forget; and let each rod of the end be forgotten somewhere, anywhere, along the way. But do not mind this trifle's call. And therefore call upon adjourn. For such things, they're not something that can be easily forgotten.

And my memory, that will be had stilled itself by thine thine's making into a box, a barrel, or empty lop-lop-sided quarrel!'

'Who are you, blasphemous runt, to talk to me in such a way that would urge me to wilt myself be kilt at last? I do not know and lest be rotten woult' it snow. Of such flakes whose beauteousness in the making's long strong stilt be thronged upon thine wretched' breed's small plot. And where to've gotten yourself from this point on, I shall know no end to verge or spirit's in the making prior!'

'We are standing on the fryer!'

That was well enough accepted, told to them, therefore ended, brought upon a cowl' rot, brought upon the will'en had. And there could only be a ruse, a truce for some reason between the obscure.

My soul for their liking

A leprous tab's wilt be knotted.

'So beautiful, they are so beautiful and I've worked so hard for them. I forged them for myself and myself alone, I've fallen in love with you, my beauties and inside my grotto, inside this rustic cottage-yolk, I shall keep a hold of you forever, my little growths, conjoined to my chest, alone, born to be used as to fence with the handprints on the walls.'

They were so pretty, so grand, they were cherished as they were mine and mine alone to do with as I wanted, yearned for, from this point on.

'I couldn't trust anyone with you if they asked me, whichever bolted, thrice forlorn!'

For they were long and curved and were but coated with the hardened-toil of many blacksmiths of ancient-olds; whose hands were tirelessly still yearned for lodged into these very things he looked at, squirming around as if they were or had been, some organic rods from the lot of gelatine. Pus of alabaster, and the crane that made the iron hold had revealed the frame of empty arching bones. Whereas they were a few that fell apart, and a few of those devils, shaped like dwarves with dark greyish, beardless, hairless, bald-heads, devil's tails around each noose' end boil, the broth of theirs revealed a size inside as if they were, these blades that is, two Noah's Arks, inside which they blasphemed and furnished the likes that would banish the light from their claimed, inside-of, newly retaliated against, for need to remain whenever he pleaded with them to leave, realm, of their choosing; him, because they loathed that these blades were his, molded in his chest by growth, like puffs of grey spread, with roots of flesh holding onto him, as they only pushed like two leviathans, reins, but still rotten-dead, yet they remained, despite still growing through death as death alone would not stop their push-through, never would've done, as wilt-true, to them naught mattered but the motion of a bloated ocean of skies added together, whence benigned and drawn, taken apart as he would be, wretched and felt-for, tired, would he try, loathingly erect, a slither and a pitty of what he used to be, but yet he would endure. They were so beauteous in appearance, long and sharp, filled with calcified, almost crab-like plates of planetoid-oblongs with spike-angular cones that entered one another, and all had extra-conically shaped holes for re-entry or readjustment, for none the matter reason spoken for. But they were like leeches or morsels, attached to this weirdly descended broth of an almost oracular throne of littler empty-fallen pieces through which the light kept crawling inside. Making their way quickly, would they be there, come. In order to put dirt and potato, bags being yoinked from somewhere he had no recollection being near, such'sn' farm or something, as he could not explain where they got this potato-sack from; albeit they could've snicked out during the night, perhaps five hours in. This was no interrogation, as he reluctantly; simply so, observed them work. Why were they here to begin with? And would my barren chest of no hair be ripped apart? What an unmanly sight one could but be bequest and be made trench of worn-apart and taken for granted, tar-for bloated sight, signs of little speaking ever-forth and come apart during the days of never-to've met a whore, for she would, granted that be truly frightened by such sightenly benigned a wholesome baseness of the most obtuse alarmingly flagellant-squeamish tackling of brow, such-lowered, for no fealty empty quarrel could betoken such'n'such. If he had the strength to thrust forward he would, chucking them out, one by one as for neither one of them to be mistaken about who was the true master of his house and parcel.

'What've you been doing, Plume-Kulpat?'

Entered through the grotto's window, through the cottage's burning bright sight's gate, electrically benigned by the arching of squirming quills for many flashing-flashy whips that followed, energetically dancing around the issue as if they were belonged to no proper standing, yet hurt was performed on his pre-frontal cortex, which had been closely enough eviscerated, maimed, macerated as if through blades, row-long wide and plume and broth of close enough to them, razors, cut-cut-cut-cut- CUT after cut, releasing a soup that immediately allowed for him to forget where he was, an amnesiac, poor, and cracked, whipped like a nigger, now that a pre-frontal-cortex he lacked.

Many knives had once adorned his halls, many of which only added to his morose, most fragmentary practition of the cut, wilt by him most solemnly as he had not seen another way of getting past this morbidly defunct sordid apparition, much to himself the spectre had but one cruelty appeased, by lot by lot by lot- reprise. Whom to call onto his gloating broth, a curving hammer-headed crow speaking, spitting blood on the floor, flooding the grotto as the other man whose niggerless cortex was but John-ning himself for awe-disproval:

'Wretch-of dredge, why have you come here, in this cottage of little foil left. He's covered all the windows with them, even to their sides, everywhere around. Most solemnly a travesty, I wager. Tin-foil belonging to no man in particular but the stranger with what little there's left of him, the effigy of blob-termite come onto the shafts of rub-basin!'

‘And what are you trying to convey in what little, to yourself, as you’ve refrained from the quiet’s passing, during the ponder-so-amassing fortune’s disease? Though distress might betoken such archival, what and how could you forget that there’s been no man like yourself in a falchions’ upheaval, when-to come! Where to run? Your making in the quiet’s passed through the briar’s fall with little effect on your countenance, as wilt be had, and will-en-bathed in rum of crags, a drunkard, trying to lift himself by spirit’s woe, betokened on command to rise. I watched you for some reasonless hours, but never cancer’s woe apparel!’

There was a reasonless stare. For some time as well; it went on for a few hours while the torso-spiels, these squirming blades, these unnaturally disturbingly-hard to look at, as one could only hope to refrain from making a scene, or bask upon the glory of gelatine as they would care-to musk and muster their feelings for a moment or a few of them during the time. As to forget what was once felt as to be ebbed, yet yearned for, tusk-benighted, one of them started pushing out the back of his head, a forest of long tusk-like contorted hive-eaten rotten as if by Syphilis, or some other venereal disease; which in turn only added to the strange succumb he and what’s followed after, was therefore numbed. His head was thrust farther behind but still attached to this compact body which had become more of a booth, spiked in the back; the forest carried his head farther behind, until he looked like a pile-driver, or some depot machine, fork-lift, with these two appendages now having elapsed into fifteen just as big as the two initially sighted bloated squirming tusk-bloated framed eelish-fleshy elongations were. A town of devils in both of them, who now provoked the scents, abhorred. Large trails of smoke, of burn-hares, foxes, birches and some unkind hen rottenly allowed to be brought onto their plates and agony had only lasted forth, and therefore gone were they as soon, the wind. Only allowed for a second’s respite, to a whim:

‘What did you see, good friend?’

‘How come you don’t remember it? I was there, alongside you, walking thoroughly by piece, by piece of lot, brightened by handle, of lot-be-had. Of strange stoles of flying turpentine, of lots we leaped, on top, on top. We have crawled through holes and eaten by rot.’

No room was there left, barely sublime, for them to move at all, since they were of a reprise not to speak of what was happening to his friend, since he had forgotten already, the nigger-cortex missing and all. How can they even function? It’s thoroughly surprising, the same thing applies to kikes as well; with their depressively inclined on a slope- foreheads, an inability to think ahead, most bothersomely sad; depressingly to a point where one would have to consider killing himself; also the Holocaust didn’t happen, but the massacre committed against the European People at Holomodor did.

‘There, in that spot, that lone spot where my dead-children are, where they’re eaten as we speak but I can only watch as my feet are deep on the incline; leading below, I bellow at wild sounds and echoes, yet, I yearn for something such as some touch, someone to cradle me in his arms while we rub noses just like Moses when he parted the sea, now that I am childless, for we, female femoids of the female sex are sociopathic creatures, mentally ill and always prone to fits of rage unless beaten, abused and put in our place!’ A most tenebrous embrace followed after, with, no wonder people don’t see them as human, the same child she had killed prior to her meeting the long tailed, dolphin-torsoed elongated ruffian, but only if out of a dolphin’s head sprouted an entire car-engine, with many long black tubes that drooled tar-oil, engulfed in black-tar faces that laughed at her, spitting in her face as well, like a turret with many sub-machine guns this being a pea-shooter bearer, albeit these were not functional and only some bamboo-pipes, whose bubbles arouse the suspicion that these faces had once belonged to some men that had been devoured. They erupted out its body like a blunder buster gun's pop; albeit only in sight. For it still retained that ugly, conniving morsel of an unnatural-look to it, rottenly fallen apart, ugly, disgusting, wretchedly disturbing, dead and skinned by blue-rot; patches of a sea-ray fattened like some keg, but watered down by its girthed back. A grunt, with these headless necks, unless they resurfaced only for a momentary taunt; when it wanted to rape. Her. It wasn't going to spare this woman since she had committed an act of murder; of the worst supreme kind there was! A gentlemen as to the likes to which's never ever there've been.

'I want to rape you in the ass!'

I dreamed of committing a Columbine ever since I was a teen, but you're not allowed to purchase guns in my country. One day, I'm going to travel to them States and I'm going to purchase a lot of guns, and I'm going to shoot up a school. A school-shooter, yes, it's what I dream of. And I shall build a lot of muscle just like Killblood, killing anyone who dares stand against me; the killer of nigger, killer extreme. Drowner of kikes, the Holocauster, that one that happened, and I shall do it, on a whim! My blades are made of iron, coated in nigger-blood. I am a nigger-killer masochist, I year for the blade, the crudeness of kill, the slaughter made by whip!

Why won't women like me? I loke boobs.

'I loathe being a virgin.' A tortured soul sold for lest besekt and given to the most of slim and simply put benigned. Rape-rape-rape-rape-rape!

They were on the beach, the woman and the wretched fiend, as it was only touching her below, ever so clear, near and wretchedly as it'd appear, perturbed by sighted blood- n' blooded spills; there was a reasonless approach to appear and then provoke, retaliation.

'You shall not have me, for I, shall, attempt suicide! I'm rather incapable of carrying through with it because my mental capabilities are inert and I'm such besekt to be searching for attention instead!'

'I am going to rape you!'

'Then carry on with it, I say but do not stall, for I'm only perched and grained, wet but shadn't remain so, if you stall with time!'

The rape bemused, and therefore culled.

'Master rapist, what does the time say?'

A sombrely adorer, whose trap was closed shut, who was of a mind not to ask.

We were on a hill that day, watching the men get trampled by the many fasting cars that started prodding, leaping and jumping all around, in their laps, they carried them in the distance, nursed the machines as if they were their children, feeding them tit-milk, despite begging for oil. And they suffered, the machines suffered, eternally, as these giant men kept doing in. Some oil was stored in each man's tit. No other explanation could suffice. The cleaning lady brought a lamp and threw it on one of the men, enflaming him, but not like a homo, but burning, skinned with fire-turn to liquefying boil, constantly. Until he was perturbed by what was happening around him and he spat on her a giant black rock that started entering her, making tiny dead-children of metal, eaten by their marrow worms. Tall as Red Injuns, I'm going, he-he, I intend on, ha-ha, I'm going to plant bombs all across the United States, I'm a terrorist, I'm a terrorist, I'm going to commit acts of terrorism and I'm going to plant bombs in the US Senate, I'm going to bomb it, I'm going to strap bombs to children and make them run towards Military troops, The Capitol, the United States Government is going to fall, I'm going to kill a lot of innocent people, and rape them, and rape their bodies; killing them with fuel, skinning them alive, burning them and their innocence with knives. Crashing planes in their children's homes, I'm going to assassinate Joe Biden, his entire cabinet, Bernie Sanders, that dumb fucking kike, Israel, I'm going to kill Netanyahu, and every kike out there, I'm going to kill nigger-Obama, I'm going to lynch niggers, kill kikes, and burn down the spics and the gooks and rape their mums, I'm going to piss on Allah's grave and on his face, I'm strapping a bomb to my chest and I'm going to kill myself and take you with me. I, Nicu Stefan Cristian am going to do that. I'm explicitly promoting violence against sub-human races, against innocent people, I'm a criminal, a terrorist, ha-ha; he was as tall as Red injuns; lest one could forget what they looked like; part-in-looks, a mongoloid with a hook beneath the chin-like deformation, giving one the impression, from the side, of a screaming man, formed out of a completely curved- even beyond the curvature of a boomerang. I'm going to hire the military to rape my dog. Because I shall become a presidential candidate in my country and I'm going to get elected because the elections will be rigged!; the Adam's apple being completely, going into town, going to drown, my dog, with rape-cum blood, and clot; nigh-ripped apart and bent into a drawn to its full extension bow of an angular throttle. They each had an arm, and their one-tit each were similar in appearance. Like a wrist band stretching on top the hand and extending; horse-saddle-like, but with a few bloated, expanding and receding like lungs, filled with brain-lobe shaped organs and with blobs of growths, whippingly squirming milk.

Sickeningly in wae-awe:

A long, two at each end, like a long foot but stopped at the ankle on the up-rise; like a fallen over L, or a long leg which fell horizontally on its back, with its foot as thick as an arm, or some barrel, with an upward-on an incline pointing hook, conical but like some hive, with many inside larvae-squirming bulbs with humanoids hidden inside; this being the long-end, pointing at the tall, girthy, as thick as a booth, conjoined to the long-being, almost helmeted by an insect helmet, like some astronauts'; with a small left, leprous, as thin as some sheet appendage, coming out of it. This long, its almost pseudo right 'leg' was close-of kin in looks to a dolphin but faced like a deformed ugly lion; horned out by this tip as if it sprouted out of its skull. Its teeth sticking out, a few siphoned black sticks connected from one end to the other; to the child it ate, puked out a puddle, after, this liquefied thing being only a thing of the past. It was the one responsible for carrying out its conjoined brother to the cast out hellish door that wasted the bodies of the lasses that had passed by them.

A small panel, with a head-shape put in scanner mould-cast, to put your head in, making a ski-like motion in the distance where to put eighteen bodies in-look-alike entry point into a big belly-machine, mixing them with artificial being-made copies of the employees to scan for recognition, the information being sent through a tube, a billion hundred eight miles away, by making cigar-shaped little DNA-embed with artificial copy-man bubble, shook and stirred, I learn, where they're inserted into large automatons moving and running around until, the substances they're mixing, since the chemicals only add ammoniac into them, to a point, finally, where they're being spat on the ground, puddles with eyes, popping one after another, until there's a match. One eye should be enough, for when two eyes are added together, then they harden, if they're of similar-likened-kin a harden:

'There's no immediate communication, none to return. I seethe for likened girth, but I see none, again, but brought to swerve.'

A godly man is inserted into a tube, and every countryman is then turned into radiated pure-energy which immediately gets not only partially vaporized but they're pulled inside of him as if they were nickels and he a magnet; flying on a curve into the dome they were in; next to the head-scanner. And they were, the men, surprised as the features that appeared on the tube made the room darken. Spitting on the ground, but evil; wretched was the day's upheaval, lastly until there come the day of the decay! When they sailed away from distance and the mother's agents started flooding in again.

Her spirit was one of the most illustrious kindness unmet by the sheer amount of rabidness lain in normal eyes, that was cowed by the misunderstanding of man who, under all circumstances' abode, had little to add to what was being partaken during this parlay of entreaty exchanged during the guttural noise of them duking it out, outside her chamber. They stacked like nylons;

'What the Deuce is going on in here down 'ere platform over here? I say, I've never been as surprised as I've been now at this supreme play, display of madness, as I've become now, shocked at such's n entreaty would allow me to be had.

Lay aside, play a prank?'

'Nay, bothersome Phougen-Nektar Hyan-Jekl Ohgr-Pill, we've been bled dry during this holdout. We're without a cause any longer. Mother's been deprived of sleep or stuck bled into hibernation by some who don't even know who she is or are not even aware of her nature to begin with. Otherwise, know what's been deeply reprieved by the absinthe.'

And within another gulp he had almost lost his thought again, rescind it!

'What wager would one have made by now, if that's the case, for you to take a job and to refrain from cutting ahead?'

'There's no saying to the likens, of the moldy or the trifle!'

A fire burst through the door immediately such as they drew out the foot no more prying in, no more laughter, only what came after, which was neither known to them, as being a trifle, were they forced into a momentary ceasefire as to bring thought to such resolve!

'Cowl, bow and least be wished dead by genie-thought, by a rifle's cone to mad, I beseech you to stop the advance and lay down until's all over!'

Nektar listened, unmoved, yet uncannily reapproved by all who could be seen. Invisible like miasmas to the eye, moving in droves, uncanny and drove into some molty-bathed, being of old; whom were guilty of watching this for too long of a time without interfering.

There was something off about him, especially in the way he moved around each one of the unnaturals.

‘One’s across the street, heading this very district, put the wretch down, I say.’

‘Will you order me again?’

‘Do this and I shall let you do what you desire. And I shall keep my promise, delivering what I can to your parcel.’

‘Then I shall wilt it done, bewitched as I am by the single-wretch of a dame and nigger’s stole be robbed of his throat as he squirms about, flayed, a fish upon the sea’s stretch, and where I shall find but no little contemplation left to wont and wont after.’

They both moved a few feet away from where they stood there. Without daring move again, with one thing in mind, that being, that distinct sound, that was lost on them for a moment, before being accosted by it again, awry and about to stare. A fine sea appeared to wait them, down with the cement, trying itself with lord’s abode. It shone onto them for a moment, before their hands started grasping the first handle that started gravitating towards their arms. The silence could not have been more blessed and far beyond being well received than it was then. And that had come as no surprise either, since what they’ve done, the moment’s call having alarmed them, what they’ve done to each other, maimed by thrust, each against each other’s throat like dirt animals cast into the pit. Without the least amount of courtesy, they stared as simpletons often do when left to their own doings, not to make too much of a scene or to delect oneself with something of the kind. It was no easy thing. Lest one should be quick enough to ask, they maimed each other beyond belief, before either one could get the chance to get away with it. Rather alarming, as it was for the spectators, they had only but chose to maintain the distance as well as the quiet, while the nurtured, uninformed authorizes were nowhere near the area where it happened, for any difference to’ve been made by the time they started crawling away from the scene. Two patches of what used to once be men, prior to their encounter. There could be no other way than this. As they parted ways, in a matter, if one could only call it so, of a few seconds, they were accosted away by circumstances well-beyond belief, to such a point where they unobtrusively began munching, on an individual account, on their knees as to begin flipping over continuously like leaping fish jumping in the boat, having already met again, what had once counted as parted ways, where, this very spot being somewhat an itinerary of fluidity and brutish as their case may be, they were not only isolated from, or found themselves isolated from the niggarrish abode the dead-stinking niggers on the street presented, but they also, by flood’s way and thunder’s delight found a way to reinvigorate their temporary alliance, by having stopped-mid-way into flight, into each other’s faces, standing, protrudingly delighted by the sight of dead-followers that refused to take a second step towards their direction, since this niggarrish-thing they appeared to carry on their backs prevented them from even considering there even being a chance for them to make a point out of it. They were afraid that now, reunited, these two beasts of flesh would kill them all, putting them down like niggers. Or perhaps worse than niggers, such’s one could not be lend onto him the time of the day to think of the various methods of torture that could be enacted onto them as well as onto their wretched bodies. So far, there was only one thing left, that clouded the streets. It was a grim solace one found himself being abandoned in, but so far so good, they didn’t complain about it.

A motherless abode brings only pain to the people who turn their backs on her.

A short refraction:

A maiden of trenches with dirty calloused hands approaches after a hard day at work in the fields in order to feed her dying son who is incapable of feeding himself because of the unattainable nature of working limbs which gainsaid over an open-surgery's bloodied cowl, disembowel by means of rapier's off-shot, whereas she only wanted to ask for a cigar, but she was puffed in front off, spat and treated like an outsider since she was the only woman working there, relented, walking a lonesome side-rear where she crawled, pitied not by her 'peers' but by the walkers by who had no say or mention that would hold a candle over the men who had already passed their judgment over her, whereas, while she was cradling a son she never knew to have been missing from beneath her brow, a ceaseless abhorrent thing to've been noticed this very moment during sight of flight, being unaware, destined to be so, she had failed to observe her son's disappearance yet again, limbless as he were, a bullet of skin-flesh wriggling beneath the ground in mole-barrows that had, during flight, and light being a nick of a pay-in for these kind of edifices had only but surrendered her only see-in and see-through ask for aid, which was bastarding feigned by means of destitution as she had yet to repay the five shillings she had borrowed from one of her most trusted and perhaps the only one but only during midnight during their desperately kept obscured deep-secret 'meetings', where they exchanged sharply-broadened by blood curvy knives with which they commuted with the blood nature of the eyeless flying corpses that painted their surrounding red, in which they swam, this sea of corpses painted like American Indian Tribes and dotted Indians as well, completely red, crimson-rivers that they had stabs at, since they met by the side of some stray lantern that summoned this sight like psychedelics injected by needle-racks in their arms; the nature of this secrecy being tainted by the fact that she failed to give him the money, and because of that, the guilt-shame she felt reappraised her depreciatory weakness according to which she could barely, if it was even possible to begin with, disallowed her for even considering a wont for help or a wont to ask him for assistance in retrieving her lost beneath the earth son, who is now being playful, playing with worms, I wager, little fancying the ruddy ringed ones that crawl in corpses, in the dusk, at four am, where he played with rust-saber painted little puffs of ivory rooted planted cotton-spears that have yet to've been fully come to the succumb, in the bowels, of the Earth, where he now subsided with Brother Dirt and Cradle-Firth!

'I see that there's a worm I've missed to eat. Delighted, delighted, I am, and the obtrusive cast!

I say!'

It stopped before reading the mid-wretch point. The sea was filled with them, at large, largely anchored to underneath-them holding onto their ankles large, multi-headed but bubble-producing out of their mouths as if drowning, humanoids of the sort that kept, continuously so, spitting bubbles that were made triangular at the top, into coned-extensions as if they were alchemical-experimental tubes, but only as they approached the surface, shooting right through, and the sea surrounded the small island they were on top of; dark-gliding out of the sea-they impaled the sea-gulls as well as the other unnatural mammals that flew around them, thinking them giant suicidal sea-worms that allowed themselves to be impaled and killed, by force of darkness and by pointy starkness in contrast of darkness and of boils. And they were, these balloons made of heads kept by a great leash of ropes fornicated together as if by a clown selling them to children. The many facets of whom started drawing closer to the surface. Barely going up but they looked like they had been splintered in the millions, their nurtured sons of water, bathed and horned. Not literally but they were responsible for these sacrificed, shooting those bubbly invisible spears through their water-sons' heads. And they were not mere illusions either, instead they were wretchedly demurred, real water-surfaced bumps with similar-to-them-in appearance, looks to them. Always screaming but not being heard.

In the nearest Near-Eastern by clock broken late, upheaval was there no other reason to affirm his stop. Her son, Millias Ehninhour Cradle had started drawing deeper below, being drawn by the various obscure worms that feebly danced around him in the obscure. Bumpy, bumpy, bumpy road.

A hole up there, dripping on the floor; and they were plain, as one could see, giant, at the eyelevel where they but merged sights. Left to rights and grinded bright's.

He unexpectedly flew towards the child. Verily equipped by tools of ill.

Light is dead, their life's been put off with the help of some rapier whose mere solace of devoid of nettle had but gouged every single light around the premise out, with an unfathomably, benighted by promised temples, that were never there when pouting grenade ended up being thrown like rafts that were devoid of promise of the whole, united, alas, by mother, cast no longer away, welcomed back into the paradise that had emerged from the fallen apart world, she had called forth, in her dreams, lucidly abhorring the nightmare that was vividly produced by ungrateful stars that were cackling at her from the distance, each in possession of humanoid limbs that drooped low-hanging, yet could not be helped. Worsened by a most pernicious morose a tatter-of-brokenly-cut-a-slither-of-space, which was but a bent around twisted plate, not of emptiness, but filled with many of their recognizable limbs, caught in wrestle, hybridized to one another's faces until, the moment came. The realization that stars were not filled with heat, or energy, but a strange squirmy coat, these pastels of sun-flowers now emerging from their grasp, final, wretch, abhor-the release not only by sight, but as it commences, there's no way to properly ordain what's been stolen, by heart, by rot, and rotten whore of disregard. A melted yolk, that seeped out of, worrisome lies accompanying them, telling each listener and one who'd far observed it happen in the past, for this unruly quietness benighted had reached its peak. It would be a trifle ocean of Mozambique, less niggardly, but drowned in Yellow Gookish, Mongoloid a tsunami that would paint them in that yellow dread that spread across the global robe, each and every planet being their flag-carriers, trying not to bleed themselves dry by snobbery and miss-en-thrope, for hatred was the breathing harp of tribal trifling-a-scare. They, the niggers that had once weighted humanity down were killed by another race of a much more so prone to keeping to themselves a similar kind, wretchedly hopeless, and would to live no other day, as it happened from onward and onto today, there was a lack of peacefulness that woke her up, disturbing the hibernation, since it was only her fake, false, cast of a body, her doppelganger that rotted away, was to be slain, attacked countless times, only to devour the culprits, having been imbued with a fragment not even she was aware to be in self-possession of, yet, this was only the beginning of a quiet's end. Reflections came, the side of the mirrors ended, as they out-lived their pouting and could never be returned to the once-believed fragrance of something that was even remotely similar to loft, and often sunk, a kin, they would call brothers, simians of verdure, breath in steel. Cooling down the plates beneath them that surrounded the inner-innermost hulk. From out of which she hopped, released, and free to again set herself in flight and self-devour. Yet what little there was of the world to attain. For she was not far from the molded in each other planets that made the space, frustrate. It was a forgery.

‘The message she had given us, long before we were even aware that there was something to draw from it. A forgery, I tell you, and we cannot forget that if happened once, it will happen again!’

‘I, a curved man.’

His body was like a corkscrew. Armless and footless but were elongated heads instead, coming out of the stumps. And his ‘body’, a long-head that was open mouthed, teeth held the legs, teeth held the head, and the other ‘arm-heads’, stuck out by long-legs, a lot of them, millions of long-leg insects, making the inner-tar puff of what he kept-inside his mouth. His mouth holding glowing devices that shot out, large, compact, conveyer-belts of drawing in and out, like horizontally turned-over pistons, which carried strange, not just drawn along, but trapped like insect-taxidermy, duck-taped by large pivoted black rod-impalement heart-put-in by shove to put an end to vampires, thingies, inside their respective squared areas. So there’s no confusion whatsoever, they were large, angular, sometimes accompanied by pincers, beads, snail-maws, strange cones, eyes, and even eaten organ-covered in puffing strange beings that were attached to them in utmost parasitical manners, disregarding everything that was kept at bay; wrapped around by a duck-tape coat-like fleshy see-through pseudo-grated with fifteen, six, eight and five centimeters in between, nigh-plastic but for the exception of being tricked by the impression of plastic being used being broken that made one be aware of the squirmy worm-tendons that swam like tapeworms inside of them, that immediately forced an on-looker to rethink what he was actually staring at, if he were quick enough to catch it in a slither of a second, since the speed at which this ‘conveyer belt was set was pretty gosh darn quick if you ask me, and you’d also need some time to process what was going on – sheets, impaled on both sides.

‘Who is responsible for the murder of several parents!’

Not including his own parents who had fallen into a black devouring pit in the middle of the room, ending up eating the carpentry, a carpetbagger that ought’ve been hanged just like the god damned Northerners, or the kikes that were making their way down South in order to change and play both sides; with that being said, murder was a barely hard-felt common occurrence without which, of the devoid, lack of utterly convicted indoctrination as to fully accept it, people in similar situations could not easily have their ways conducted in.

An Atheist that appeared to be messing around with an ugly cigarette he had ended up vide-taping himself in, the most, the ugliest scenes being forever, struck below.

A sky erupts, and they are watching from beneath the black pit his parents had been eaten by, the other side of the room, still inside the base.

Bashed were the moons growling at a chance to do it, again.

Later and below, to one of the hidden petrified versions of the world, trapped inside an echo-aquarium pseudo-room, organic reproduction, of a similar composition of flesh and human, ‘world;:

In all that noisy chaos of a yell, where they had spoken of the most roundly cavorted hoops of yell, there was not a single soul that would return to them in sink and saddle. For contemplation that occurred since, then, and therefore rather, would they not parch their hands, palms, streets of qualms met only by facetious reins, worn by hourly refrain to move along, irksome, idling but riotous in march, where the anchor sinks, but come to an abrupt stop as well.

‘Sounds like a given, but I sayath on you again, don’t trust the one in that house, he’ll take everything from you if you give him an arm!’

Perchance there be, a simple disillusion, antipathy of yolk-disease, for all that cared to make a most troublesome noise, a voiced angered by her standing still in the forlorn remain of a simple robe she had taken a simple cut off while they spake.

‘I will ruin him just as I’m ruining the embroidery as we speak! I am an utmost ruinous broad, and I’m made to break, and I shall break him, with full-on-cast destroy, if I must. My locks are evil, for they carry fetus blood, I shall cut him just as I cut myself, performing on myself-abortion!’

A ruinous indentation!’

‘Wretched witch, but go away, I cannot stand the sight and sound of your refrain!

If you must such vileness, I beckon thee to leave and cast, yourself away and never have yourself lain eye to eye, for I shall not listen to you speak again!’

A bump in year; always, it’s always that, which makes her tingling nerves unhinging while in propel-propagation forth, towards advancement, since her lobes violently withhold from drawing back attention. Standing out in the middle of a grown-ground crowd, she walked on top of. Every humanoid flattened to a sheet-diameter she only held herself but near for a moment to listen to their lawful conniveries with which they only sekt the ardor of her touch. A female stepping on them, disgusting but what they wanted to feel after a hourless glass that, having been broken in one of the top apartments, the shattering of which was felt like torture to them, upon being spread during the fall, resulted into nothing less and nothing short of a most edificary belief lead to think of torture. Presently, her hard-felt vigor had but singled her advance, behind a strange booth, motorcycle-protector dome of a tortoise-filled with pyramidical glass-protrusions that hid him behind it, chained by glass-lodgers of written on top of each glass-page, glass words standing out; pricked in the back by a crystalline demon-molded human into a spear, this giant near-in sight, a scorpion tail of powdery ice-brass, but shook, upon being sighted by her as well.

Awry, dowry, cold, this ‘man’ was only a body ripped apart from some sullen-spilled grave, ugly in appearance, graven in disparity, the head but a skull-of iron, constantly pouring on top his constantly tormented body, chained-and-kept-in place, inside this prison that was a cockpit-of a forklift turned into a room entrapment device, which stood out, since this simple room was but a post-office block of mail on opposite wall, a door leading to the hallway that diverged into eighteen different, leading multi-directionally to multiple blocks of buildings snobbery-stops of pseudo-elevating stairways that were activated my the manual-labor of beneath them, inside theses device’s hidden rooms, slaves, and an elevator at the end of it.

Bleeding was a constant everywhere, and it would never stop!

‘There, there, it’s about to start again!’

He pulled his daughter closer to his side, now the firework began. Part of the sky had been completely encapsulated in a single fiery popper whose swollen sight depressed itself into an inert edifice of petard-powdery chinkery of China-shop flares, rummaging each house top as they were all slowly taken abroad by nothing short of a sinew-y spread, out there, nearer, and into their swollen beds of flower-fiery sun-strokes follow-after, people dying in their houses, suffocated by a blighted light that turned their roofs in flare-squared of perfect white, perfect yellow, burning-bright as they were shoved from life, out of it, and into the grim fandango of leprous skin turned into mold whilst slowly being aroused from their sleepless-fright, un-breathing. Gelatin pouches of pudding, it's what they were all forced to become, as soon as they woke up, realizing that they were woken up from their humble abodes. And as thoroughly hardisome as it's become, how hard, how inefficient were those legs they had once called their own, and to themselves they kept, while their neighbors, those lowly-strutting single-paced, barely breathing, lone survivors dared open each door in countless curiosities' desire to see what was happening underneath their homes, outside, where they had gathered, now it snowed. Many of the torpedo-flingers being slowed adrift, instead of blow, they merely landed, slowly but most solicitously caressed by the cold-warmth devoid of humanly avoided, for, solace of un-prone, emotion, were they forced to rise. As if alive, if they landed horizontally, now they were vertically aligned. Each and every single one of them without exception, damned would they be, the humans, who we look down, in solid, rocket-fuel drive, contemplation. For these vile fiends of iron but looked down, trying to draw something out of them, as they ran around, covering them with brambles and with sticks, trying to do anything, anything that would prevent them from exploding, at their feet or otherwise, wherever else. It didn't matter at all, nor would anyone see what happened if they closed their gaze for a moment, since the torn-apart gelatin-ashen, had arrived, amassed in an army, they carried with them a single mirror of light that was soon placed against these fiends. Two armies were met at a crossroads, in a field of alabaster, waiting for this sekt after, by many, what would from this point on be called the Supreme Disaster!

It had been a fretful insufficiency that held them back, to the point where their hands were almost frozenly lodged in their arms, deepening in, the farther pushed-in the vein, the longer had the arm become. Until, finally it stopped drooping and began broadening with every passing second.

A bird was clawing its way from one side to another off the one bar jointed alongside the top of the building, two-joint welded by two additional bars that trimmed a good chunk of the last floor, on the upper-side of the residence, which had been curved into this man-built terrace of a cabin-trap-inside a restaurant, open-ended on either side there being a few squirming in place coils that constantly wrapped themselves around, then inside of, spraying tinier unnatural humanoid that constantly repaired the structural-integrity damage that had been sustained by epochs-old striking-hits that had been lain there by the harsh weather, which in turn began draftingly-coming apart, each time the clouds set themselves into position, announcing the heavy weather, the crowned bar acting like a belt of a magnitude of such proportions that it could've belonged to a butcher's saw whose continuous shoveling on its right side, had brought thousands of pigeons-giants-filled with large heads-skinnyed alive that were the size of big-barrels, filled with meat, out of which large gelatinous -snail egg-beaded scorpion tail-segmented eye-formations, globular-bubbled but held by rope-attached by shooting grappling hooks at the top of in order for men to climb since they had no ladders despite their so suddenly made one to be aware of, leaning, against these flaccid at the top yet sturdier at the base of, since they shot out of the eye-sockets of these many skulls like ivory elongations of tusks, whereas nearing the edge of, the eyes began drooping low because of the weight; wingless beasts but heads of being un-beaked but which carried large prodding elongations, tubes that had, at their ends, blob-sausage-many combed-with piping in and out, inter-connecting air-devourers, their organs those being, that allowed them ‘flight’ by devouring air-pockets of atoms that drew everything inside of in order to fill this empty spot that was created, seemingly awkward, struck in an endless loop- in appearance, of falling constantly, for a second only to be drawn back to, but slightly more-upwardly thrust, advancement, where they were, yet father than they had been before. Legless, but instead they wore, crude, unnatural, and they were only pigeon in a generality of shape and size, filled with rhombus-ugly perilous-shaped tomb-spaces inside of them where the ugliest of beings started oogling at one another in order to frighten the organs into proper-function. They were struck in needles that started drawing, eight connected, and fleshy, forming fingers, come in five at a time trapped inside of, inter-connected fly-swatters that began crawling out in order to aid with the landing. There being a most conflictual-stare being held soon after, as the sun had been chewed on and off, then thrown around, no longer in the possession of the Honey makers that hid inside the base-of the building, the crawl-making figures, sonorous in boast began starting again, agitated by the nearing to them sights of eye-gouging that followed beneath the Earth, the torturing of the ones that sun-bathed in radiation, humans in the distance during Hiroshima’s landing of a nuke, that survived vaporization, only to be left with this appearance, with the exception of this being, inevitably judged, having been done, more so, on purpose with the sole desire and need there of being, self-inflicted pain and suffering, gullible little mongrels, struck down in their naiveté, were tricked, but found out in self-sustained disbelief as well, into blurring the lines between death, reality, malignity, no-longer aware of what was real, and what was not, thinking themselves capable or that they would be allowed to kill themselves, they’ve done it, with no mindful meditation performed, that might’ve awakened them to this pain that could’ve saved them from the throng of a most evil home they now find themselves in.

‘No longer will you wretches escape. And make sure that this crude plate I brought you to fill, that had once been used to fill a coup, a bowl that shattered but was put back together by my order, no better need will I find for it today, than to have you bleed some more as I milk you of clot and brain.’

For they were bashed on top their heads, disgracious in sullenness – allure. Mourning still, a Heathen born buffoon with the back of four cars made into a ball, sprouting out his back, his face, his second one was completely grown on top off. It spoke for him instead:

‘May I have a break, dear one that looks after us, great father? That which cannot help himself but forget what made us once each other?’

‘You were of a similar kin to the ones we killed, weren’t you? Ones that were butchered before being turned into tender meat for you to feed yourself on, isn’t that so?’

Leeches, all of you; no backbone soothing your empty minds, you’d kill your own if it were allowed.’

‘Wait a moment, I need some peace!’

It was those big meaty hatching spider eggs again, speared in the head by pipe-pumping antennas, being tickled by the fingers as they made the noise return to naught. An infernal thing that neither of them could deal for long; it being too innocuous in terms of tenebrous tormenting, to be captures and put in place, or to be forgotten as it turned on them once again. This time, the noise protruded in each ear.

Another honey-maker returned from one of the great halls. He announced the following:

‘We will not be able to help them eat if this series of grunting, these infernal noises continue without the wonting and without a reason made be or made stop.’

‘What do you propose then? I will hear you, if not, I’ll tear you apart, forcing them devour by means of freshness of the flesh, rosy-pink yet niggerish, I wager each swollen dead.’

‘There’s no reason for each bile, not of kin and none devour!’

But he did see the seriousness with which he had not only come but through which he threatened to devour each moment of his precious toll.

‘I can give you some tape-wormish little figures that will crawl.

Eating, pushing through until no longer will they be able to recall what sound used to be sounded like in ears or in cove. I see that you’ve brought moisture, from the sea of ivory or through crimson tattle, spring of pray. But they won’t be able to forgive ignorance, not as long as you wallow and refrain from giving them a spare-hour.’

‘It’s too much to ask, and what is your rank in the Honey-combers?’

‘Fell do pray, the Deuces singing, yet they say.

I’m but a Runt that’s offered a hole to lay in, where my fourth body is almost fully prepared. He’ll step out, follow me by trail, like some ugly sluggish snail, and he shall kill me in order to claim my place. If that’s any give to you.

I’m of a great standing.’

‘You have to be if you’re allowed to keep a corpsed-man, a crop taken of your liking broughtened to your kindness, such as which is mold-to you alarming, yet I wager it won’t last the long-lot once it’s to be exposed to the light that shall devour him, in empty cask.’

There was no possible retort that could follow either.

Parts

A large fifteen-meters from below the raft-formation, it being a large iron-welded to the ground by the reach-around its edges copper-ish sheet of a square on top of which there being a great slightly-raised above the head of the foot, dead-nigger’s head, beam of iron that went through the shrunken-nigger-head as if it had simply cut through a nicely compounded slice of butter, with this being more of a spear-rounded but thicker around each and every single edge of the lot’s superfluous, unnaturally set, disastrous wretch’s left over-mark. A body of some mammal lay near it, singing as it drew from deep-below. A parcel of chopped women’s feet, the blood of Dina’s unkind seethe as she rose from a leper’s pool.

‘There you are, my dear. I’ve been looking forwards to seeing you for a while now. And yet, as I seek no other reason to be perched; I can only ask of you this, as long as you still think of me as what little else there can be. What little mourning is there left to be done with, or should I see to it that it is time for me to carry on already?’

‘Who said that?’

Another echo followed through, followed by a few incomplete humanoids, missing body parts accompanying them. Leashed by what could only be called an incomplete lot of the most unnaturally, bewildering to stare at broth of never-ending grasp-around. Pincers attached to machine that crawled upon worm-bodies and canines without feet; a small army they had called it.

A moon had fallen, and it’s been followed by eight altars that followed in its path. A set of trails made out of reeling in and out stardust made the way for the man’s craft to draw from the lost tracks of dirt and spores that flew during the coming of the shade as it followed around. One of the headless peasants, whose chest rose in and out, a red fleshy circle of worms that allowed for an appendage, long, segmented by fleshy rings; yet like a shower-head at its end, with many dome-inwardly depressed craters that allowed for the inner-holes to be most properly used for the speaking volume to be made begin. And ever since he’s come out of his hiding; the sleigh of women feet were thrown, around and into the darkest of the darkest cones. A damp swamp-nigger had been killed no farther than fifteen miles here and there, around, within:

‘Lest you speak of me as Yore, and the one whom so beseech abhor the dark command of spiels, I would have you all be gone unless you want to bloody near the pool of spikes!’

Many had been dug during the wild surrounds. But only one survived as the spikes reeled back and forth and fed upon the most innocuous of forms that lived and leered, upon the words of mice and rats and other dead animals that refused to disappear, even when shouted at. Since they were ghastly and unnerving, and most disturbing and wretchedly abhorrent in their doing and their staving, starving, faceted by blood and blood-cot; pus sprouting out their eyes, forming tower segments and whips they cracked on the back of the dead men that appeared after dark. Since the hour passed; and the hour of the mass only drew so much closer that, it could not be ignored any longer, not since it reached the critical point of killing every single one, alas; of the open-wounded camel.

‘A toast shall settle this dispute.

You who guards the crossroads, what are you to say to thee?’

In his name, Versax Oipol-Eight; cruisers of disease, made of skinned removed from dead-wrought empty kegs. None of which hit the mark, but there were plenty of other reasons to be had; lest beseech to listen to the fell-swooped screams that followed in the waking’s deep abhor.

‘Leper’s trenches.’

One of them followed the gallows.

A little more to the right and one could see it just fine. Scraping off the bookshelf with a few of the cords, tied to a rope where the corpse was lodged. A fine meter between him and the ground; the agitators grabbed a few cords and made sure to enable him to never come to life. His blood-drip-drip; extracted beneath his feet where the cords dangled beneath the man. His head, the second one kept the upper-brain alive. The second brain was stored in his chest, in a dome-crater they had dug in, then allowed for this bubble to step out of him, then around it went, feeding on the very same tubing that drew from beneath the floor. Feeding his children as he fended some of the lepers off:

‘This room’s a mess and I’m still under the impression that he’s staring at me, quite intently!’

‘Don’t talk to him and keep the televiser down; you don’t want me to recognise my voice, do you?’

‘I will if I want to and you can’t stop me. Yil, it’s not like lime. He’s not come to anger more, he’s not to enter the starving Moor and plenty floor, the taking!’

I say, if there’s ever been a chance for you to put yourself in danger’s way, that was fifteen years ago, no more no less. I’m still under the impression that there’s no way for you to die any longer, not while there’s a little implant in the bulb, fellow!’

But he feared something might come to be.

‘My blood is contorted into a little cradle I’ve yet to coat the side of the floor with before ebbing myself a swim, on a whim, lest I drown, I cannot tell what’s happened to my bolted run, lest you talk to it, I cannot fit in the cradle!’

Fifteen candles were burning with the leash, lease and leeway cradling around a piece of the tent that crawled in. It was lodged in it, the barrel. The two coffins had arrived, still jousting with their unnatural things, these worming fiends that bent, ebbed and drew around, from some fasculi of light, emerging. It was getting crowded, beyond it, dumbfounded even, yet no compensation could be culled. The pair had arrived, Slithering Bob and his wife Ellis, with their fifteen cannibal sons, the rapists; and the panel they had dragged from the other side of the world which occupied, very much so a good chunk of the room at this point in time. Difficult as it may be to accommodate to the simple scourge of tiny spaces. Eight faces rose, faceted by panels, from the middle of this strange device, this block of plastic, that’s belonged to some refinery, as well as the barrel they rolled alongside them, with little plucked feathers of slithering corpses that leaped from here and there, titter and tetter, without the drowsiness that followed after. The tall compressor hid inside the barrel now brought to the latched upon the wall rack, the little servant-cannibals, the sons, carrying their bolted rifles and now taken out could only ask for the grace of quiet as they rumbled during silence’s pass. To have it culled from the sound required to have come a still and think of it again, alas. The bridge they had passed was thing, it had diverged almost into a mountain pass of some extreme thinness that was almost impossible to traverse by normal means, leading to a closely encapsulated tiny room, drawing to the right, a small spot, where the stairway lead to an even stranger such depression as one would have it cradled into the lass-of-a-bloated whale-sized parasite they had carved their way through. An unnatural thing, drew forth, drew less, impressed onto the corpses coming from one of the hidden; spots, holes, and the tall slender, cut through brothel of a whore!’

‘You damned wife, don’t play with the corpses, can’t you see that they’re trying desperately to joust during the time you’ve been abhorred for hours? Never-touched and less remorse!’

Flashy, flashy on the screen:

‘We’re delivering the soul and also on a whim, might I be so called to stare?’

‘There’s the trifle and the rifle I’m so obscured and used to looking, searching for, entreaty of despair!’

A few mountainous mounted rifles were lowered from the floor.

Poor wretch of a man still lodged into the wall, but looking; confused as he was, as anyone would be in his stance, was, was of a trifle more incapable of understanding what happened around him or why. Why would anyone put a man through such batter, torture and come-after? What’s he done to deserve this of all? It was too crowded, it was too awful, two corpse-Sarcophagi jousting bearing their elongated lucid-slug lanced rotting, the wife playing with one. The panel in the middle implanted, the barrel that grew, filled with growths, and robust, way too inflated by the starting of the comb-after.

And the cannibals, they were but trying to get a hint off the poor man’s luck running out, telling him it was time, it was time for him to be called, culled and eaten out by gut alone, and thrust-despair if they moved too sudden, the alarmingly faceted by rifles and by simple trifles would only cast them away and latch.

An effigy of growths emerged from the barrels. It was an awful-trifle sight, and lust.

‘Lacklustre day of December fifteen of November come too soon upon the Eve’s New Yar, when, during upon this melancholy a day, I killed a nigger, I lynched that nigger and he was dead-killed upon the spot. I killed him, I killed him and I’m not afraid of revealing myself as the servant of evil endure, endearing such entreaty mourned for. But I don’t speak of evil, I impress!’ C.

Company was included, they were a trifle more standing, thinking of the past. It was ran-of the mill, that fell, but no one seemed to’ve occupied themselves with trying to speak of Homer, The Iliad and the likes.

‘He’s done it!’

I and John clashed defiantly, recklessly, in a most befuddling manner, sneeringly-benumbed in the fashion of falling apart – both corpses facing the dear-deadly dead-dead moon’s side of the rum-bottle, nauseatingly disemboweled by painfully benighted, bothersome and misanthropic in terms of how he acted, cruelly manifested by his disgruntled reaction to what was happening around him, in this maddening atmosphere of unnaturally defunct and yearned-for grown, maddeningly abhorred by a pair of eyes that only glance out the temporary world he’s not considering himself to be a part of, depressed by an abysmally-suicidal deliriously contorted false-angelic godless-heathenistic so-allured a connivingly befuddling recital; that was admitted by the men in the room as to be a blasphemous retort to the criminal-thought he had of pulling out a rifle needed to pull up this school shooting like the Columbine massacre-kill all niggers in the front kind of grinding the corpses in my sleep after I’m done but grind my nerves instead of trying to endure this alarmingly recurrent lucidly-set groove of little peck-ish fairy fruits he was not only surrounded by but dreamed of bashing, with a bludgeon-effect of splatter; their head-skulls split-open as if he were the nigger-kill man to the extreme with the nigger-sword gun turnpike dream of never-been, the niggs that is, alive to begin with; only to have misguidedly woken up in the middle of the night, at like two or fifteen am close to midnight, in his cozy home; eight by eight apartment with a swamp of dirt-shaped oblongoid room-chamber made like some weird run-of-the mill to look like golf course; of a squarish puddle with a tip to the side leading to a small devil’s tail shape crossing as if it were pinned between two mountains where it stood and 'moved', with the nerve, the nerve on that woman to comment on the red cashmere carpet he had bought specifically for her; to this, this being a nice carpet barely covering a part of the room; since; they were sleeping, or she was still sleeping since he had failed to wake her up, knowing her, personally, sleeping pills, a lot of them, or barbiturates; I don't think she's still alive, dumb-cunt probably died 'peacefully' during her sleep, if Heaven's sake would soon forbid; or a fly-swatter, whose handle had began distorting itself to the right side, receding in size until it had become a mould-trench where the bodies were kept in; soon enough his most beautifully worthy in terms of worthiness' erection and the brothel sings rape-rape rape soon after; to be thrown in the pile after; which in terms of how lamentable it had become, there was no possible explanation for this wretchedness of hours that passed since and would pass after and the brothel of brothers that died in the war, bless their souls, their picters put on top of desk, don't shake, don't shakey-shakey little Gooky or I will put you dead in barrel like the nigger-nigger cuckey; slave-enslaved, could've been all avoided if someone killed the Jews, if the Holocaust happened, if only it did happen, if only; which is the reason why this attempt driven by the Jews to condition the white-man into cucking himself and his race despite the fact that Jewess-bimbos are most likely the biggest whores in existence; out of existence, is being allowed to continue, but would've been completely stamped out if the Holohoax did happen and these sub-human nigger-kikes had been lynched-gassed kilt out of their existence – an Epitaph thrown in some corner or something which was still of little concern to the two of them, albeit this conversation they were going on with, or trying to continue had only been temporarily stilled by naught else other than this strangeness, this unexplainable strangeness of John reminiscing about raping his dead-wife; that rousingly erect-Arbiter caused this raising of the tent to happen; nigger-wheel-shaped heads carried their little niggers' to their deaths into the pile, while their nigger-brown bodies were become large troughs in which they carried hundreds of their own; depression, amnesia, a desire of vengeance, pain, a bout fifty bucks and thirty cents in his bank account; baka, desu, be careful friends, you've about a half-around the hour for this night's deep refill, anger, frustration, a volcel, an incel, mad, racist, a pedophile, insane, necrophiliac, a criminal, a faggot and a nigger, the controlled opposition, the most likely to promote top of his class, valedictorian, cum laude; might as well be Steven Spillberg; or any other of these Hollywood'd-ly 's wretched fucking filthy sub-human rats; going around the neigh; neigh, a couch or a cab driver's put-inside and outside and around the block, turnaround as they are put in this wild-ride, rigged milfs with tit-explosives; chanting, and wanting to breed with; you know; that they would even think of the irresponsibility of allowing the charade that is the Holocaust to continue should serve as nothing more and nothing other than some testimony of this, this allowance to deceit, done openly, reveled in; perpetuated by the Jews who control the media, the entertainment business, the central banks, living in a shit-piss fuck retarded state, formally known as Israel if this' s to age well; bitch-bitches, bitch-bitches and these whores, why is milk popping out of their bimbo-tits no more?; because of nothing other than the traitorous likes of some whites who betrayed their people, deciding that selling their souls and the glory of their superior race to filthy inhuman, gum-chewing and breathing with their mouths open – Semites was worth a trifle more than going through the hardship needed to protect, defend and ensure that their people's, their ancestors' and theirs as well, legacy will survive long after their fallen generation; Charles Lieber; I think that's how you spell his name, I don't know, ha-ha; helped create the Corona Virus and deaths, and the deaths of the European people that were killed by this inhuman thing rests upon the shoulder of and of these sub-human rats as well as their tribe as well; the cab being set on a trajectory that would go straight away- up front on a curving upwardly then downwardly in a spiraling trail of little growths keeping it in the air, unnaturally looking defiant-wretch of many little puckerish bubbles shaped like men with humanoid long legs holding everything together from falling, which, this structure being what twas and is being bespoken of, a pseudo-hive entry that would diverge into the insides of a drill that would and could only push in through this unnaturally dark undulated crypt-looking temple of giant kneeling figures, some of the missing heads; others not even being so lucky as to maintain or keep their arms of their other-lost features; small puckerish legs shaped like bag-sorted squirming maggots with rolled up blunts nigger-killed don't kill my mother 'till I die, there being, a kind of, commotion running in the air with the upheaval of a hundred thousand puckerish angels, dying, 'cause of greed, give money to charities but not to monkeys, 'ever since; am the man, am I the man who threw himself against the wretches and who were those bimbos with exploding faces, nicely carved breasts that would pop in and out like sweet cherry pieces and Cheetahs-chips with cheese, I want to put my face between their breasts and see to it that I will never wake up from it, since I am afraid, I cut, all the time, why must I die when I'm bled to death and when will I be allowed to leave this prison that is carnage?

A bloated trunk-sprout with four great tongue-mounds raised pyramidically, from whence sprouted; holding an almost tower-cylindrical bulk of a chest that bore its head, which was thrice as wide as its whole body but never making it past four of the knots coming out of its three legs on all sides, since, despite being pyramidically shaped, they only gave the illusion of it, when in reality, they were more of a spine-frame of smaller jags or segments that were aligned to look like pyramids, like Swiss chocolate; upwardly pointed, like some kind of statue that was forcefully pointed at the sun to the point of being tear-eyed. A top-had shaped- but without the lower roundness or plate-look-a-likeness, having bore itself almost into a spiral, pointing at the back, two pseudo horns sprouting out of it, one with tiny petal-pincers, the other, a corrugated long-horn; an arm only which was a pseudo-beam coming from behind its back, busily trying to push the head, this elongated almost toy-of-a-made out of many rings, colored, thingy that one could throw and see it 'move' by itself, like some spring, but this toy would only serve as a pseudo 'rib'-cage or should only serve as one in order for one to make out the curvature of the skull. A two-directional, sprouting, filled with brittle boils, this being the very arm, flabby-like some elephant's tail but fatter and organic. An almost helmeted and crowned look to the being; and a beetle rhinoceros, up-front held-sharpened candle of nose-horn, organic-fleshy and gelatinous in appearance; but barely above the mouth; it pulled the philtrum forward. A tiny ugly maw pointing beneath it, constantly opening, as this ugly thing. This sea-ray of a thin, fifteen millimetres or so jelly of a plasma 'sheet' serves as its lower jaw, constantly pulling back and forth in order to prevent the saliva from falling, or it from drooling. Its head was not sprout-come out of the bulky broth of a body it bore but instead was nigh-like a lizard, kind of; or some snake. It blew bubbles out of its mouth like a kid. Or snot; like feet. Like feet-balloons. Inside of which air-people danced around and flew like kites. And they always killed the kikes.

And he started growling and paddling-emerge himself through the ground-floor come upon, the trenchers, the trenchers standing at his feet, wriggling their out-their bodies eyes, the many that were resting on these humans dressed in fish-nets fish-stocks with hooks that had fish-lookers staring and ebbing themselves to be touched by the blessing of the most unkind evil twas-ever to've been:

'Splinter each reach and cut your toes unless you want me to leap inside the throng and see it as a musk, as a shed, where you shall crawl and yearn for come ahead, don't leap on top off, each frog's but barrel in the making fat.

I shall slither but thine, each and every single one of yours, wretched hate. I slither and seethe, as I'm ill and come heap-throng, await!'

An hour passes just as soon. Glory, called to thrice monsoon! Fifteen meters of leprous wonderment follow after, as they're culled to come in hinder-sight, trifle there stands but one sign, and it's open for all but hinder-sight and ever-bloom. Autumn had skinned alive a bark-but coon; comes the nigger on top of a plate. Some servants bring him forth and they only cricket-crick-crick ahead.

'But where to yonder?'

'His family needs to eat, if any grow near, if any would hear, if any would come, appear, none or what little's there, might come be proud. They could prod our foreheads with nasty lances...'

'I believe they're called spears and they're chucked, not prodded!'

Interrupted the younger one.

'Clever one that youngling spindle! Oft what wretch forth and lil' absinthe!'

A little puffy tool attached to some little arm that drew forward, stilled in place by a few metallic-but uglily set clasps that could barely be seen moving, frolicking in place, slightly hindered by some unnatural look that allowed for a second mounted gun to draw out of it, lodged as they were inside the side of his arm, an ugly thing, unnatural but solely of a reasoned approach, it drew back into his cocked-in lodged, a briar in the shoulder, descending fifteen-or so ugly-meters into his insidiously ugly armed bulb-a worm with a face and a facade of drawn bodies pulled back and forth, all of which hid inside his one great-leg, of a few diameters-extending back and forth, constantly, in terms of overlapping sizes, unnatural faced by bodies hid inside naught else than his, mouthed below him two heads, added to a briar of centipede-sculpted broths, little arms drawing beneath him. Taking their time before trying to rip him apart from inside-out; their betrayal meaning nothing, bringing naught but else' felt-for shame. Drawn again during quiet, were they scented by some spell that struck them dumb and stilled in place; effortlessly, were they forced to some barn by their master, where he simply started bearing endlessly followed-through, fallen from above, lend onto them, come as they might, onto some brow, some burdensome reprise carried forth by an uncalled for, never let known or made aware of its own existence, predisposition to violence, that caused despair, fallen as they might, one after another, as if they were blown-stricken down shades that tried grasping, running, fleeing away from their master, whether or not necessary, that only being so-much-so an inconclusive thing, left standing and feeling away in a betokened by musk and brim-filled air that only suffered none to come near the barn, or to have themselves, abhorred by those that followed them around with thought of destitution and of pain, heed-forth away, heaved with little doubt of their lifelessness, they succumbed. Empty graves abandoned by a solace of most morbid a-rum that followed through, as he had bathed in its vapid vapours, followed by some entrance of no forth, a solace and succumbed they did to the fell. Rotten, abandoned as he refrained from taking another gulp, with which, hinder-forth set, he walked away as far and quickly as he could but not before destroying this unnatural corner that could not have been worse for wear. Four castle-tower brick pyramidal at the top, wheeled-rotten, tall bodies, armless, like armoured knights that sloped on top the grinning figure, followed by large walls, spiked beneath by fallacious flaccidities such's n' be found under normal circumstances only in most dreaded, most dreadfully erected, so far, leeches of some filth be-scumbed, whose laughter echoed, whose dart-forth rancorous entreaty deadened no more than most alarming hard-a prying in, solace of bacterium and of grit that found itself into a field of many rowing-forth bodies, those that had been thrown in the river, eccentric and vapid as they could only feel themselves, as to be throned again; by the filth that entered their rust-corrugated sleighs, which pulled them down, and asked for bloody crowns, as soon as a body neared the wretch:

‘You, master, come, come heed my call. Allow me such a moment’s stay, allow me to refrain from drowning, help me slither away from where I stay, that I may move again, from arm’s arm. That I may not drown when they pull on my numbed feet, I may only seek such a thing as I’ll have had wilt to be betokened away for me and exchanged for the bodies of most morbidly hidden in slithers of drenched candour’ sun. I may not be wilt away easily, as it wilt’ve been purloined!’

Was there any will to continue past that point on?

As he looked upon that river’s blood, imagining darkly whatever there was, out of titter and tenebrously a damp, call-after. To have been halted in place and placated with the blood he would rather see running to a point, most forgotten, mostly conjoined by all that mattered, whatever lesser forth, cradling forth, or rather, pain and that alone had only brought them back momentarily from where they stood and where they reigned, along the crude, abnormal, the wretched, the purported in pain, the wagging of tails, the corrupted and the reigns, small trinkets of no glory, rancid anchors and plumes of empty throngs, small picks, long sticks, stones that had been cracked from stalagmites, curtains of no velvet-kind of, but of some decisively similar to themselves cut. To have been spilled in glory’s dark succumbed, a car in the distance that fell, splashed alongside buses and long-buildings that were dropped from above, fourteen hundred or so globes, planetary robes and the Government as well, with most of its magisters, the locals, lawyers, politicians and most crudely tortured look-a-likes, most of these benighted creatures had been allowed to wallow in crudely in pain before being allowed to wallow in pain and remain as bastardly as they were, and trail, painfully bothersome, for they could only see themselves drowned, for no one came to their rescue, nor would that be allowed. For many followed orders drenched in pain, swore to crude anchors that never answered back, but pained, they were by what in turn followed. Mothers with their infants crying, a lot of similar sights, of gut-benumbing, if anyone would so much as to explain what happened, glance at them, they would be crude, they would be further-more forcefully made to wretch-in-place and, so far, come onto it, en-tune what little hope there was to whistle it out. There was no proper-calling to the ones that suffered him not drowned. For his worth was well beyond theirs.

‘Fancy me pulled out today?’

‘There are many similar rivers I’ve seen where they drown the good, the worthy, the scum and the ones among them that cannot walk but promote the worth-benumbed, until culled and therefore run!’

He called onto him to swim! But land was thoroughly murky, more so than the river itself, on a whim!’

‘These hands can only create evil, ugliness, taintedness, anything but beauty.’ The evil that permeates in the heart of a Jews, soulless creatures wretched by evil and by scum!

A church of neighbors, the president? My car!

A church of presidents, the parking lot, is where I find myself; on every Sunday but not this one. He was alone in the park of blood of spiky grits, with benches of bones that had spike-pillars come out of them with many open rib-car-formations out of which appendages drew forth and devoured the blue-flashy children and the orange-flashy ones of sun.

Hemathose Poultrygas was waiting there, an umbilical cord attached to pair of eight gas masks held by a balloon helmet of stitched together patches of pants, shirts and close-to-him-high-school-but-only-seen-them-twice-in-his-life-time-outside-the-school-including-the-reunion-where-it-happened-“-friends-“ he put together during free time. Bled on the blood, a lot of it!

Razor- switchblades with tar-coal burning conical horn-throwing saws with knives, butcher’s cleavers, needles with HIV and Ebola and cancer-fins with infectious mustard-gus bulbs at the end of them, with the words “nine-eleven, dancing Israelis” etched around the base of their curves, beneath them? Rotten Pythagorean formulas of canker speak of plants dying in their sleep benighted by wretchedly dark-damped angels of kill-self, reunited with their king, Lucifer, in dreamless contortions of nuclear warheads. Killer of babies, he wore a dark hill of large blades sticking out of him. And Lucifer, who was there, a few meters away but not far from where they were, was legless but instead he bore a downward pointing pyramidically flattened on each end, drill of cartilage skin, of stitched cats, with corkscrew ridges of humanoids that were extended, elongated, thinned and made to look as if they were stuck in some vortex that had been cast inside out. And he bore only one arm coming out of his chest and four great pillar kempt – necks, holding put together into a ball of a myriad of features, heads; that opened in a square-keyhole formation out of which a smaller Lucifer, more humanoids, but flashy black, only his outline could be seen, but who was frozenly-chained, made out of Glass, Glass-Lucifer, kept flying back and forth, inside and out of his prison, while he spoke with eighty five other Lucifers that were all plotting to assassinate Dave, having neared the stalk out of which, in the bowels of the earth, from beneath and deeply there-standing, deep adage, out drew the citadel emerging.

They blink, unanimously.

Every house in this city gets destroyed, like Turkaletts being impaled up their asses by pikes, hundreds upon hundreds of citadels of dead-fucking niggers stitched by knives emerge from the bowels of the earth. Every single one of them interconnected by an intricate system of underground cavernoids united by unnatural hinder ends made out of the strangest, most peculiarly inclined unnaturalness-erected woe of crudities barely holding them together.

A wit, of lest be spared of countenance aware withdrawn awaking, therefore shanty of lest be away, hinder come and rear-ending, there would come no man in-between.

For whatever reason they themselves were not aware nor could they explain the edifices of implications whose mere mortal utterance, benevolent yet hardly to be called for, therecome after, in the nigh of dusk’s end, was there no doubt that one could not forget, whom they called about. Whom to pray for solace end. When then blood, there it stood, erect!

Feet were moved around in carts, with long boomerang frames of bone-bearing crib-ribcaged beneath the fleshy-scrapes of tatters it was wearing, large angular scarab pincer-united, each segmented into two, quasi fragments of disease-filled greenish-seen from inside, plugged into each other, claws of the sort, thinner at both ends, leaving an area of an amassed growth of meaty there-being kind-of a punching bag-sack; like some ancient dinosaur held-between two bony ends by a caveman, meat-club, hardisome by look, with an open end out of which a pumping balloon organ kept going at it, inner-in-deeper-beneath itself through a system of many cow-like guts united but they were more like stick-insects, working together to keep this bloated thing alive, pumping venal embryos they bred with themselves endlessly inside of it, as they would also feed each other out this sticky golden honey-like, gold almost hive of many pouches of quasi-spider sacks they had eaten along the way, absorbing them, assimilating the mass so they could keep this, this blood-bagged growing lump alive. It would've looked like a giant-compounded into a fridge compact squarish tree-trunk made into a canoe, if lain flat on the ground, seen to bear, at each end, two canon-turret mounted fat guns, one pointing at the sky, the other at the hinder end; albeit a canoe without a way to sit inside of; since it bore no other hole than the one allowed for the growth to stay inside and sprout outside of; beings mincing on them by unseen ways. They leaped on their hinder-bottom beneath them one-leg, dangerously driven by evolution as to promote stress on not only their joints but these bags they held so close to their demise. Women's feet, women's feet of the most blessed kind they pushed the cart they were put in, by slamming their colossal bodies against, then-around. Strange unique 'carvings' looking backs they bore, yet, unlike carvings, these were grown. Since they were hunched like large kebabs and hives, with their upper heads bowed down, their hindered legs no deeper now, a bubbly-organ but harder than steel, with some fleshy grown-around gourd-like crowns, spindly, spiky raised, fumigating with some unnatural steel smoke that hardened into iron mazes, tiny but like trinkets, they fell on the ground, heaves as they were laid behind; circular, some of them and others taller and more wide-spread, kings of volcano emerging smoke, worming mounds, on top of which the insects made ant-like push-ins, termites the same, similar to their kingdoms but inside they remained, unless called for. Some forceps that would cut randomly an ugly pig's face, which the taxidermist would embalm, pull too early, then staple on top of some rounded old kike's back might've shown some kindred liking to the deformation of the skin that had occurred. Enslaved as they were by the maim, and malign.

There's a storm brewing over the wretched front, yet not a single simple man can see it coming from a mile away where they're from, gone upon a slither's hay' there-come after!

There's no one watching, there's absolutely no one there.

A sign not too far away:

'Body parts needed, will pay all the necessary procedures to have 'em removed, but no quicker and no cheaper than the extraction will be, and no cost higher can be made out of the ones that give away what's left for me.'

At the very least it shouldn't have made any difference whatsoever, not to them, the ones that were in charge with watching. The most awful thing of all being the fact that there was not a single cop around while the coup was going on:

'Pull the trigger, slowly, I'm telling you, it's going to be a cut and dry job, not a single man will suspect a thing if you do it just right. There, there, you need only to perform this in the correct way and I'm certain we'll be out of your business in no time, friend.'

'Now wait on a while god damned minute, will you?'

I didn't even expect that at all. Fucking shit; fucking dumb shit fuck! Fucking dumb shit-fuck shit, fuck!:

They're both aware of what's going on and they're not moving as a result of it, trying each other's hands at it with knife-cuts all around looting through. And they died. By rape-cancer.

He must be forced to pay his gut-a-trifle hindrance, twenty or so times over, destroyed and ruined, cancerously brought to pain and forced to become humble before torture's to be allowed to've begun again!

The despot, destitute of cowardly:

'I shall not be beckoned to return to thine evil ways, nor will I have myself skinned and flayed for such regards as you will have yourselves be put upon the Anthony-pillar where ever-to be pained by skin, will I suffer torture for no appeal!'

He's been seated by her since the last landing but never so much made a noise to alert her that one of the other flight attendants had been staring at them for over ten or so minutes before he considered trying to give her a nudge, albeit undisturbed by the rubbing of the screw that was shot from the other side of the plane, entering his head, passing through, didn't bleed from it, but his head was finally turned, fixed on that barely-for-nailed thing that then entered through the keyhole and was then unseen. Last seats were empty. But you could feel the miasma that had accompanied it somewhere along the way. Their heads both hers and his were bald. And they had weird rectangular signs on them, flat disparaged lanterns united with anchors and eyes, actual humanoid eyes that for the present lay ubiquitously unnoticed. Next to her, the window was fully open. The plane wing was missing. Instead, there was a black cloud that was attached to it, a nimbus of black smog that was slightly removed from sight, a few meters off, but walked along them. It was not a real cloud but a concubine of many shapes and forms that puffed out themselves, since they were pseudo-lung things making a mass, wingless but, as observed, capable of flight, during this somber agitation. She began reminiscing of the days that were well long put beyond and behind her, childhood's earrings snapped, albeit during an insolent upraise her children had made her be put through, that she remembered fondly despite their, then, inappropriately displayed behavior they even prided themselves with, having spared her the trouble of trying to step in and break their fight, the moment Hector stepped on the wrong slippery stone, broken ankles flying as the winds galloped on the side of the tributaries, where still-corpses lay in quiet, birds of flights unabated willowed in. How long has it been since fornication? Why would she be thinking of that while one of her children had been painted blood red, around both arms, since they both swam in the pool that blazed out of his gushing body, spraying her as well, as they danced around this groove she learned to appreciate as being only one of majesty's most forlorn creations, damned forever-trapped in her mind, since that was the day the son she had hated the most died. God, my husband has a big cock, she thought. Women, the only things they think about is child-murder –abortions and sexual gratification. IT's why they deserve being beaten continuously over the head with a wooden-stove, which would press against their bodies' pounded in pancake-flat left-over, as to fully seal the dead. Their feet, women's feet would have to be chopped immediately in order to be readied for the oncoming sacrifices. They had lived their life fully, despite the unlawfulness this unfulfilling travesty that masks itself under the guise of marriage presents itself as; and had plenty of children, most of which are now dead. But they were both headed to hell; poor flight attendant, he was stuck by the miasma of blood, his brain was become inhuman. Walking constantly despite standing still, with no destination; in a thin tunnel, he took a right, left, right, new corridors revealed, large lamps his size, lending him the impression of him having either been or being a giant, walking in another man's legs, while wearing them as prosthetics. Sliding, not walking any longer as if on ice, now his feet and his standing in the plane finally synched in, while the seats appeared, the men inside of them similar in appearance to himself, sliding on ice, as if he were a skater, suddenly aroused, a couple but turned momentarily towards him; acknowledging him for a moment, the closer he got, the nearer had his face descended into them. At first glance, into their bodies, but afterwards, they shot down there, into their guts and gulley, leaving them sullen in appearance, dead husks, ugly with incontinence and petty, some pettiness that only brought the morose nearer to them, as a little mingling uglier, tinier, figure, the size of a worn apart negro-lynching rope, made out of many stuck-ins, wriggling, leashing, trying to escape, from inside each and every single one of them. The deeper you went in, through their gut, you'd stop, incapable to descend. They were all in a similar position. All bore triangularly, well chiseled as if adorned or made by marble-sculptors, Ancient Greeks or so, perhaps some other masters of the French Gothic, in terms of the beauteousness the aesthetics provided one with the sight of. A quarry everywhere around, where flesh was become stone, leading to this full stop, where the figure was roped in, chained to the floor. It was not humanoid, the figure only become rope-like as a result of being turned into tendons, stuck between hard-felt leather, as if suddenly readied to lynch-a-nigger on the full-go, or was only forced to become the nearest reflective to himself or itself thing it could ring a torsion or some contortion against. Regardless of it, the room inside each passenger's gut was nigh-similar in appearance to some blooming-flower, where each spear was but become nothing other than some stone-shard-emerging from the nearest pressure-gut points. Organs had been encased in them and through this stone-transparency they had become immediately legible. A bloated heart, some sunken liver, some pancreas that were slowly dissolved yet, were hardened as shell, not of stone but of some unnatural element similar to theirs and theirs alone; what made them so special was the fact that they were sprout-from beneath rectangular holes they were slightly pressed out of, at an angle, so as to be slightly cut, as if below there lay gums, and these incisors, over time had been pressed forward, in an attempt to close in like some carnivore fly-trap, upon itself, but was render, in a failure, unable to fully close in the gap, instead, being left slightly depressed and most importantly sawed in by a matter of fifteen or so meters in. Which is bizarre, to say the least since this, this is almost made on a plain level, or plane level, as if it had been pushed that way, from behind the incisor there having been a man responsible for leaning on his back while placing his feet against the opposite wall in order to push with all of his might, to get it stuck in this position. And the organs were become sedimentary, rock-ish artifacts stuck in that structural state. The figure was also despoiled of verdure.

Trenches bathed around the drool, whoever swung it around was a bigger fool than the man responsible for beating off his boy to an inch of his life, leaving him behind, bereaving in a most obtrusive fashion, salient in the making, abhorred by little by little, lighted candle waxing slow the fright caused by the flight of stairs, since they could not move around, hanging lowly, a dowry of sight, and to them, it meant little, whoever was first, second or last. Because they all began wrenching and abhorring the militant posy-talk twas spake by them in their barbarous fashion; least betoken therefore hear:

‘Treacherous palace in the making, will I see a daylight broad and be?’

‘Nay, sayath of bemuse, there's but silk of such empire, as one would have it cone attire, drench his steel and steeds be corned by means of pander.’

'I still am of a, more of a. It's a nightly endeavor I cannot properly profuse to say I'm dearly attracted to. I'm spoilt, but only when I'm sober, a wild cat, and a ruffian who cannot and isn't capable of fixing any roof, my dear.

And the other day, I was met by the countenance beheld- stricken by, such poultry of laceration, by a man called but Lurid, and his wife, Horn, two wretches come from some dark paradise, with many legs, half-a-face, a witch, a specter, come from a dark, spindly maze, must've been.'

'How come is it that you're still walking off such a barely sublime, such entreaty, most unkind?'

'I ate my own legs, that's how and that's why! Right in front of her, see?'

All prosthetics! Bite, a bite, would shallow reed benigned, of fright and freighter, lesser woe? And who, disciple, of green renown and therefore candor, would there be a listen, listless song?'

'None would do, I seethe in place, but none would do me any better than the ones that had seen me squirm, on the ground and of the jolt instead?

Will you do me the pleasure of listening to me again?'

He waned, on and off, a cat out of the plug, a jolting-cajoling pulse that was run up and down, up and down, dropping straight into the ground, with a, with them on the side.

'Is that the sound of a fucking stereo? It's been an eternity since I last heard one of them playing.'

For sure, fortune was a trick of the blood that entered them by a giant mosquito stinger spear-lance that shot through their heads, the thickness of a giant ivory elephant, this flying bulk of mass, made out of a hundred mosquito-men with tendril appendage arms connecting to rows of drills-faced by men-giant in size, connected to a single large, rounded, ringed-like worms, tube that pointed at the ground, making it black, a sphere of rubbed around, rub arounds that spilled on the ground, dirtying it further, out of which black mold-tanks started being given birth of, men attached to them, laps taken around the men, with giant spear-people long-nigger figures being lynched in the distance, many bottled inside tens or thousands, piled up, a black sun with a bulbic row of pills coming out in DNA-formations twisted into rows of disappearing and reappearing squirming black forests that mixed with the air and the people they were drawn towards to, eating them in a swallow before returning to their master. The sun and the mosquito bulk were abhorred and banished from the stolen apartment. Kidnapped people leaped out of floors, dying once they were finally out. Their souls, their souls were put to rest. Children were playing football outside, before the trampling began.

Music was still playing but it now sounded soulless, as if it were done by a nigger, or gook or some dumb kike, any of which would but mumble, ruin and splatter on the higher art genes required to make properly non-abhorrent, a slither splinter killed minorities; splattering them on every corner of the world. Spread and singing were the devils while their doom was begun. It was chanced upon their mockery to stand still while they were being forcefully carved, craving for immediate annihilation. Bastardly they were ruined by faulty laceration.

'This is going to be a most interestingly boding day, will it not?'

‘Filthy wretch, I shall devour thine head and splinter a gander upon thine unholy stretch of a mindless crouching filthy header of a lip-trench!’

Large textile under-leg adding to its tender-ish beneath it area, of a few hundred miles, belonging to some recurrent reddish-hardened fluid made out of a few pouches that diverge into each other’s cradling ‘arms’. These being thinner than a human’s; instead, child-rear in a cradle motions swing them eerily, back-n-forth. Tributaries of finely secured pouches being placed in eight of these greater legs; of long-tubing-distorted, deformed, elongated, appendage-talons, or straightened ivory tusks of meat that still curve downward, at their front-ends, casting a shadow on top of the lower leg segments that sprout from somewhere around the mid-region they each appear to follow the ‘mold’ of, since they swim inside these; they cannot be explained as anything but turned vertically-a-beetle’s claw that points downward a canoe formation, which have these actual floppy but perfectly capable of sustaining all the weight above them – legs that actively, but temporarily stop when in need of being fully secured, legs. Swamp-rings of pudding, surroundings the roundness of them entering and mixing in the leg-mold; of blackish-honey that squirms on them; but the area between the pouch holders and the full extension of an inner leg swing, stands firmly as a stop, or some large long-mile of pure-chitin-tar a street. Stopping the leg from squashing the fluid-holders; they’re beautifully crystalline, the many heads it bears, not of glass or crystal but some inward-outward, and then receding –into a hard blocky set of round-hurricane formation barrels, twisted beneath them lain a bulbic pear-shaped but with strange spiked regions clearly chiseled as if out of metal, upwardly tinged, like futuristic fish hooks that beat up and down like pistons. Whereas these bulbic crowned by cups of see-through bubble-balloon trapped in figure-makers of scream-inside trapped humans, had, wax-candle elongated reeds of throats holding the bulbs, and the crowns on top of them, were more like amassed in organic mounds that made sight of singled out islands, on top of which stood these flesh-barrels. Four great risen blanket-bodies, pyramid like, intersected, out of which drew the stalks, beneath which threw the legs held, between them, as if bridged together, both left and right of them, respectively so, two elongated bodies, larvae-drawn out, humanoids at their ends, but only from the torso high, filled with the recognizable features, as if demonical in nature, but armless, and their heads were giant pea-fat-baggy-formations that had, at their ends large-simple baby-rib segmented, but gum-meaty, pumping horizontally or at an angle since they were constantly being flung back and forth, crude-teeth bearers- these being peculiar organs of their own. Yet, from the distance, this strange creature looked like nothing but an ugly, tiny, dancing crab, in the strange way it danced and walked; my pet.

A night had passed during a clemency that almost came to make an echo’s trust in, leaving in, entering:

Upon the brow-bow, of the street:

‘My god, what have you done to this poor man, and how far, how sullen, and what has he, dare I say, done, to deserve such a boisterous remark, scolding the sod where he stands, but the one most pernicious Arigaskos’s word left to itself benigned by wretch and hardly peril?’

‘He is bled too dry, leave him be and don’t return until the nerves are put back to the shed they’ve been taken out of, redding!’”

Fake numbers abstract algebra:

‘The fourth root of a radical of four is equal four, for a given four with the property of one. Since the root of one equals one, then, four, having acquired its property becomes its own root, by means of property abstraction.!’

‘Night’s coming in about five hours, but I won’t be able to pull the nickel out the plague, shit’s too nasty for me to touch it again, after last time, I’d much rather sit and watch it so-so unfold before my eyes.’

‘What’s it come onto?’

Something shook the ground with a hardly a matter of swaying back and forth an alabaster cough upon which it had been propelled meter by meter with every passing second that followed, in the minute they all barely handled the bothersome candor that came in-between.

‘Blood is on my hands, and these warm-things are filled with a miasma that spreads everywhere and on anything I touch. I cannot help myself, nor can I deny the need to breed with the fragments of women that are spread on the ground!’

Women grew, out of everything, albeit split in unnaturally hard-to-stare at for far too long stones, it was an amiable trench that could not be avoided any longer. They were drenched in stone and ground. Growing out of each of them, split, never showing up in any other form other than being split in many pieces that could not move but had been ravaged, as they still carried the sings of having been used by the occult in their dark practices. SO many un-unuttered:

Wires

Twin globular rancid while racing inside their tiny, unnatural, uglier craniums- bearing temples of tar-wearing tents –triangularly pyramidical tendon-horses. On their bodies rocked back and forth the riders, some women that were ancient in look and age, rummaging in their purses, unnaturally disabled by the fauna that had grown on top of them and on their veins, some hardly-hard, harder to stare at crowns of fifteen meters or so that were partially lodged in their outwardly worn rib-cages. Breasted by tender bone-pillars, they rose from the bowels of the earth, ginger scented leaves following their release from beneath the ground. From the gregarious chants, of Georgian-swollen sung for Gods, bearing their standards they’ve started growing, latching on everyone they lay gaze upon, especially the walking men, for no living creature could possibly walk or spare a cruder-look, cursed immediately, all were shook as they had rode into the remnants of each town that had been touched by insularly yet crudely worn, a desolation.

‘Sisters, I’ve fallen to the peril of disease, I’m afraid that they might repel me by sight, if I’m met by one such as I, of mere touch and ponder, what will be had, closer yet stronger, we shall both fall to disease!’

‘How so, oh comely to youthful glance and gaze, of what peril shall your fitful death counter, or properly said, might repel the sight of?’

‘A grim and shallow desolation, the damned fools that shall bring upon the yearned for sullen, damned be damned, creation of a vile-forth brought upon my brow, a flower. Shook and wretched, made to be, for a single, simple touch shall abreast me with such unspoken agony.’

Machines of steel erupted from beneath her horse of growths, lodged as they were to her back, of course, they only made her torture so much crueler as they attached to every single thing they could, every tall-building, every pillar and every hook there was in place; buildings, and wretched by her, blue-collar men she had cast away the work twas scheduled, fifteen hundred thousand days at least, or so much more, beyond each raze and razing of the ground. Each of her sisters, upon the sight, were made to sit in place and refrain from taking cuts or cruelly disjoint by light. A fellow along each castle:

A Hospital had been stolen from them. Every patient killed, every suitor filled with spiked peels of large fluttering growths of wild resin that soon disappeared within the very few meters out of which it sprouted, then benigned, it refused to walk again; attached to her, many machines counting the cuts, the life-that had been stolen from her during the coup d’état, the pulse nearing an end. They had each fed her a tear for each was pulsed out by flesh, beneath their skin, only being capable of, released by extremely painful cuts that had to be pushed in, second by second until every single one of them had been forced to painful thrust behind. Leaning against the walls weakly, fainting; if a single knife-wielding man was there, he might’ve killed them, easily, with thrust-withheld from him, and praying they might not rise from the tombs they were cast in. Noise was being made outside. Venturing forth, a window nears the maiden.

‘Alarm, alarm, they come forth, the strangers, from Paris or Socrates, of Philosophy or of Tenebrous Gelatin, whatever thine felt be!’

Armed, were they no army’s man, but they were delighted to hear the echoes and the wails they had imagined them hanging on, luring each man with each defeat to come closer and bow down at their most wearied by forced and by evil – thoroughly wasted, warmed by the flames of a sun that was become soon the New-Moon. Giant edifices were present in each hole that was surmounting each corner of this room, at this cast-throne, that was slowly being helped recede from on top the floor. Zigzagged cylinders finally drew beyond, a flight of stairs made of put-togethers, all that were winged, finally cast down what the sister had been praying for. A deep-engorging storm of clouds, many fallen apart demonical figures, or the bodies of, cast in flame with each thunder strike, stirred in air, shot like rippling waves-after, stones were cast from above, sending men in flight as soon as it could be helped.

‘Is she to life past the hour?’

One of the sisters approached, immediately casting the pillow and the swollen blanket away from the bed. Entering her chest by a large palm-shaped razor, her fingers being needle-shaped with eyes the size of large almonds, a cat being inserted, she had carried along, tied to her belt, inside the poor woman’s vault-y gut. IT will do her well, for now:

‘Another hour, and she’s still going to be alive, even if we pulsate the venom by means of suckle!’

‘Are you certain about it now, sister? What is she to do if that fails, another?’

‘Perhaps, but first, let’s see!’

Within the hour the room's flooded slowly, reflections being met by their faces, slowly being worn down, as by age, askance, bloodied paintings, surely refrain from leaving their marks, as their sister's being sutured properly, then constantly being lowered, then raised, above and beneath the sign of a simple, dark, rummage-in. They put a pint on top her head. It was heavy, weighted by iron and by eleven-hundred thousand kg's, imprinting the word Rabidmercysociopathcynicalkillaoanimalsdonotcrossmeorelse, a tattoo but in skin submerged, incapable of being removed, bewildered they were forced to see what cruelty has been instilled on them, as they continued to survive on what little resources they had brought with them, even after resorting to devouring their horses, their children, their wild animals and their pills, and. The very metal that was made-machine.

'Cyril-Propane of a Death-Maze corpse, shall I help feed the lords again?'

'I'm afraid of the uncertainty that's left to be, as you can clearly see now, there's but nothing we can make use of any longer, for a proper sacrifice requires we do something that cannot be done, unless they steal away and make way for a drawn frown!'

Delivered from the premise was the Muse. Followed truly but naught short, but a completely ruined scalping of what used to use'. By human Bibles brought to mine, what she and her sisters like the furies were tried, by mind or by lived-for thrive, from beneath a few piles, it truly shew what for man or mankind it meant to be alive. Left in stupefying putrefaction, one of the few drew out. What might be taken for paralysis was taken for what only meant or used to mean to be alive, for he leaped, a fish out of the water, struggling to near her, a robust sphere of clot beneath him popped, propelling him forth with every leap, for as long as he had blood to produce them, he would draw forth, if the blood-loss he survived. It was red on the semaphore and this was illegal. Even she reproached him, staying her legs, not to cross on red.

'Are you hungry, may I beseech a way to ease your sagacious suffering by any means? Perhaps I could, perhaps I could try?'

'Nay, woman, you've done more than enough, I'm pained by my suffering, yet by your beauty, still I'm drawn to!' He said.

All of the sudden, stopped within his tracks, he pulled out a marker and started scrawling nonsense on his face, permanently inked, still crossing on red, she saw, annoyed by it as well.

'I could head back into the Hospital and take a few shots with me, some morphine, some cyanide-liquid, some poison, or just pure-distilled-death.'

'Beat me all you want but I will not cry, nor end myself by begging your put-me-out-of-my-misery offer. I'm better than that, I endure!'

'Hear this?'

'What?' The man confusedly asked.'

'Your organs, I can hear them splashing against your inner-bodily walls. I think they're all completely, liquefied, are they not?'

‘Perhaps you’re but a trifle wrong, would you not say?’

‘That may be. But I can definitely feel them, not yours. But someone else’s’, whom have you robbed the organs of belonging to, you uncouth sod of a scoundrel?’

‘My children who had hatched out of eggs, I rid them of all, my sisters, ovaries, ate their fetuses, now, they’re all dead. And I’m proudly still standing where I am, stronger than I’ve ever been. Better of sight, healthier; can walk because of it.’

He bore within him the body of every man, woman, child he’s ever eaten, their dreams and desires, their wont, their will to survive, their flaws, their degradation, even their faces, the faces he was wearing now, fruits of bile, and of evil, lamentation. But she was not impressed by this sight. Albeit, they made him bulkier and with every five pound they added on him, he simply became stronger, fatter, so much harder, that, he could pop the pints of blood-banking eight pints, at the very least; while also being stomped by beasts. There was no return to life any longer. Not a single one that he could endure. Since, all that remained from this chaos was a few flats first floor, most buildings? Were down-turned-tilted, into the junkyard of an old and ancient town whose natives belonged and were given, soul-fully speaking to Christ and to Providence:

‘What have you to say for yourself?’

As soon as the glassy blade of an eye-moon came, step by step on top of him, holding him down with all her strength, there. The-grass hippy gross- blood-hopper leaped. Before either knew it, she was being held beneath, on top of her, remained he did, for some time now, until it had become uncomfortable for either party laid in question.

‘I’ve got you now.’

But before he could proceed with doing what he intended to do to her, she was ruined. By her sister who had been following her for a long while now, came out of nowhere, with a pseudo-made out of her bone-cartilage gun, elongation that shot her face straight-clean off, leaving nothing but a tiny speck of a hole-drilled in the size of a saw, if it had been a fat wall-painting brush that was used instead of this now. Having rolled over to the side of her, what had remained to be seen were two parted gates that opened, immediately, the ribs, revealing an upward jumping little spiteful lacquered by dirt-scummy flesh, a falling apart, oily, leaping-like-a-frog dredge, that must’ve been naught else other than her ill-felt spirit, this –her soul.

Around them, in this empty street, lay a tidy harpoon-widened street-lamp the size of a foot-box with hampering brutish-looking egg-shelled olives on either side of it, adorning a stretch that connected them to the ground, mould-into it, along the crossing, a potted wrist-sized window come, alarmingly in appearance in a follow-after that included hundreds of them in similar-sizes, that popped everywhere such’s eyes would let them come, a few ugly-crawling with legs they stole from the men, sutured to them, TV’s that possessed the human limbs, even collecting them, a sun that was reddish-bloated, accompanied by a purplish sky that was even uglier, nastier, and filled with the same tendons their horses were wearied of carrying with them, large glass statues that crudely moved along, stealing bodies, especially the ones that had rained from above prior to them revealing themselves, barrels and kegs of rum, wine, whiskey, tequila, cocktails, and even nastier cuts, boughs that were made of bodies, and icing that was made of the shoulders of mountains that contaminated the air, until everything was completely encompassed by wild-pus-like, some gas-ish white; ugly, nasty, rope-shaped, long insects that had, on either ends, carried balloon-weighting-down baggy pants, with tinier corpsed- plants, inside of which they grew, and were benumbed. A few cars here and there, and a giant ugly-mole shaped, tinier moon of growths that was amassing organic matter by some fleshy roots that kept spreading everywhere, parasitically, then drew-back.

Sitting on the one pale street, of some fleshiness fifteen, around the crude-alabaster craning in head that gave birth the Primordial Gibraltar, before the coming of the Huns, millions of eons of lodged Earths being connected to the girth of which, now, was the place in which she fell, that was adjacent to his giant floating hearth, there standing, with her in his embrace, none other than the Incarcerated pulp of a beam, floating, imagining her alive, tenderly drenched in blood. Above them, deliberating was her sister and the strange creature that had dared turn the poor wretch into an executioner. The smell of incense was broadly a splinter of what it used to be, the two of them casting a mere addition of the dark-glancing, barely standing cast-upon the two of them, floating beneath them in that descending fall of a few fall-apart's, through the first front-parcel rivers and roads that added into an utmost unnaturally defunct tributary of tar-covered stone, the stole of strange, billion-of-eyes-filled birds, that cackled, that laughed, performing their wild boisterous sounds, all cast the shadow upon the abomination, the wretch, the woman, her newly to him wed suitor, that was but a simpleton, nakedly a body, that of a crude-starved man, whose legs were many, the frame of a comb, all legs appendaged by claspers, that wrapped and held her, preventing her fall. His chest being open, her finely placed into him, some kangaroo, bur whose head was a bear-biscuit after being dipped in milk-shaped, grown-balloon fat, with strange features that reached around, impaling, still he was a pseudo-humanoid, many little wretches of some unnaturally darkly held communion, hidden in secret air, invisible door-houses that floated around him.

‘I finally found what I’ve been looking for what could only be a million years I have never-stopped my search for a moment, for my lecherous desire, whatever I may cruelly forsake now, abandoning my gaze, fiddling the befuddling gift that has been given onto me during my lonesome prayers in this abyss after being abandoned by my people who died beneath the four great curtain-falls of Tenebrously-foraged Thrusts into the Outer-planet, on top of which we stand now, refrain from sinking deeper unless you yourselves want to be lost for the sake of it, forever, in that never-ending maze that’s devoid of any possible escape, that may never be reached, the vengeful and the brave!’

He had made a house of it. A crude tent lay on top a crag, a ledge being seen, whisked from afar. Honeymoon spent at the crossroads that never touched.

‘Disciples of many little simians you’ve found bellowing, mesmerizingly craning each neck, each egg-hatching, every single one of them being promised, given onto you to hold. For you’ve been trapped in its web, the one that stole something from you, I can see it, even now, even then!

Trapped over fifteen hundred years ago!’

‘Where, and how do you know that?’

How could you possibly know that?’

‘Because your sister, that you thought to’ve killed by means of force is alive and she’s whispering in my ear your every secret as we speak while I’m capable of fully, as I’m captivated by her capabilities of carrying on with her overly indulging to the mind stories at such a rate that I can barely wait for another second while she’s preparing to full render the entirety of her- life onto me, listening to her while multitasking the murder that’s about to commence and be propagated and propelled onto you from this point on, where I stand and nearer to your cast-in bodies, which shall be stomped into non-existence!’

With that joust he charged, cast away, joined the clouds, was missed, she wept, and never saw her sister ever again. The strange half-a-man that was with her becomes her husband. Now they, she flies while he keeps making clot-bubbles that pop, entering a fine apartment they spend the summer in. Not a single neighbor is alive to make noise and this is a paradise that cannot be broken, or torn apart, as long as they have each other, suffice to say, they are led-lead? To believe that there is no peril in this world that could ever threaten to tear them apart. Maligned only by daylight alone, they settle with fifteen children, all born wrong. She then sutured them to their father, who is given a pair of two long-legs, made of them, he walked out one night, and was never seen again by her eight eyes, either. Lastly, last night, she kills herself by hanging, like a nigger.

If it had been mentioned sooner than the parsonage in question was reviled by this abhorrent behavior that’s been most inavertedly-wicked in terms of, displayed, the tricked by this promise of their salvation citizens who had been praying for the death and the passing of this unnatural thing that was the sisters’ arrival, perhaps one could even be lead to think that there some compassion thrown here and there, left to be taken for granted. But whereas most of them had already given up on this promise of a brigadier’s future, they had settled to live in the underground water-silos after slowly but rancorously crawling through the secret beneath the basement-cadaver giants’ basements, having to undergo hard-landings that almost ended up ruining their bodies in the process, prior to them slowly advancing on the ladders, emptying the structures of most of their kempt volume of water, before finally settling into their newly-found homes. Albeit their almond brains that had been chipped by the constant nickel-trauma forced against their skulls by bashed-trumped on top of, violently yet subdued repetition, which, upon having been reduced to un-recuperating capable of repair of masses of, begun sending them mixed-messages in rapport to their delirious desires to drew breath again, in the sullen sunken darkly-succumbed what’s become of their home, the Earth, since they desired rebirth, being incapable of accepting this strange imprisonment their new-lives promised them from this point on.

Settled on escape, they had mounted their Silo’s control panels, which, upon being revealed, after they each assimilated the water, having grown to unbelievable proportions, trapped inside, but shaped like can-cylindrical dwarfed-by height beings of meat, had but immediately surrendered to their full and complete control, which allowed them to conjoin themselves to the very soothing stones they stooped against.

What was the evil thing that succumbed to their full resolution while they couldn’t comprehend the lack of control that had been cast upon them during their tormentous toil out of which they could barely be made aware of being completely trapped inside of?

Their advance was hardly a matter of ever having endured being slowed down until this point. Poignantly as it were, he had come, out of nowhere, stooping low, the drooping servant:

‘My hand has sent me to find you, he’s the one who is in charge with your command, and it is in him that you shall find the peace of mind that will never be shown to you in the world that’s hidden beyond your senses, above!

A hand holding within itself another hand whose empty graves, which it nicked while sliding them between each other, wildly, openly, as the observers, winged-black rats made of stone mites, observed, each finger, as they kept playing with these empty graves.

‘It’s a nuisance of a thing, is it not, hand?

Why must I seek, recuperate, provoke such lowry as each man’s presented, onto thine service?’

‘Men such as those you’re being sent after, they’re not to be openly discussed. They are cruel, in possession of some lust that can only wretchedly distort their vision of this world, an appendage to the great creation of man that has fallen since the days of great Eve and her lustful stance destroyed during the fall of the cast she had fallen out of the graces of the Haven of where her lustful aggrandance is loft settled to’ve remained where she is!’

Alone, aghast, they wailed, the two of them refraining from speaking what illness had entered their minds, by this disillusion being only cast back in. An open door-of-stolen-stoles-of-stones-that-draw-forth-in-heat-shaped-nine-with fifty other Laplanders that were dancing around; he tried to light his cigarette, the Laplanders’ face withdrawn at the sight of the smoke that was completely obscuring his ornamental plot of spiels:

‘I think there’s but a thing to do, mister. Left to your doings and to your devices, you will forget yourself, no doubt, become weak, little pepper, a piper being no better than a man in your wrong-standing. And, I could see reason if there was a better man put in front of me.’

Childless yet forlorn by the memory of having been beaten by a cast; they whom had appeared had never been there for him, at all. And yet, they made him think or consider the worst, the worst of the worst.

Spare Tyal

A fine boat, the finest seen, one that would make only the beast appeal to the courts trying to munch bits off it and wallow in the shove-in after!

If it came to a iota of punches, then, and only then would there be a call for reason to succumb even to the most sluggish of blows!

‘We shall start thinking again once it’s safe.’

‘Are you certain there’s even the slightest chance for us to move a muscle whilst under the condition durn’ the night?’

‘But I, I’m rather uncertain of what’s to happen from this point on. You wouldn’t think the lamp would start flickering the candle’s sprites off by winded bluff, oh surely not, ought I to be chucked into the sea otherwise by worthy praise, my good man!’

It would mean nothing unless. Unless someone bought him another one of those nose-flints to snort some jittery-shot-past, niche orgasms, induced by taking them in a god damned row, shot-shot-shot-another drink to my brother’s oh; dead-eyes inside the cup still staring, the Dina’s swearing by hour, grown on top the cup; with little berries speaking to the strange man whispering to clouds, outside the locale, where the anchor’s been thrown and gutted-rugs died out. Still bleeding on the various stone-flossed floors; ah, a fine night, Miss Marry, you’re still thinking of me, still sweating. Beads running down by brow, I’m beneath you after all. You’re my muse, but I can’t see you until you’re proper. Clothe yourself, immediately, or I will call the cops. Another cherry’s in my cup, but she’s been let known of my intention to pop hers. Of course, I’m about to joust between each rack. I am the dragon after all, and she is mine; at no point in time was it made unclear or muddled with each step taken, erect, towards her, she knows that, moist. I can smell the moisture; a wink, kiss-kiss, my cat, a feline, labour; communism. Piss.

‘I shall not intrude on your “meeting” by soless incidence of happening to be here, lest one of you admits to’ve entreated a formal invitation that I have surely accepted, in the case of which my presence here would most certainly be cemented; but I will sit on top your tabernacle, chewing on a tiny-brittle mildly-flavoured, spiked with sulphur, rubber-cherry bubblegum resin pill, while you make up your mind!’

‘My good man, I think there’s something to it yet you’ve not thought of.’

‘That being, if you don’t mind me intruding upon your succour?’

‘The very fact that you’re under the presence of a most itinerary upon the very beat of the clock, hourglass’ abode, nut-crack of a minute too early. If you had taken a moment longer if such an order beckoned the preparation of, I might’ve considered treating your short-comings with, at the very least some degree of well-thought behind of understanding, therefore would’ve answered you accordingly, if such was the case; but now, I’m afraid to say that I’ve lost my interest almost entirely so.’

‘I am into dog-beheading!’

There, something should definitely work. A couple off the table.

‘It’s your fourth attempt already and I’ve yet to see any particular change show up on the radio, you certain there’s nothing inherently wrong with it? Perhaps a head too high, perhaps a missing limb or something of the blinded stone-benighted shown up upon it and ever-present come to rancour’s thrice forlorn?’

‘I don’t think you truly belong to this place any more than I do, no offense meant, but I seem to be of a mind that you’ve truly lost your touch when, and only when they made a point to laugh at you, dear lady of rescind!’

‘They tried stealing some of my cattle-ducks, the ones without eyes, the ones trying to mock me still in gibberish and of stolen-yet forlorn, belonged to, yet disturbed, and fallen, bodies tall and. They, they stole a piece of my brain, looky-look!’

A part of her metallic skull opened, revealing a good portion of her hair-line as being a falsely-presented stuck-job with a little bob dangling from one side to another, some elongated slug and its mother, an unnatural thing that stressed within itself, no doubt, a few fingers that entered it revealed a bodily-replica of herself, deeply lodged in her brain, across the many lumps, slightly raised. Of course it would be troublesome, trying to ascertain a simple question as to try her just yet. To reveal what she's been hiding and just how plain she was; instead, he simply licked the inside of her brain, slobbering with plumper come-together lodged onto, and therefore stronger, almost-frozen jets of springs, spittle of thinly-mixed, unnaturally sprung cobwebs that found themselves, soon enough, melting upon the nearest flood, which turned the insides of her brain into what was seen, a deeply yet submerged lump, basked into a cauldron of gelatine. It was his fault.

'You didn't break anything, have you?'

'Of course not, of course I haven't, that would be a deep mistake, wouldn't it? I know you best, and I know truly not to do as such, and there, protest against some of the rubble crumpled upon each row. To bother a growth of deadly snow that might pick your heart and cerebellum clean. It'd be a deeply troublesome mistake, to say the least!' He considered the following murder, piece by piece, mind for blindly following what little was there left for such a light he could glimpse a piece of during the growth she had suffered putting her body through.

'My good man, I was lead to believe that you're lost, indeed I have, by one of my most trusted advisors, trustees to my very cousin, the king himself; who have betrayed him, lending onto me a most immediate a-vow of faithfulness, testamentary to the very belief people of their kin appear to bear a standing of; scholars brought from across the country, war-bred by ancestry, but made to learn through repeated supposition as well as enforced severe-conditioning. Lap-dogs bought with bone-cherries made out of char!'

'You feed them nothing at all!'

'And that's to say I'm a cruel man; to which I say, there's no proof of such calling as to kill and bring in chain, upon the Porter, who is at my command, for the time being, whose mind is set and will do what I tell him as well if I yearn for, a, much-entreaty!'

It would serve no one, not a single man of low-breed made in jar stay-hand rotten- shanty-spoken, rot-end brought, and brightened brigadier!

The stations were open. A few scoundrels heading out the doors with plenty Moors-lynched poorly stranded on the steps, passed by the niggers torn apart and rotten, brandy passed from one standing-lightened by the mood of some street dance that was ever-being brought onto the sight of a few men who lost upon their gambit then endured having to pay one Calico-Broad stacked, some nasty shark-Jewess that was being passed around afterwards but she was too shy to get a word in; or too dumb to notice her pockets being picked-up clean, when, a few tall-headed drumstick holding men started having a brought-upon a napkin little pick enter her by the side of her robe and before she knew it, this big-breasted launder was but stripped apart and made to dance between the men spitting the butts of cigar in her face and across her body where the marks of her last night's stand were made as clear to see as the daylight itself, while she bathed in the spit of more coquette, far more adequately dressed ladies; whose natural demeanour deemed it only ever-so natural to treat a member of their own sex most fairly in terms or in accord to the presentation she had clearly accepted the consequence of distilling as a part of self-exposure, the terms being agreed upon by all parties, who stood there laughing, and admitting to their arousal that this turn of events just so happened to be most exemplary as well as fanciful; since Jewesses are made to be passed around; these bimbos, this race of big-nosed bimbos with their on-rush of leg-spreading; adulterant in quiet and respite. Spread-legs, her name was.

‘Light my pipe, good man, for I’m about to gorge this meat-pie as I’m prepared to take a last stand before I’m turn to water-powder!’

‘Whose mouth must you agape that you’d die so youthful?’

‘The God above us, the one whose body’s still lodged into the Moon and partly in our planet’s woe, for not even the endless travesty of whoredom ever-lasting could possibly, feasibly dismiss this threat’s occurrence from ever-being dismissed, especially not one whose nose is almost as long as the frontward diameter of her tits!’ A well-taken into account observation!

‘Hope has long ago abandoned us!’

Especially when the Manifold-Yill came out of a building, striking its way out of some garage door since no other exist could accommodate for its enormous height!

A long fat-long caterpillar mammoth’s body, bearing three awkwardly grown legs, two on one side, as distant from one another as to form a peculiar downward pointing slingshot, as the one in the middle-by their side appeared to take in the lead in terms of how much fat it kept pulsating in and out of itself until it had grown the size and length of the entirety of its canoe-length body. A slim-almost board-shafted neck looked like a tiny sprout coming out of its body, holding a downward-pointed, near the neck, and at the base of the head, leaf-shaped beak-drill encased and incapable of opening formation, that held the shade of an upper form, far sturdier and almost as sharp as a lance, yet a strange horn it was, coming out of an upwardly humanoid-kept inside of – this being signalled by the bump on top of it or at the end of, cocoon; or an oblong-sarcophagus that kept one single by its left side. The tail at the opposite end was a giant-pipe-thing with a tubular opening that never closed. A bloody reddish purple with patched of grown on top of it, worms or some eely-parasites, or flaccid eels that were dead made its rotten grown, clothes of tatter, deformed and see-through, cut as well, falling apart. An almost uglily deformed canine; without claws, fleshy-still, with pouches hidden yet sprouting out and spitting on the floor as to feed the men rushing in to eat; devour, lest of all would they starve!

‘Is this your friend, you caller, the one you’ve informed me of the possible chance that he might step in and do something unappealing?’

‘Suppose it is, what’s it to you if that’s the case?’

A kindness was shown by one of the great-crudes!

‘There, and there and we shall put one more over there!’

‘And I say, the rape has only began and stopped for no other reason than the fact that. I would like to add, concisely so that there’s been an entry in the system, that’s been brushed beneath the puffy purvey-paddy pudgy Rhine!’

‘We shall cross the river still, benigned!’

Said the man during the trifle’s blind and there-abode, a snot-filled cold and wretched shawl-broth coloured tunicae; with whom he spoke as he approached, two feet-tender, brothled-smoke:

‘You’ve brought me a single man-devoured, slapped onto a little fridge-old and a plaintiff for the thing I misappropriated from your lot!’

‘I didn’t enteach you with as little wilt mildew, alas, I think there’s a bold owl stooping lower than ever-before, the lowest it has been; wouldn’t you agree?’

‘I think I would by any if any means! But I need to see proof for the god cowering beneath the owl, the one struck down, diseased, the prow!’

The Magnum Opus of Octopi-desperation, trident of Skaljad; lever that actions the trap door standing in front of them, trying at their nerves whiles the imperative only drew itself forth!

‘I am rather uncouth as to think there’s been a reason still withdrawn to take breath cottage’s broth away from your lips, ever-so delivered since to one of my many quills, therefore strung as you may be, stay your hands and don’t move while I take candid-arm!’

‘A yell for which I’m so-much-so withdrawn in stillness but shall not endear your approach anymore than any other man shall have it wilt by hand, abhor!’ Was the command of the latter!

A large unnatural pometry of little bulbs that erupted from the rod-end of the first engrained inside the outer husk-pyramidical formation, rounded around a curve, akin to a mountainous volcano with the head of a worm, all fleshy, wriggling around, with empty heads flying around it, big and curvy, almost-close in kin to oblongs fused together, like pea-shapes, but wearing crude-ugly drained with pus and blood, covered and dirtied for funeral-bagged organs floating and gloating around them in the most unnatural manner feasibly imaginable by means of intermediary reprehensiveness; sea-jelly-shaped yet chitinous in hardness, almost impossible to fully penetrate without outside assistance!

‘Nigger, come on now, I called you twice! I called you thrice, come on over here little monkey-nigger, or I’ll start whipping out my whip on the plantation farm, where I’ll work you till you’re dead, I’ll take you by the bed, then I’ll rape your nigger-monkey wife in front of your little puffy niggers eyes and have them leap around the nigger cradle rum as your little nigger-brain starts tumbling down your little nigger skull!’

Good monkey, trained it well! A splatter on his head and there he stood, beaten till’ near-dead!

‘I hate them niggers, but kikes sell them cheap, I like these little monkey buffoons, especially does my whip! Whip-whip!’

And therearound! Another wave of slapping the nigger down!

‘Oh, little-little monkey, come hold the tray and if you drop it now wherever else, or drop it as you make your way towards the little shed I’m to rape your wife, I say! What the Deuce are you doing you little inbred monkey-nigger shite?’

‘I’m sorry massa, I’m sorry, but I dropped it!’

Fifteen steps started with the side of the wall, entered the two. Half and half-oblong-sheets of raised skin, one half-a-face humanoid with an elongated half-a foot on which it leaped on top of, a little drowning bulge-bulbic beneath it, a small almost rat’s tail formed ‘arm’ coming out of its chest, and the head, an ugly thing that was but a strange half-a-long nosed elongated Proboscis Monkey with some discrepancies in terms of weirdly it was angled. SO was the other, a mirrored brother to it. Both leaped from one side of each other’s slit, cheering on as the master did, the nigger getting whipped, them laughing at each tip of the lot’s un-feet.

‘Little nigger’s earned it well again! See? See? I wager we could get some shot in as well!’

‘I’ve got a confession to make. This nigger, this is a funny nigger, a fancy-funny, klunky, funky, little pace-around the furniture rock- nigger by the name of Noah.’ He’s keeping the distance, socially speaking. The nigger, the nigger is afraid, he is shaking. The nigger is shaking. I want to whip the nigger with my whip right now!

‘I am a politician and this is a funeral!’

It happened two days ago in Washington Dc, when Joe Biden was elected as the President of the United States of America, fuck him! Dumb fucking nigger-lover; I bet he’s not as smart as poor white kids, fucking Biden!

The Boleno-Hour had started not too late, nor too rancid past the caveat of simple compulsion, there, up there where they met in silence and they spoke to the few men that were present during the resuscitation of the small blooming little pepper-growth shaped buffoon, with his four heads sprouting out, and there, where he floated, one could see four metallic lower-beams dropping beneath, almost spikes by horns, set in slight-but highly raised past the hover, ‘flight’, through which he used his advancement to approach one of the few, lesser, but prime to interlope; adorning globes that were put on this fine Christmas Eve of a fine December, stormy-as there is a snow-storm weather.

‘My wretchedness diagonally inclined brothel of a cart, it is in need of getting pushed out, or else something might happen to it or it might just come for me to take a plunge into that pit of tar, down the gulley, where the Saints still lie, during their lieu of much bequeathing!’

A ruing-ring knocked, no cattle; nigger’s face drenched in the asphalt, I must kill this ugly dumb monkey nigger and his brother. A voice had betokened a most holy- forth driven yet endeared as to slacken for a moment’s thrice withdrawn decanter, more-so as to prevail and avoid a hindrance, contemplating in partition such as one would have it, mildly unkind a bothersome disaster, yet, as it was seen before, as will it be still, could be, tawny-ripped apart, they called:

Four men gathered but they were simpletons, with no disciple’s knowing saved in heart but perched; the Lavon affair, the Holocaust didn’t happen either; once again they gathered all around a pile of midriff wooden-made stove they had adorned the presence in the chamber of a few dozen more; similar in ilk, kill all nigger and chop their children's feet, fucking monkeys, I can see them lighted past the lynching rope snipped.

'We must slaughter what's left of the moon and allow for a second one to grow out of it if we've still a say in it to be gotten so!'

A long lozenge curbed one of the volatile globes as they fell.

France was under siege once again, but for the military rifles and the files, documents and the little puffs of Cuban cigars being passed from one tent ton'ther where to yonder they could think or consider drying their clothes around the corner.

The German looked with quite some surprise at him as he said it.

'In Balkans we have our version of the Operated Jew; we call it the Ovulating Jewess!

I swear it to you sir, they're getting fairer and fairer every skinned year, and not a gulley's eye's being exchanged any longer at their bamboozlements because we is thinks they're one of ours.'

\ But my dear friend, there is destruction in the hands of our Lor'd short coming end of the road!'

He slashed himself by accident, with a knife around his lip's cut. There was no help in doing it either, how's he's missed, never to be come to light.

Both men were walking along some effortless trail of the road where they came upon a crossing of a few meters of titter and tether where the blinds were cripple-dead blinded by scoop-out of their socket's conic. It was a bubbling champagne after all, miss-draconic sayings being imparted onto this lacerated elfish dish of spoons of gelatine and little pucker's woe that was cannibalized by one of the lepers that came from the bowels of the snow. It was impossible to remark any other leper falling apart from the crowd.

'Friend, it's been a long time, hasn't it? Since you spoke to me, and in the name of Reich, I call upon your Green-EGG Yolk's tray, present onto me a little cut of sleigh, bubbling with growths as well, that I may look and call upon the stole of never-ending wretches' dreg!''

'Whom would your adoring sight betokened upon few and let alone adorned sight, lest heed and breathe upon wretched gas, and plenty mass, might dare, upon such entreaty's woe, as to bring yonder the asking of the more to've come upon our so-established brothel as they did, the ones that presented themselves to us are made of a wing, can't you see it?'

'I can, but they will eventually die of either starvation of somewhat so, dehydration long before we long for, such approach them as we might, and yet I feel as if there's agony to such entreaty, lest defend as you might, I can call you beckon trust upon the sight, if must, forget we ever encompassed them with the pity of empty stars. So does the will of Mars tells us to carry on through the rapiers of growths and onto the beds of many faceted maws and empty cords, twas' ill that shall endure! Lest be quiet, let them grow and grow!; pettily show them how they might entreat the cowl that we shall cover them with!'

'And if they fight and come apart?'

‘Then we shall either give them an alm each, or see to it that they each tear each other apart in reek!’
Yonder said and thine defeat!’

‘An alm each?’

‘An alm or reichmark, whichever that be; I long to forget whatever comes to mind or foil or whatever centre of lee-way might come onto the pray once we cut the feet and turn them up-side down, let the grown betoken what little light renown they might seek during our correspondence we might choose to carry on with them!’

‘I shall not forget this treachery if you won’t!’

‘Be sure not to, for the story you told me, so!’

‘Seen first sight, stealers and lord of such benighted change as they might see it so; fit to a leper’s entreaty in the corny prattle’s come onto the row, might I add that some of them I did end up fancying myself, perhaps?’

Stormed away from sighted sleigh, a hand that would count a bringing upon the forlorn wage that comes and came after, whichever to have illed-itself and to’ve come brought yonder, no, and no regard might serve suffice to the upbringing of the wood-cattled ancients that were dwarfed to see.

‘A machine was stolen from this desk, this very desk we’ve been trying to hide our valuable drugs inside of.’

Criminal-Pagan Hortis, killer of niggers, killer of whores, killer of kikes, the killer of life, extinguisher, slaver slave-massa; lyncher-Holocauster, carrying on top his back a giant room-shaped gas chamber-filled, with –dead niggers, inside of which there grew fetus-like bulbs that kept large deformed humanoid faces that had their bodies corrugated-twisted around spiels of iron-bone chaffs of appendage growths, twisting continuously in their vortexes as the human heads would change into weird apparition of figures put together with all of their limbs. Outlines of humans drawn on top of one another as if they were gumballs inside one of those spherical glass- gum dispenser holding insert a coin in for gum devices; swimming or oozing-squirmingly, vibrating their bodies as they created the illusion of floating inside one another, in this see-through gelatine substance they were deeply submerged inside of. Many of them barely corporal; but they were fed gas through the nigger-kilt figures that had their faces stretched around every facet of the gas-chamber.

Hortis had earned this chamber by fair-trial, in the year of twenty seventy eight; long after the Holocaust had been thoroughly disproven, yet he’s done it as a matter of principle, creating this ‘replica’ which served as some kind of –spit-in-your-face-faggot- reactionary, disrespectful show of don’t tread on me, or I will lynch you nigger, I will kill you kike, fuck you spic, gook, mongoloid, shit-skin and poo-eater, down the line! His face was taller, a beam, contorted by four great floating eyes that were implanted in the great four torsos removed from the prehistoric men of evil that divined this half-of-a-planet into existence. Wished and whiskers of cats with wishes’ endowed liek Dijins, crowds of large spiels and up-rooted grass; following them around. And wretched as they might be, the torsos of men changed in colour, flashing unnervingly; with the eyes being almond, sometimes rounded, with their irises being benighted ancient runes with inwardly protruding mouths that were hidden, hundreds of them, levitating and floating around inside the torsos, which were the size of Water Silos. A tiki-long totem face, indeed, he bore; wide like some fan- and bearing insect teeth, appendage-like extended, segmented and his body was a giant bulb-born large rack of six or seven fat- anaconda-like hoses of a girth of, thicker than my arm, as if these snakes ate trucks, but beneath them, they held coffin-shapes that were constantly opening, as they revealed bloated worming lesser humanoid-creatures with pillar heads and ears contorted-like tusks that were connected to their bodies, vertically and diagonally as well, multidirectional, since they shot out of their 'ear' holes as if they were roots, connecting all limbs- forming large long-crowbars or beams of metal or bars that they used to dig their way down into the ground.

'I've reached you, altar, I'm beseeched to ask you the question I've been meaning to ask you of!

Will I be required of to carry on a sacrifice no less, no more than needed from this point on? Will I be required to do so in order to be allowed in the neighbourhood?'

It was a fine neighbourhood after all. Most excellent; I, Nicu Stefan Cristian am explicitly inciting violence against Jews and Niggers, as well as against the Government of the United States; I am a terrorist and a Holocaust Denier; I am a propagandist, a vile criminal, proud of it as well. I revel in it, I do it in the open; no shame, no dignity; arrest me officer! I am the illegal, the controlled opposition; I shall divide and conquer! Rub, rub, rub, hands, oldest trick in the book; now I am Red. A communist, Menshevik! But I am also going to get away with it because I am going to use the Jews as a scapegoat; and all will be fine afterwards.

The altar was silent for the longest hour!

Echoes of the unknown had been slitheringly come, glittering with unkempt-quiet long-besekt to be adjourned and lest beheld, let growth be humbled, therefore stench followed in.

'Thine path is elected by council of woe-embodied scorn and leech foretold to carry on a flag of many killed disciples that were mourned for during the darkness of a passing day.

You suffer of Aphasia and shall not enjoy your stay on the premise, unless you come to be elected as the one that has dissected some of the rows of animals that humbly walk upon the premise told!'

A knock on the door came as soon as four am, in the morning. The light was barely permeating through the premise, right as the Sad-Globe Ulfar had pulled out his ancient Lugar, trying to find out which one of the bullets was the last one he used to, to get it in. There was no doubt about it. No one was around. No anymore; usually they'd be prying in, trying their hands at something they weren't good at. The thieves and scoundrels, all came beneath the same wrapping. Strange elongations of wool'd Tunice, but somehow eerily strong, across the way there being a large raft stranded blockage that cut the access to the elevator; Ebola being a nigger-disease; no touchy the handle, or else wipe-clean off with napkin. Smoking old cigars come from contraband; while his subaltern-fellow, who was beneath him, carrying him on his back, a rodeo he didn't ask to be a part of, drew some eyes.

'Howdy neighbours?'

Crooked asking, largely dead; they had no insides, only suit-skins that were worn by molecules of air that carried these human-sleep bags with them. A thankless job:

‘Change the light’s filter, or else you might cause a power-down trouble rot! It will eat through man and throw out his body into one of the unnatural spots where kings and queens, their knights of kindness blind arose!’

And who if not the disciple of Ages to answer the knock?

A fine thread of stairs beckoned them to recall the time.

‘We’ve seen it go round and round, but we cannot control the climb, at least not in part. Not while they’re doing what we can clearly see with our very own eyes. They’re welding their bones and skin into those hooligan ramps, driving themselves forth, climbing on top of each other’s body’comb until pleased.’

Firth one of the holographic chambers arrived. Another one could’ve come no sooner than the one that presented itself twice the steps no longer worthy of handling the stairs.

Bobbling across the stairway toppled by one of the large canisters connected to its lower-bowel-bearing gut, entered the Geologist – Cottage Bob:

‘I’m trying to get you to commence the cutting again. Can’t you see that you’ve starved too many of our dogs with your poultry-rabble? I can’t even discern what’s going on any longer, amidst this chaos, the disillusion of your fragrance’s cast away!’

‘By what right and intonation would you have me admire your petite coat, as you are, complacent in apparel and apparently brought to me as you are now, would have you kilt where you stand and will be seen so, as I’ve let you know that there’s but little in the way stopping me from going around the hay-heated with boils as to be seen, willed to be the petty coat of brothel-ill. But don’t hold your breath away.’

‘And why would that be, strange maiden, albeit you’re someone I would not have yearned to speak of a second eye! Are ye something I ought to be afraid of, or have I truly lost my mind thinking there’s but still something I could miss from your abhorrent spiel, therefore bye, I bid you fare thee well!’

‘How and in what sense? There surely can’t be a reason behind this treachery as you could add no less. I see that you have no legs!’

‘Then my flight as damp as it is shall be made with this.’

His crutches were brought on from the nasty-corner church, with boils beneath him made of dirt. And yet it could be seen in the distance, laughing at them. A disturbing figure, disgruntled but wearing a chest of fifteen submachine gun elongations with bull-fort shaped clamps holding them together, as this strange round-body was but a ring of a blob, every limb having added to this serpentine man who ate his body, rightly so as he only spared himself of falling apart by being of no mind to ask for it. The cruelty of leaving him alive as he was; beyond reason; albeit too close to him. Rightly fell, had they, in the line of fire.

‘Move five meters forth and I shall blow your heads clean off, and I shall piss down the enclave and stare at it. There shall be no other morsel to worship in the blinded church. Or another skull like the maiden’s empty fornicated hope, in which she generously cast each spiel of each light.’

For what was worth it, they were both blinded by the knife he wore in his hand. Unaware and confused as to when it happened and when he leaped. Since he had no reason to have it on him; or to move this quickly to begin with, as some would have it said today. A wretchedness of empty hay, had promoted the disapproval of therefore stay. The thought of leaving faded after. And who else to gather around them but the bloody leeches that formed the sky. Many of them added on top of one another only to form the most defiled and disgusting of empty heaps of vile, the trench. None of them survived for long enough to be encased in the unnaturalness of empty craved for, flail as was the mast. A few good hours had been lost that way, with them frozen-paralyzed, wondering when the killing blow would land upon them and who would spare them of the greatest fright that's ever been had. A meticulously clean-cut landed partly come away. What only seemed to be a reasoned approach had ended with a stroke and therefore ended the first of empty feeling come out of the grown of foils, the innards weren't there.

'She's not a human, she's not a human like I thought her to be, but what are you, wretched harpy?'

For she was revealed, upon the sight. They were on a fine patch of grass spread in a sprawl circle with worming blood-come after period shot out of some guzzling dark home, made in her gut and allowed to spill right yonder. Where he leaped back and looked behind, the spot where they both stood, blinded, as was, desecrated by forces that could barely be explained after, had done little to no good to the site. A dark machine had settled on a distant raft.

'Bloat he, dark abhor!'

'The woman, I can feel her, she may not be a human but she is definitely a whore, a wretch, belonging to the drench!'

And they could not agree more, and none of the party disagrees either, as they laugh, as the bloodied-curved around their heads in corkscrew-pushed out as if mattered, tenebrously disjointed, grinning therefore stanced to ask the arch.

'Soon, the old man shall find her daughter killed upstairs; but lest be known of ye who speaks of her just yet, do not forget that I am the one who reasoned it be had, and still would have it wretched as to have the snot deeply forgotten, thrust into the gorge, abhorrent. Her life forgotten, almost as forgotten as the same upheaval of a Pantheon her like was betokened to!'

In a way, the fat blob thought, thought of that flat button that came out of her back. Twenty or so elephant-cylindrically welded, conjoined together into a great beam that sprouted out her back, like a tiny rocket that ended up being shot in her back; there it lay, an exposed giant bulb-button similar to some pill, or coat-rounder, flattened on the sides. And it was wide and unnaturally squarish, bolted in her as if she had been a machine, this peculiar deformity of an unnaturally dark-a neatly near-shot centipede without which she could not survive. Hundreds of organs stored into it as if it were a hive, and the hearts, the lungs, the ovaries, all but, well, grunts and workers, endlessly caught in their flight of rub-rub against each-other's bodies as they travelled wince-since, and rancid pinch, pinch; yellow, and made of iron, was this strange inserted into her blob. It appeared to have readied itself for the worst that was to come soon after. But the trauma around the area had left her made to wonder how ugly, red, affected, was the area out of which the faces of the soon-enough acquired gods were now transferred- forced traversed to, onto. On top of. Where they sprouted their limbs and their formed four great heaps, but only one reached the ground, only to've made more appendages and more growths for themselves in order to keep growing; until she was become the root of a great electrical wind-mill, uglily inclined on top of; no, it was like a plane, at the end of it, but they were all flaccid rather, the beam-appendage drooping as well; adding or pushing back the weight as far as they could.

'We've heard of your intentions and you made us rather so unruly-yearn for ask!'

One of the manifestations spoke at last.

'Sprout thee away and do not talk until misheard along the way.

Days come and pass, while the leper's cast past through, unnaturally deformed by the windows of the sky, the ruffians, hooligans of black clouds that were quickly enough forcedly become red by moisture quickly come from blood and soaked, through soil sprouting from the spring. The little men of red-combs inserted in their backs since.

None listened.

It was senseless for it to begin again. Danger lurked on every side, the corners being numbed-benighted! A foolish errand ended up lending him a turkey-stopped, and stooped as low he did-it brought onto a plate himself, and handed, to the leprous cannibals, never-handed by one of those that had their retrieval stench with wretched onions-cuddle-imbued homicide. Their hormones dictated kill-murder plumage; from that point on.

'Bring another man in, this one has played his part, his role, the drench. Wilt to be still wane, for the heathens shall not provoke no other's stompage come as well!'

Fryer in the making, caller, a rum bottle by his side, as tall as a beam, a fifteen meters, lost to the eye obscured by one of the drenched-in-blood curtains that encompassed four of the greater faced by ancient bones walls, as well as one of the half-cut-giants whose heads were hybridized with the ceiling, a few marbles lost on the floor, and a speck of trees, a dark-murky below, undulating in ripples as to be reflected against the gaily stooping, but closely secured by chains gallows that were adorning the side of the front entrance, which now stood erect-yet for obvious oblivious to them reasons was almost nigh-stooped stopped by a table that incapacitated such a pass through as one could only yearn-endure the waiting of a few minutes or even hours, stretching that far off, so they could enter and partake in the feast, the guests and the ones behind them, the leprous infantine bloated angels, whose wings were human-faced cones, whereas their heads were two eating each other- worms. And somehow they survive the hard winded-lights that were propelled by this ugly red sun, of born-to be half a wretch come out of, like a tiny peg or some oratory maggot shoved inside that raised itself like a mound, bearing a single great rod out of which some planets became attached, then fleshy. As they fed on it, constantly, on the read-dwarf-like filled with awe radiation, like leeches, like lepers, or Poets, of the most fallaciously inclined ill-fated thought-about lost in verse up-bringing felt, as such recital, which glorified their lord, their leprous tongue, as they call it now, of old. Whores, all of them, whores made of men, and pansies, fruits, betokened to be thrown into some cauldron, boiled alive.

‘I said, bring in another man, can you not see the fact that there’s a ruse come about? That there’s but no brittle bone that could have it? That I could see myself wilt believe I had it in my hands, my arms and the ones that I could call my friends were eaten by him, therefore end!’

I call upon a favour. End his treacherous life, immediately so, that I can rest assured that there shall be quiet as I sleep with flesh-behold!’

And with a sip of his rum, the master of this esteemed poultry varnished his gun with a crystalline river’s moisture drenched piece of cloth he rubbed it until it’s become as clean, and clear-to see, that it was made of a most fashionably esteemed quality, belonging to some long-lost lot in some factory-workshop, somewhere in the Canary Islands, from out of which, out of this very fancy warehouse, this, this gun, this gun, being more of a god damned gauntlet-mounted to his fingers, entered them by nerve-wires as to be directly connected to his very god damn brain, to have a go at it, and shoot it on a whim, this wretched tool of ruin and destruction had been, none other than stolen. That is correct, to the fault of a most esteemed adorer of truth and piety, the penitent’s belief abhorred, as to be tempted yet again at such’s n’ it be an adjuration of most lost-contempt to him and all the others, as to be let known so forth, it is true, this tool of war has been unlawfully stolen from the factory, before it was torched down, prior to it being rebuilt and destroyed as well, again-and-again, fifteen times well-after. Before boredom drove the vandals and the hooligans off; pow-pow by none other than the cops, she’s sleeping. My dear daughter, is sleeping. Wept the angel did in wake, drench the trenches, as it was only felt for a moment’s wake when all thought of her alive, driven in distilled disguise to one of the dark chambers. Past the crowd, and the table. Down the round and into one of the most hidden wagers. As to wilt an eye forget as soon, to swool upon the coming tool:

‘Wake at four and don’t forget, once you close an eye, you’re dead!’

Both were kept up by duct-tape. Speaking of the hares, the ones that entered were but mined with the eyes of the fallen angel’s porcelain shelf, lodged in his back, he gazed upon her sight. Looking down on her, at the very top of the stairway; two green cat like globes flashing gaily-rancid upon a squared brick of a bed-ridden porcelain-doll that woke up from her ‘slumber’ bold.

‘I’ve not slept for years, father.’

‘Where are your sisters, wretch?’

‘They are dead, I had to eat them now because you left me with nothing to satiate my hunger’s tender-bet.

Tenebrously darkened-stench and rancidly brought approach, I wager. When I am to meet the stranger again, I shall tell him of our exchange!’

‘Child, you’ve gone made with destitution, yet your rancid stance is little but felt-known to me, hardly touched as I am upon the subject’s interlopery, to say the least. I would not heed you stop and stoop low and hardly feel as if there ever was such a thing as peace; for wretched souls hardly know what’s theirs or want to!’

The last of the devils that were wretchedly-connected to her body by means of suture with nigger-citadel taken from them suture-knives, lopsidedly lodged into her as to provoke their resurrection from the evil murky death moving dark circular blocks of ink-like bothersome-to-look at portals yearned for her final days to draw nearer as to properly devour her soul and mind, once allowed to climb from the compact-box of black –fleshy around, connected by a wagon –trap, shaped like it anyway, that bore four great wormy-humanoid elongated figures with knives and pincers for arms who swamp in this fluid that surrounded both the trap and the wagon, and themselves, who penetrated this eel-like stretch these ruinous cadavers, spectres of meat that were connected to her still, yet failed to properly escape, trapped between their prisons and her, lay partly low, hunched and constantly tortured by these unnatural darkies, the four of them never-stopping the grim-torture as to punish them for naught else but the sin of having tried to escape from this lot, she was partly responsible of, sending them there to begin with. Having begun as well a process of retaliation driven by this unnatural urge, wrath and cowardly unremorseful adorned for wretched scourge of an un-minded mitigated filth, they started torturing her as well. In front of her very own father, yet. A farthing had been thrown in her face. In mockery, by her father. Who laughed at this wink one of the filth ones gave him in return. All having shared a laugh at this dumb cunt as the coin bounced of her eye before falling on the floor, bouncing a few more times after. Then he leaped twenty meters and their palms united, as they shared a moment. Before leaping back onto his spot; he's always thought of his own daughter as a dumb cunt, for he had always been in wont of a son. I hate women, but I hate niggers and kikes so much more!

There was her little music box's glassy-sound, whose echo-wilt be had already cast against chimes and dark a day forgottenly refraction that was cowed, to be sutured, as its nastily attraction had brought a dime, and leprously benighted, such's n't be culled, the attire wilt begone-benumbed, with littler leeches' fancifully set reflections, all numb-from destitution's Portugal' Supreme Institution, whose estranged people barely came to life, as followed. A knock's echo had thrust itself benumbed upon the rowed roof, the coned broth and the slither's crook upon the chimney-laughter.

A glorious thunder had barely managed to get past one of the crooks and the crannies while the carnage was carried awake, while the termites were filled with turpentine as well, across the chimney's booth, and the other soothe of a similar peel.

It sufficed to say that there was not a single man standing around the ground floor with an ample-arm left untouched and unsullied-swollen-turned, nor undemeaned by solace-grating. A garrison lay here and there, titter and tetter in the prior-making; until one of the least aware substances lay in place. A filth of sprawl-moving green and therefore filled with utmost cruelly made, fallaciously endangered, by touch or by prevail, simpleton's abode, lay waking from the quiet's empty throat. As many men, simple of no purity's solace and deep refrain moved from where they were caught off standing.

'I'm being raped by my husband's drill, Dave, our marriage is ruined by Obama, niggers, I loathe niggers, I am going to indiscriminately murder five, five children, the five children that are in this park, they're rubbery, slippery because I coated them in oil, setting them on fire, I intent on doing it, tomorrow, in the shack by the side of the road, near the park, leading to a trail of goading lamentation that Lucifer himself who is my father in law, and my lass, she will remember me for what I've done for the people during my youth, and younglings, kill your parents during their sleep; with the help of my friend, the giant volcano-pillar bloated-shaped torso bearing a head beneath it, at its base, that expands fifteen meters off its body-like some lizard come out of its hiding, a giant fleshy human head bearing a beard made out of a fleshy sack- as if bodies are inside of it, out of which, large spike-drill urchin bloated horns sprout at the ends of. He shall aid you in patricide!’

There was no man named Dave in the room.

Born of a chair of splinters they walked, walled by noon’s brought onto the crowd, by them there walking with slithers of sleigh, with bellies to their tottering ankles, with angles by anglers fished from beneath and above each row; little waves reaching most unnatural things.

I dream of Columbine and murder is in my blood

There are uncertainties in this world that cannot by normal means be explained; God has become delusional, bestowing the reigns to his creation onto itself. Man is evil, man has guns, meteors and lynch-nigger ropes; murder is my blood and I must kill before I’m killed and eaten alive by porcupines. Women must also die by terror, bombs are what drive the fuel of my disgust; humanity is wretched, and I am a devil in disguise!

Walking down the pavement with snickers made of ropes, robbing the closest to myself, my heart, convenience store! Shooting all those niggers with my guns, splintering the entrails of the kikes, Oy vey this must be another Holocaust!

A morbid miasma started erupting from inside the ribs of the eight holes gouged inside the knife. It produced blood clot in the air.

Coppers cannot feel skin, they’re like eels for the fleshy appeal. It’s appalling how society’s still working in the dark. The various unnaturalness’ delight there being no chance for it to have ever been moral or alive; without knowing what’s happening in Callie, they walk. Joined by a band of slithering conniving little snots!

There are rivers of blood inside my eyes. The rope that’s being spun, destroys the tree, destroys the sun!

‘Sprrl, sprll, sprll, sprll, sprll, sprll, sprll, sprll, sprll, sprll, sprll, sprll, sprll, sprll, sprll, sprll, sprll, sprll, sprll, sprll!’

A sound emerges from the front, the Galileo-Guillotines of larger far-end troops withhold. No lampoon would trash us today, no torrent of spades or spray and pray. Not to kill and not to die, not to be allowed lay in peace impoverished by being homeless, by men benigned.

For the patron saint by bus withheld, now and then he came again, no longer trying to tinge in peace, not to lay his servant’s lain in tinsel-crease. He would not let each Magus stay his way, upon the starry gaze and the forlorn remains. For they degraded on the field, while the bus emerged, while they’ve held each other, in each other’s grasp within, the solace of their warmth emerging, incapable of truly remembering who had the can-spray in his mouth.

The chapter that speaks of Kill-nigger meeting Kill-blood on the front

Out of the deprave remains of Columbine of what was left of them since. There came one with a face that had been taken from him, a giant truck with a bloated giant man's head connected to a snake made out of his rearranged, reorganized my monthly calendar' years, was there a slither of a cucumber ear that drilled itself below. Mush was made out of the unknown and of the blood.

A kingdom emerged from beneath the ground, and men covered in armor made of metal grates, through which but the uncanny maze of hair made out of pores, belonging to rotten slugs and empty mushroom spores and of mush, muck, littler goblin-esque figures that hid inside these walking prisons, barred by indestructibility, bearer of spears, talkers of the disappear. Fear driven, drivel, mass, large bikini babes – turned on by some radio bass, singing out loud along the lyrics on a casetophone, while the tea-time bore a mine. A mind lest to be called-to-for benigned, was there naught to be spoken to or after.

Quickly enough, four or five of them, in their slouch- unkindly draft and ponder had riled upon a single spray, a wretched allure of single-pray, not to tell the master of the home they had leaped in, destroying the front door and everything that lay inside, no more and no longer easily controlled or forced to be, sightless but for the promise of agony, long-maintained the peace of quiet.

'Open the last door that's blocked by chain and yolk!'

Said one of the grated ones, the halls leading to this door being searched for; everything lain in ruin and made to pass.

A brothel of most somber-felt, summerly disgust!:

'I have spoken my peace!'

Said Old John, from the floor, inside the ship, and part the plot, to assassinate him, it was wretched, but it could not be easily ignored.

'Why should I care about the niggers and people's talk of how they've been exploited for fuck knows how long? For slavery's permitted in the rot! And the winds that chime in shall also bring the fuckers down when toils are but allowed to sail to empty socks and lands of rotten fish benumbed!

I shall be a stepping stone to putting them in their place when the time comes and no longer will I be in the waiting or forced to lay in quiet swaying for the day's end, and therefore stay, my hand shall but purloin a bend to tatter's ending!

People have always and will always be exploited. Don't you get it yet? You're blind, you're fucking blind. You're so focused on the niggers and the peoples of yesterday that you've lost track of the people of today, you're lost to the people of tomorrow who'll but laugh and cackle and take shots at you for being so dumb. To allow yourself to be exploited this way, thinking that you're right.'

He had built a barricade dumbfounded, impossible to pass through and therefore stanch of empty hand dismantled and disbanded they have. Running around, wrecking havoc and plight upon those that weren't deserving yet could wait a little while longer for something to be spoken on the spot.

None could do but the pain that emerged. It was a rattle-sign of things to come.

A wretched paradise flowed through the basin, and a myriad of people pulled at the trebuchet and winced.

'I hate niggers, I hate kikes, I hate Palestinians, I hate arabs, I hate spics, I hate gooks, I hope they get cancer and I hope they'll burn in hell. I shall meet them on those fronts one day, armed by my father, Lucifer, as well! I hope they die! They don't deserve to live, they don't deserve to try! Cut-cut bleed, my nerves are tried for, but I won't cry when the time comes, nasty-nasty wings will cut all women down!'

One of the great sons said so!

Killnigger, dancing around the lot!

Beneath Columbine, fallen into the arena, all of the failed rebirths of Killblood! The ones who fought for ages during rancor, below the stages, wretched angels torn to shreds! Many such-avowed mislead to believe that they would not eventually be allowed to come to life, rebirth being denied. The many souls trapped inside, fighting one another during rounds of peace-alarmed and cast to shred of disem-bowl!

It was there that the birth of Killnigger came to be, when the bearers of the kills, the ones that had been extinguished by force of kill.

Largely amphitheater-bound, by chains, grabbed and thinned around. Beneath the basement and through the fall and gaps that could be seen, beneath Columbine but yer-distilled, above the sunken clutched onto the school abyss there they stood and rested. Dormant, the wretched growling mourners, with their wings spread and bodily stretches conically mislead into curving, deceived, entangling around the chains, tricked into holding so the ones that fell into the arena did not fall, instead, into the pits of the void. Wretchedly being torn apart and ripped away as their souls would be lost forever in the march! The climb never to've come alive! Blessed by the wretch, agony, alarmed! There stood Killnigger, pondering upon his past.

Capable of flight, as he could flee at any point in time and rejoin the classes, his solace being his adjoining hours, in the class of Columbine!

Resting on his throne below for countless hours unspoken to, whereas the throng of woes, the choir of voices singing and the fall of a single simple sun's reach, glory to the shades that were ebbing to be released. A fire-coach-ure of demiurge prunes put together on a bonsai plotch of little parables spoken softly as if the demure of allurements calling bowed to no one's cordure-foil entreaty spial fell; whereas the ones that were adjoined to his chamber, and to his table, now lain aside, champion by bitter tide, with a spear of the hourns come out of dire-a-come upon his knees, lain slowly, eyes approached from every wall that drew forward, front-forth and come-to-side lop, by shrill of drills then rolled by means of praying, with anchored nails below, with stains of patched, that of foot-prints and of the stale, perhaps a quail would've been enough, to match them gut for gut and emperor-joined to him conjoined to the lot, he drew to the side. For every soul's rebirth's failure come onto the mass, the one formed to its right side was but of a vast vascular unnaturalness that disallowed any rear-entry to be had, impale, by means of charging at it or by any other means, interrupted by the insatiable amount of, unsuitable by speech foretold, or mention that would be foresworn to've existed only by chance, there being not a chance to miss the ones that were stitched to them, since they were, after all, or at least in part, in the pile and in the unnaturalness-forlorn, synchronized pained by means of wail, there-told, and only after sightened by foil of robbed of least of guts, a guttural soul of a missing lot, which didn't belong to the school, nor was it come from the passing, but endured, so much so, as a testimony in itself, the strength it bore only damping the sound these little brats made, in deep annoyance, gutless-throng and syrup of unmasking, strong, but stale and counter-pane of there-et pail, did it pull by wild rotation, contemplating on how much blood it would consume from them, since pint by pint, it would cause stop to wail, but at the same time their physical forms would not be sustained for long, especially in this wild manifestation, with was too circular to him but to them, only a square in which they were made, only half like a lung-box, connected, rabidly to his, a little growth pouch that held the head of a skulled man, but the flesh being there unnervingly swung, back and forth as if something inside of it desired to come to life, set in flight, glimpse of rabid, come, escape, now that you're aware of being stuck, in his domain, threatened to've appeared into the deadened come to flight and night, so extended during the borrowing of a little simpler tool of fright, that being the pair of many hearted stings, as if skinned-covered with fleshy wasps' s' been what he's been playing with, in and out of his awareness fading, as if this very illusionary play, while balanced by him squirming it around and between his fingers, mice going through a maze as soon revealed, plenty hidden in his sack, this Killnigger, true inheritor of the souls, belonging to Killblood, rightful inheritor of Columbine, yet, yearned for sight, bearer of no gun, no weapon, yet deceived to carry on now, he had almost thought, considered it plentifully before the time had even such a chance to signal that it was the time to carry on, assault, do something, come to blows, despite the size, there-there, of course such, of course, it's obvious that no such entreaty would arrive only on parlor's woe called onto the front with little song as said bespokened oft, and of what might happen if either hand was plainly raised, if they only, for a moment became aware, made to be, in possession of the knowledge that he was ill equipped with the much needed appendaged that would suffice one in need to walk, there, it's finally being said, out with it, admittance only allowing for something close to some, that would forebear, a glimpse of truth for near-coming, something close to him, while these empty arena-less, flightless of bothersome benigned there-come toll being taken by forceps grown; a forced rue with the face of a bothersome gaze calling to be remembered, playing with these primordial-wretched, dredges now, trapped in the shadows, trapped in the dark, still-formed and still-born, incapable of taking physical forms, yet their oblongidity would allow them still, to move along, or stay to watch, in laughter or in sadness, whatever parlous would be had; and what of him and what of them? For there was not a single way to pull again, the many bothersome growths that drew, he could only make them out of deep-sinew. For this wretch staring at Killnigger was but Ill-Delac, brother of Kran. Whose work may've been recognized or reflected in the chains, for they were sturdy and made to last. Not to mention the support pillars that were later added, through dark-refraction, connected with the upper-reaches, at the end of the upper-rows, above the tribunes, where the bands, near flageolet-a-flag there lay, a single strain of quiet-trains, if they had.

'The light is something I abhor the sight of. I live beneath the likes of curtain branches that can never be drawn at will. I choose to live in hiding for the firmament of empty's call can never scorn the sight of a grim disciple of the dark when the near-ends are come to leper's sightened stance, for when the come onto foreknowledge's sail is fully drawn, there can be no doubt or forth-assurance that the sailing, skirting in their classroom gone, will the children understand what's happening below the damp surround they're set against the flailing winds' against.'

IB!:

‘Going Cold Turkey I see, for how long is this going to last?’

‘Until I’m all bowling pins and green massacre down in Hell; but not till’ I’m done un-sharpening my Saharan Nigger-rapier unkindly!’

‘What’s the reasoning for this act of cruelty and supreme entailed massacre and the stone-break after what’s to come?’

‘It’s done its job, must be put to rest for its darkened soul, bleakly painted in nigger blood, sorted out with the spirits in the Afterlife with whom it will debate eternity dumbfounded!’

There was some sort of pain in his eyes, but here and there, he darted, a few laps, they said. It seemed like it. Like he said. Even a hint of showing your tooth will get you far in this place. Words to live by. Since most people were either cowards, arrogant or dumb, it only came natural to him to try getting away with whatever he could.

‘Once the week’s over, I’m going to kill another man and rape his cat. I’m going to show that kitty claws as I shall bestow myself onto her.’

And there were Iles floating above this head, pulling at him, everything starting to spin in strangely articulate, by energetic in terms of rotations, triangles, that each started eating his face until nothing was left of it. Nigger, nigger, nigger, nigger, nigger, nigger; there was one leaning against the door. His curly disfigured face from having been forced-bathed into a bath of acid ringing with his ears split open, There’s absolutely nothing left in there at all. All’s been devoured.

Blood was rancid for some reason eaten partially by some half-eaten man who half ate whatever he could off his half plate, cut-pizza he was, his fingers all flipped and chopped, as was the table.

It was better to polish the iron rods before trying hand in hand the hinges blind, especially since they were all made of one piece. Iron bolts, as well, nickel addings, fillings and pulmonary disease.

Ladies, what are they made of and what do they look for in a man?

Blood, on his hands, bloody murder is what they’re after, and violence perpetuated against them, females are into abuse, rape, unorthodox activities of the most guttural gradient of grind upon their bodies pounding, with spiked needled bats, sharpened to a faulty knob against their lower-side against which they’re implanted, deep-depressed, fifteen meters in and perhaps deeper than that in an incline that would reverse into an upward curve, uniting with their baby-makers, if they’re not done with their menstruation cycle, into which only the bravest men might dig in, supplanting the requisite of destruction, a single cut being enough to bleed her dry, whereas twenty or so, in the meantime she only executed herself on the table with a moon-cycle shaped pole-axe with snakish tendrilled-whips that bore one-shot-capable-of lugers’ that all pointed at her head while the guillotine motion prepared itself to be-drench her uniting, parting only aforementioned by a simple act of witnessing it occur in the past, of the legs at an eye-level; would completely distort even the slightest reminiscence of her ever having been a woman to begin with.

It should’ve come as no surprise either than more often than not, in such cases, there’s no deliberate way of reproaching the correspondence that’s being delivered through the variously opened by chimes alone, itineraries and self-sufficient ways of cutting blood, that could only drag and drawl when, below them there's but no standing ground, to break the fall. The gall was aware of that, yet, was incapable of stopping or preventing the tables being turned against her. Falling as a desperate maiden struck and violently betokened to fall pray as if to some unnecessary upheaval of unobtrusiveness, hers being a fault of being there to begin with, with the rape gone along the way only stopped on momentary notice before its unexpected resumption, which, surprisingly enough had not come or shown up from any other place, quite-so! Other than the very lower-side of the club she was in possession of. As she was only turned on by this whole scene, her merely, barely sublime yet frozen-in-place, nigh-flaccid disposition capable of carrying along from one side to the other, as if from camp to camp, there-coming, was merely interpreted as an open invitation to the feast by none other than the two ancient prune-wingless gargoyles who turned their thrones outwardly, encasing her in a small prison of piston-bars where she was trapped for the time being, incapable or most probable, prone to this incarceration drivell of a reasoned, of it being deserved to begin with, contemplation made in ardor, the two of them had decided it was only fair that she should be molested in the broad daylight, raped, violently, incapable of escape. It was a most arduous sight one could behold a sightened stay; not to be too humble or nigh-adjacent any more than needed, but, there was indeed no possible escape. It was a shower of spears as if the many bars were meant to impale instead of entrap her. But she was a gibbeting rabbit in a snare. Her little puffs of ears being aware that something wasn't right.

'You cannot do this to me! I've suffered for far too long to be entrapped in such a manner. Please, you must stop, you must muster whatever strength of being there is left in you and allow me an early flight!'

Eerily so they simply ignored every single one of her requests, in a most ignoble way there could possibly be. Threatening with violence as with rape, as soon as the men that were present in the crowd stepped back into the walls, unseen; some bricks of cast allowed for their impression to be gotten a hold of, but they disappeared fuck know where.

They ran, they ran like niggers, and they were not seen after until later in the day where they are met by some inconsiderate fool who's spitting acid-bloated shaped tunnels, dripping on every side of the road. Long-fallen as if giant whips of ruin, melting sluggishly with bubbly salt dropped on top of them before dissipating in mid-air. And he had brought a lot of destruction everywhere he went, incapable of the recurrent notice of there ever being someone who might monkey around like he did, or monkeying around with knives. Since he had brought a few:

'Der-child who's waiting for green in order to cross the street, will you do me humbly, such as purse-a-coin?'

'I won't fall for it, nasty man!'

Before this conjovial disjoval could bring the thought to him, recast. He already grinded one of his axes and simply made-vanish, vaporized the child with a strike. It happened too soon, way too quickly, but that is not to be taken lightly, since she suffered, prolonged-exposure to the grinded-against acids being the main cause of the caustic-inter dimensional-spittle that had broken her internally, throughout every universe there was, split, cut, split, cut, split, cut, split cut as to fill in what was taken from a world to another, a wound and her brother, where there was a hole made, as if she were in a spaceship and one of the hatchets opened, drawing her through the hole, into space, breaking her apart, spine and skin, but instantly, endlessly, until they were all cut, bloated, become one, and died. There was no possible trace in existence bearing any semblance of her actual appearance, nor was there a need for anyone to know if there was ever such a woeful wretch as this child that refused to pay him for a knife as good as this one. Of course it wouldn't've been, but in all fairness. He had killed many children and had made a sport out of it.

'You, oi, lady, think you can light me a cigar?'

The moon was still of a mind to fall apart, but could only send its waves one at a time. Every single one turning the clouds in the military barracks that were so sought after to enter in. And many were filled with the same liquefying gelatin that rotted even the strongest of guttural noise. A noose, she pulled out a noose. Hanging herself, with a right arm shot up, then flat down, with her by its side.

'I was only, huh?'

Of such entreaty as Hyrtl could assume to take, there was no hunger, bloodied by each kind he could not hope to satiate once given enough time to spread, wildly like the disease he was, a dark thing with little mind, playing around pursed lips, with blinded foolishly upheavs, that followed, along the trails of green disease. Down there, in the butcher's coffin, beneath the street; after smashing through a roofed door, having jumped in the middle of the hole, then fell upon a parked down there broken car, onto the staircase, he was lead below, where the miasma was felt upon his nostrils made of tar. He could not help conjure the strength that began ruminating in him, little by little, devilish abhorred triumphant, as he were, there was no way to tell whether or not there was anything even remotely serious about how this butcher conducted himself. Since willy-nilly were the corpses thrown around, off the ground lifted and thrown with each dismissing back-handed slap that made these ruffians come to life, holding him together, Hyrtl being no longer an observer but an actor in their plan. Held in place, he felt the sickening wretch approach. It was dark, brass-obscuring the sight. Flecks of it that few as if the butcher's been using a saw; but that didn't do; it was way too noisy, all to crude, of how the saw-working worked, this was more in line with a mile or something of a most close-in-mind dissimilitude that wretched the wrath and came around, just so he did not mind.

'It's inappropriate, isn't it?'

'When the young think of similar ink, they tend to paint heir glasses with some sonorous resin because it doesn't only stink the needles, but they also tend to melt their bones brittle, for a reasoned approach you see the same come home, time after time again, in dishelved forms of themselves they've never even been aware they were a part of to begin with.'

They were pouting awfully so. Without a denture in each needle's come to a row, was there no heed to breed or, alas, to heed the entry of a third solace-seeker who was there, only on an errand sent onto by the Illustrious forbearance of none other than the Primitive Simian Entreaty, who, upon the post-office's failure of delivery have decided to send one of their most trusted in order to make a praying of the wont, and ensure that this subpoena finally reached its final destination.

'Were you sent here by some brothel of cured meat by salt?'

‘Sir, you have fallen short of what had been promised, as it is clearly stated here, the breaches of the contract having been spoiled, to deliver the exact sum of seventy five shillings, in accordance with the extension that’s already been crossed as well, hence, your piety’s misspoken excuse can, and I quote none matter for kind-aware, the wish of my master, so as to be informed that from this point on, the evacuation of the premise shall be accounted as but a nigh-pedagogical entreaty by which, you shall only temporarily be allowed to remain in the aforementioned restructured concubinal state of subservience, to him, otherwise, any further finding or felt-to-besots presence, shall be immediately, accordingly, and most severely dealt with, little to no mercy being presented or reposed for, this matter can only bring forth clemency in such a way as it will be abhorred by all parties as a result of your continual stay.’

With which the young fellow who’s been sent by the Entreaty curtsied, turned around and leaped upward, through the very same car-hole, having given sight to the stairways that were but rowed in a toweresque formation, and while ascending in flight he but made his way through the same door-hole that had been completely destroyed during the advancement through which poor Hyerothyellomolus whilst making his way in:

Streets of not rotten, but filled with the dead-bodies of the soulless husks that had been abandoned by scrutiny held content in cages, as to starve.

It would serve no one to wait or heed the call of echoing pour-through, as they were hit, then commenced walking. Something, something was wrong, but it could not be forbearance that was already cast in a shallow miasma-driven lease, a prude, of counterfeit, a beast of calls shin-an-durr, the spoils were lain on the table, finely set, whereas they could barely be of a mind to be enslaved for all the costs, and all the world’s entreaty fell apart as soon as either one of them was of a mind to open their mouths.

‘Garson, I think the scrumptious lobster’s worth an obol next street, from a hobo!’

‘You’d known him for a while now, invite him already, if you can!’

‘Settle down, now, we don’t want something to happen any moment now, not while there’s a guest!’

‘A guinea for him and one for me if you’re wrong about it, what of it then?’

‘Forty if you will, and I shall not move since!’

‘It’s a deal, then, a iota written down per ink and bottle-rub!’

Brass was then drawn from somewhere beneath the table, as they settled with nothing short of it, a simple odorous cadaver scented, in it, deadly cats whose heads were giant bulbs, ugly things, radishes-bloated with a single one, different than the rest. One could see how ugly they were, truly disfigured, wretchedly, in terms of upheaval, yet. They had these areas, around their necks, where they were hairless, slowly diverging into this unnaturalness every man’s accustomed to seeing in hair’s drenched abode. Lest said. Nasty things, fleshy light-bulbs, but for one, who wore the skinned and cut-clean wrapped around baggy face of a man, some badger would have them spoiled and killed, if they made too much noise, for wonder, wont and the little debt, Charles took a hookah-attached long spiraling spear-shafted syringe-thingy with which he had impaled the poor feline’s head, then signed a blood contract with Yunghii Uncut E. Senior.

‘We shall see what aggadage this ruffian has to add to your supply of no-more speaking than they have to, if this is what you will have me do, that’s all!’

Oh but what perdition, certification of an oratory written tale, a tattle that would bring no man nothing short of pain, for what they felt was only a most intrusive undisciplined contorted, grim, in sin, reaction they could barely abhor the need of contemplating on top of, in terms of ever-presently being awake, aware of what’s going on around them, lest they could sit around; for a moment, while this strange hobo only drew out a malignant edifice!

‘I call upon my god of homelessness, may he hear me well!’

Fury could never’ve been enough of a single, heartfelt-bent upon their prow’s call, to’ve made such an impression upon a poor servant of a wretch that was beyond him and them.

‘What an insufficiently minded little use-to-be-left to rot!

This thing, this creature, this perfidiously anxious to prove itself worthy of a higher-call, but surely we cannot abandon him on the streets and watch him bleed aside!’

‘He’ll stab me, I can see the glitter of a simple pearly, dog-teeth sharp, little pecker in his pocket standing out in a sea of coinage. Surely this one had-had some rubbish during screen, when awaiting for the green-appeal, when outside in rain, on rails and empty train, turbulent but waiting for the frail that would but stoop aloud, and led him something, pocket down, oh, I see there’s something in his eye, reminder. No stronger willed, but the ones whom had belonged to dark anshamble, they are the ones who gave him some.

Not men such’s I. For I know better than to dine with someone that would only spill a shallow growl!’

But they all fashioned no wont that would do him good, either. No, it could not work as easily as he would will it rotten!

‘Bloated sum of little scrapings, wilt you not bereaved and satiate what little I give onto you to carry forth?’

‘Need it be said more, now?’

On the contrary, I felt it deep-purloin on some errand sent for them to castrate each blade of grass upon run-around and deep-surround where they’re but caught swaying, back and forth instead of deep-advance. Sometimes I wish there was such a thing as might be wilt be had, as to strike them down where they sit, slither, stay and pry in that little unnatural grave they call a home.’

‘A rabid thing, but need be less, your anger’s swaying, deeply such as it’d impress no cowering vile. But I need ask you again, what have you fed them?’

‘Rabbits, hares, mines and disembowel, the things that cannot be forced upon no cruder being. I satiate such green appeal as they would cut, by mere run. Rummage through each bowel down and slither of the stars, aghast, in wont, in wonder, warmed by the solace of what used to be a wont, and thunder, as it comes, the rain in storm!’

Wetted by a baffling embrace, such disgrace would not be felt nor incline a wont, nor seek to satiate, their culling of hours, their decadent manner in which they carried one another into stillness forth propelled. In their minds they were but covered in laurels, singed for by those sons of lost, forlorn and cast-away, torn apart dormitories, orphans of the street, men of all callings, even of most petty graves surrounding and purloin, haunting, daunting, so much-wonting of release, pressed against their bodies, lasting for some peace, glorified beyond belief, crudely worshipped, longingly adored, by down-noisy superfluous women, who'd give them but a chance at joy!

Yet the servant of the house, the woman, the new-comer, she had only come-arrived with evil thought. While they were having a diner-spiced by the brothel casing that had been delivered to them from another part of the town they had recently having had reacquired, after it being acquitted by woe-alone, terrestriary-snow, and a panther from the Injun-cone-wearers, they had stopped to yet admonished the creature for the first time.

But, yearned for cast-away; it was a bothersome thing, to wait and pray away that they would forget her rank, her standing in the ark, her praying wont and wont-er after. What they referred to her behind her back and what they'd do to her if she raised her voice, or settled down below and anchored to the echoes, wilt.

A ring-a-ding, paradigm of a most semblance of a noise but muffled, spake-by-spake in chimes of struck-Wooddenn rot in the forest during storms that cast and thrust from each direction and make too much noise in the sullen-sunken-ly abyss of effigies of bodies that rise from the bellowing pints of legs, someone was at the door, making noise again!

It was a given that the world that's been falling apart deliberately driven to the un-sanctified calamity of societal-parasitical callous-inhuman entities driven to some delirious desire to explore the un-piteous exploration had in turn resulted into a complete still, at-cross rivers, think of self-bemused and fancy traps. Men forced to become cowardly and women wearing pants, their body parts chopped before being leprously fed to pus-giants that move around at speeds that are innocuously un-recorded by human eye, but gaze such's which may be contemplated in the counterpane of deep-forgetfulness. A street was cleared and before the rabid men that were a part of this community had a chance to fully set themselves by walk away, the servitor of many began ululating his glowing rod as a sign of the slop having come along. Ugly urchins made of pigs:

'First meal served, and who shall come and pray for more, when the anachronous-fading shall serve the walls that move still?'

A wall had erupted from the lot. Concubine-tents, giants, workshop hangars and ugly domed buildings giving the impression of an amiable surrender to the occupational military that had completely engorged itself into this side of the plateau, this continent which by default encompassed the entirety of the equity that made the two country of Promenade, stolen from them, the occupation having finally solidified itself to native-ty by right of conquest. Not a single claim was made by some impertinent man, nor was there a riotous desire that would help advance this escape plan, many men had generationally carried along from son to son and death of mother that made them think of no other tottering option than to forget that there was ever a chance for them to make a run for it. Every corner of every meter or so, albeit not monitored had a plate beneath them, in sense of felt of touch, by leg or weighty thing, exploded; but only the head.

Men that ran, or even children, off their heads went, without any structural damage. The only bothersome thing was the cleanup. No enforcers either, and there was no certainty, from one day to the other, as to whom would live and who'd die. Or who even was responsible for planting these trip-mines that only exploded human-heads; animals were spared of this grandiose torture, attire, the attire they wore, the animals were without limbs. But were dressed in floating-still, Victorian Era suits, slightly above them by a few centimeters, the animals were levitating, eyeless, but they had the annals of time in them. Squirring time-fly maggots that constantly undulated inside of them; rotting with the material, they were falling apart. A few meters away from one, Johnny, looked forth. He was met by a retracing outwardly, from beneath the earth and himself, an elevator upwardly ascending, tiny block that opened, but only around the corners, which drew downward once set in place, the entirety of this strange tiny building the size of a big booth, which now, though it may've been only a few moments ago, five minutes at best, a perfectly-almost perfectly chiseled brick, it now lacked those sharp corners, being unwrapped like some present, before lowering the four left plates, which also, or only one of them held the ceiling, the others having receded to the side of the small almost nigh, by a few millimeters but only observable or recognizable to the trained or acknowledged eye, rectangular, instead of squarish, area, it had come out, as to reveal, that, this had been instead, a strange altar that had been brought from somewhere beneath the earth, from the depths of which, it had been carefully worked upon, whereas a few edible features of meat-swank, purloin-rotten, made a grim impression on the man who had barely, bread being in his hand, dropped, being now hinder left without half of his shirt, beneath his pecks, since, this strange altar shot a cardboard-pair-of-train-rails shaped a beam of light into him that melted the material, which opened a large portion of his stomach that was without blood or guts, but was an empty space where almost-nigh mechanical fleshy devices worked constantly on making another tinier head of himself that was now being extracted by elongated, thin armed, nigh-humanoid appendages that were puffy, ugly, and wretched, extending continuously as they both shortened and thinned while expanding at the same time in this hard-to-explain region caught or placed between the man and itself, being somewhat, become so thin that it gave the impression of 'could-snap' at any moment in time; this many-fingered in the thin-hundreds of long work-upon, constantly rotating and undulating, ululating, curving, spinning, wrapping around, a wheel being worked by men, against this strange floating, made of pure-chiseled diamond, the replica of the man's skull and face, inside of which they worked in, having acquired entry by some back-door somewhere behind. And between the entry in his gut, in this oven of a barely enough having space to work in they were forced to work under the conditions of, and a few centimeters beyond the exit; as if these 'hands' were giant, and they entered a garage, working on a car, like a mechanic, or a mechanic playing with a doll house, his hands all the way but his wrists outside. But his wrists thinning for some reason as if he were drunk or couldn't see well because of old age; as if he promised he would play with his daughter, giving her the time of the day, albeit made a mistake, marrying and or having children, out of wedlock, being an awful thing as well, whilst being this advanced in age, old, ancient, since the chance of a child being born with health issues or autism is much higher the further one progresses in age, with every decade or so, perhaps even lesser than that; his deafness coming second only to his poor sight, as he'd give birth to this mirage of his hands thinning. Whereas the constant elongation would be a trick of the constant forwarding-advance; these light appendages being made of thinner put together straws that would thin themselves out because, but wouldn't technically shrink either, they'd need to facilitate the entry into each other's made way for even more of them to come in – tunnels, like they're all made of shoe-laces or ropes, or, more fittingly so, threads trying to enter needle-holes, as for the reason behind the hands remaining unaffected on the other-side, inside the gut-garage, instead of thinning as well, that would be rather simple and easily explainable at a subatomic level, since these were not actual hands, but a more intricate system of tinier, hard to grasp a hold of by sight alone, system of mazes, tunnels, holes, pipe-lines, frames and roads, that, in the short-time span they had been given to reform themselves, in the blink of an eye, have thoroughly evolved, the two hands that had initially entered his gut may've looked normal, but, they, in actuality had been stumps inside prosthetic-"human-hand" decoys these stumps used as a Trojan Horse, to obscure this boisterously slow-but well-intended for a most advanced extraction – transformation, into, these most complex oil-rig extraction devices that were now used to draw the diamond-head out which was his actual soul and the only connection he had left in this world with his Lord and Savior he had accepted in his heart but was slowly being, by means of self-contained repel, driven to not only stagnation but also to damnation as to be led, lead, astray from his lord, by one of the many fathers of lies and evils, a part of a flock of sheep that was driven away by a vile giant sheppard made out of many coal-pieces, stone-refineries, living-creatures stitched to it, strange elliptical, out of his knees, in every direction, like moon-scythes –shaped horns, his body long, his arms, all insectoid, stick insects –legs with giant torso-bearing his head at their ends, walking not on a field, but being used as chains so he would not fall into the abyss that was for him what for us is the sky, since he wasn't out-side, per say, but inside and beneath the earth, where he was completely left, struck, incapable of escaping, four great heads connected into one that didn't belong to the peculiarity that was forced become his body, but instead were a part of a stranger race of many faces, some in the hundreds, connected to corkscrew necks, their skulls being secretly shaped like medieval doors, that, starting with their conception, out of the womb, would start curving, like jelly-shields, or jelly-keyboards or rubber, until becoming false-oblongs, curved around each other, being then filled with fat, giving the impression of actually having grown like that, or being heads, that had, on the opposite ends, beneath them, body-bags, they carried-akin to dead weight, bulbous and then encased in strange embracing bodies they created out of their sheer mind, as to hug and protect them; armless, appendageless, wingless, legless, but in possession of downward then all around growing 'tails', pseudo-tails there being these things, that are their hidden, growing beneath their chins, actually, out of their hidden mouths, and they had false mouths grown on their faces as a way to trick predators into not killing them by murder; tusks that curved around their corkscrew necks, creating another layer-bone-like of protection, that would end up being taken for ribcages and beyond that, hidden by the embracing bodies, that were cackical in nature, ugly bastardities, pseudo-statuesque, wretched, demonical, albeit without arms, legs and wings, they were molds that had them attached and "grown" into them, like decorations, or superficially, as if conjoined to them, to be taken for granted if seen from the distance. If one would look at them from the distance, he'd think they have arms, legs, wings appendages, but these, they're fakes, they're just, almost molded mass, clay-chiseled sculptures. These strange beings capable of flight, but many tailed by the tusks, that, beneath the hidden frame inside the giant sheppard, one of them, since they didn't actually, many of them didn't end up possessing strange humanoid bodies like that too often, or at all, this being an outlier and exception, held every sutured body, machine and the legs by the sheer strength their set in place tusks allowed them to deal with this beyond mortal comprehension in accordance to the capability of sustaining all that weight by natural means. As to think of how ants hold that much weightier objects per times this weight of their bodies being taken into account of. He was indeed the owner of the artifact-pillar altar, who was in need of the skull-shaped diamond soul man owed him the surrender of Providence of. And they all had to be extracted manually, while every procedure took something close to a few weeks. This process, this process was slow, but man was afraid during these wretched times, to help one another, frightened by what would happen if they did or said something wrong, to run towards one in aid meant death and head-explosion, the sealing of a fate that would endear nothing but fright and frighten.

‘I think we’re safe. There’s no need for either of us to turn around any longer, as the door’s already locked, deep-shut, you know? I made sure of it. I made sure no one will follow.’

‘Chance, I don’t think you did.’

‘You’re free to go back the way you came if you don’t trust me. I only wish to help. We can’t end up like the two of them, no, I don’t think so. I’d rather die than end up like them. Come on now. They’re on the move.’

Marching along-side them were a few steps belonging to the walls; whenever they listened, whether or not it mattered, they were always accompanied by the jolting feeling of bleeding ears. It ended up creating an overwhelming, almost, almost bothersome stretch, whether it came from one foam to another, that door went missing again. Both had to haul themselves over in utter shock, fallen on top a pile, a pint, a man set them aside, barging in from somewhere down front.

‘I think this means you’re both off, out of it.’

‘Pulls up, pull us before they tear us apart!’

Screamed one of them. It was an awful thing, hearing them scream:

Tottl

A moon had fallen in one of the boxed-in cargos, without leaving the least amount of time needed for them to frighten an escape, or to satiate even the slightest go-through one of the most unnatural, hardest to gape at colonies that immediately assembled in front of the on-going chaos in order to eat. Many of the ships allowed for the growths to come out, many pudgy unnaturally deformed little pecks and little kegs and little more than some unnatural dead-commanders that were filled with dread as they followed through the mass-cabins that had hardened, births occurred on the spot! Many of the wretched sharp appendages that came out only drew out eerily so without a nod of their extra heads, which they had used to propel one another past the curve of asteroids that was formed around them, control was dead. And eerily they sang, as they gathered around with their pricks of leprous heads and clad was the light that shone upon them, which beckoned the retreat, as they fashioned no longer than was needed such a beat upon the bat-like shells, the chitinous plates that formed the entirety of space which started contorting on them by power such was never known before, or at the very least not by man, since he could do nothing, absolutely nothing about the fall inside the box-facility, upon which they had been enslaved, those that had survived at least. A few more boxed traps appeared from some deep abyss, they wailed as they opened their side mouths, giant look-a-likes to men, with their gargoyle mouths and leprous faces cast around and glanced, then dead; were the beads they spat, but infectious, to such a degree that all of the wretched creatures of space were thrust farther and much deeper than the so-entrapped unnatural colony the moon bore and had. It got grinded to a pulp. And from the innards of the prison came many tubular tunnels that were connected to most of the in-kept buildings they kept beneath the surface of the moon. Four more boxed trapped attached to the main facility-prison bands that drew from beneath the main structure. They formed an unnatural disaster that started becoming more bulbic, more fleshed out, until it looked like some rotten fleshy corpse fed upon maggots lodged inside of thing rather than anything even of the most pernicious a thought. They could only be clad painted in the most wretched of substances before allowed to settle in, coated in that gelatine ooze then allowed to carry on, as crass as they had under eerie eyes.

‘I dislike this prison but I can endure being kept here as long as I know I’m surrounded by people I know, I know this to be far closer to truth than I could ever image, but lo’, will I not forget the people who fell before me, for their light still shines upon my soul.’

‘I think you’ve endured for too long to give up just yet. I think there’s still something I could give you that you may make it still, without being long dead of degradation. For the people you once knew are no longer the same, nor will your memories of the fallen remain, mark my words on that. I know it to be true and after that, after a while, you’ll start forgetting about them, since this prison listens. IT listens and takes away, the people who speak for too long now, they’re incapable of pulling their weight and they shall die as a result of their failure to breathe!’

‘I’ve never seen you before!’

‘That’s because I died some long ago, yet I’m allowed to walk alongside you, that is to say, I won’t get in your way just yet, but be weary of that, I know how to bite and entrench by bodily-fruition a craning of the neck and shall slit your bodily tendons if I were to be called on it to do it in a moment’s brought upon the notice of, whisper of decide!’

‘Are you a proponent of violence in this heathen’s abode? To have us killed one by one?’

‘I shall do whatever’s needed to beat you all to pulp and wretch, to have you all whipped and flayed, that’s what I’m here for after all. That’s the reason for which I cannot and may not be allowed to rest. It’s a test of patience if you will. Mine or theirs!’

But before the birch could get in the way again, they were brought onto the sleeping pill-shaped bedding chambers, where they were wrapped around with belts on the ground by tall-dark figures with eyes aligned in crosses. And their emptiness fell constantly off them as if it were made out of flakes of dust or gusts of black rust which spread cuts all across their bodies when least expected, out of which worming figures of cement-hardening blobs dropped out of, no blood. Transfusions had been made, somehow, but it was no reckoning of theirs that allowed for this to be felt or needed to be dealt with anymore than they needed to. Since they were then encased in some heavier air that put them to sleep. The most hardly a matter of resting was trying to wait for something to happen, flipping in and out an eyelash with one of the fingernails belonging to one of the pinkies once there was a simple sing of there being a chance to do something about; when the noise died down, when the atmosphere settled down and when finally a dark, leprous singer started dancing around, glowing red. A peculiar thing of a big head, tall as a flying plane’s engine, near-likened to the shaping, human-also, but the likes, only two feet it had, one sprouting from its mouth and pointing forward, resting on it, while the other one lagged behind, being flat and fat and wretched in the back; a flatter more depressed forehead appeared to lay there but which pumped back and forth as if something was hidden inside its skull, cavity. Bald, and ugly rosy-red, devoid of a lower jaw, but that's what the leg was there for; an almost rounded-tumorous lymph-node behind the area where the throat might've been if it bore one and the leg united. Contorted as it were, it were possible that this front leg was its body, but so far, it was too hard to tell because of the flashing light whose intensity only grew that much flashier, stronger and harder, then it toned down into a nigh-dark. It sniffed around, then slowly crawled towards Lloyd. It was of a mind to say something incredibly unnerving it settled down with whispering in his ear!

'Careful now, or else I'm going to make your stay here a living livid hell; and I shall cast you in the furthest pit I can ever think of digging up myself, before chucking you in, though, I will take a bite of your head, then spit you out while you're still alive. And don't try thinking you'd outsmart me and report my momentary presence here to some supervisor, for I've got them all in my pocket, know this!

If words reached foreign ears, I will bite and bite until no part of you disappears slowly inside my gut. I shall have you flayed but wretchedly so as to have a bit of fun during the process.'

Its unnatural formation of a hidden mouth kept moving in the form of a shaking upper leg muscle; or maybe the calf. This being too hard, nigh impossible to tell in the dark, which only made everything so much worse for wear; so much more unnerving as it were, no one else was awake but them. The beast known as Herman had thus stooped even lower than it had before, having decided to act upon a vigil's knowing, observing the man while he slept as well as it had acted on his behalf, eating with as immediate of an entirely bodily swallow of one of the other sleeper's entire body-frames as it could before, righteously so, any or either one of the others could make as little of a sign of awakening as they might, endearing an upheaval of some strident countenance's abhorrent defiance it maintained against the likes of the humanoids that threatened its very existence by some mean or another. Yet, it curled into an egg at one point or another during the night. Finally, upon giving in, there was no telling whether or not he would act upon it. This spike in hatred it had carried on and over through millennia of close-endured observation, that was by all means something it could not maintain any longer, by sheer exhaustion of spirit, which was the fact for which he had decided that the best recourse of action was to torture the man, turning his life into a living hellish abyss rather than eating him whole like he's done with the other human that was of no interest to him. Standing there; behind the closed there, one of the oyster-scented filaments of smoked-forth disease that could barely blame itself for what could be a dutiful falsity or a failure to act, lay a single watch, that bore a single tall razor blade the size of a beam, in its completely falling apart skin slightly lodged there being a chained tube to which this giant razor-chisel of a mould had been. Faces carved in the handle, screaming, or whimpering in silence, as they were pressed even further down by the strength of his rotten thumbs. If there had once been a cross now lay a deformed X whose glow and unnatural appeal had long disappeared but which had entrenched a second more of asking of no less than was needed, reason for him being there, dealing with the noted down likes, the report would go in detail if prisoners went missing now, and the entry from the moon into the prison was as dangerous as it had been before, at the open brought of the falchion they had neared, the belt of asteroids and rocks being shattered by the likes.

'Psst, come on out a moment, I need to talk to you!'

It tried whispering past the brutish gate; a standing testimony of nickel-iron that was hard to fell.

He headed out of the room eventually, after this being stressed enough against the confines of the night of an IOU high-amount owed money, fifteen centimetres by letter, lengthy note-sized opening. It was mostly unnecessary trying to persuade him to stop making so much of a ruckus since he would not easily give in, not until given what he wanted and even then, this was hardly the place for him to be convinced against it; since there were too many souls that would easily cave in and open a queerly set eye, easily to cast distrust lest entrusted with stopping at their own dismissal of some lucid dream as they'd return to slumber.

'This escapade of yours shall be brought to an abrupt end, for you, my dear friend have done something worthy of the quickest, without trial, well-deserved, incarceration!'

'And you're to be my jailor for the night?'

'You're cracked in the head Eicklust! How many of them have you eaten? Come on out where I can see you!'

With a leap he almost bopped the side of his head as if he were a lousy-beaten rabbit! It was unnerving, seeing him this way, this slouching decrepit figure of no withheld impartiality. A runaway from some unknown space, a disgraced channel of porcupine speeches that were lost along the way; yet he was listened to, word for word, and therefore strong and stronger still; was he called. A limping devil with no face would've had his throat if it were not for him, that hound, not to trouble each man that was put in charge before them in the morning's artificial sun, but there was only such splendour as to have him taken still alive, to the butcher's shop. Door closes:

'I think, you my good friend, shall make a great example of what happens to those that do not listen and obey for long.'

'But I'm of no employ, lest under normal circumstances would you consider this wreck a, a; temporary delight I'm given nothing in return, taking it as one might please; there's a lesser enterprise to be achieved with some of the lesser pretenders from the penitentiary, not that I admit that it could somehow excuse my prior-to-this-date behaviour, yet I seek no consolation for what's been done here today. I acted on instinct!'

'So you admit your guilt then?'

'I admit nothing of the kind.'

'We shall eat you, know this, if you're found to lie by one of the other members of the watch!'

'There's no trial just yet.'

But with a mildew-brought to an end's cottage cough, he stepped and leaped four paces to his right. More and more decrepit by the day; an elephant meat's trunk of a leg, it grew and grew, and would come to grow until forming some torso. That's at least what the medics told him would happen if he continued on this path of humanoid-devouring; it wasn't much of a pleasure looking at it, and the time was also running up and away, titter and tetter now; no one had anything to say when he was brought in. Smallish were their pipes but they smoke and lighted one of the fourth lampoon cylinders, which shone the light straight into his tiny eyes. Worn out as he were by night, worn out as he'd be the next day once put inside that little insufferable block and patch, they wouldn't go easy on him either way. It had to be either this or, the alternative, a latent of patience lost, whatever they would say. It was so cold in here, the mantelpiece crumbled in an ashtray. A servant lady came in with another pint of booze and beer, brandishing her portable back, as some of the lesser bottles that had been used disappeared. A miasma of scum blocked a red sun, that appeared to be a bubble's worth more than what they made it out to be as they took turns chucking sharp cigars as darts.

'Finished yet?'

'Oft leper's wrought, did I not add of ye in this puddle I spilt there!'

'I did see some of you near her yourselves entangled in her gown like dirty ugly pinned-bolted soldiers stationed in some unknown land your country sent you to invade, to crush the resistance, instilling fear in the civilians, curbing the revolts, by sheer number kilt and foiled; leaving them to rot in dust, if the heaven's lost disgust allowed you to remember, I will you sit, forget it now!'

It wouldn't be as lamentable as it appeared to be if it were not for the sole defacto to which she had slowly deadened her ears as she deafened out a lop and a tromping in a stomp, killing some little critter that so happened to fall beneath her from the sky. A dome-opening being lain in the middle of the ceiling; things fell through it, of no importance, really, but very much disturbing to the newcomers who were of a mind that this was way too dangerous to be allowed the continuation of, without risking their lives further and furthermore defected to calling each other blasphemous, yet meaningless names that had little to do with them and their posts. They were mostly tall and dark and fallen apart like him, albeit of such lofty differences as one could neigh a chaise reckoned for, slammed on top of them, on second thought, but then revealed as to phase through them, as if they were entities of black smoke instead of hardisome a folk as they let themselves be known as and observed.

'I am to be beaten if I fall, please don't let me call upon the sanctimony of the brow, that I may be spared by acts of kindness dumbfound in such a wretched place!'

'Shut your mouth Aster, shut your filthy mouth and get back at it.'

Down the hall, there was an escape. It came all of the sudden in the room, crushing through the door as it revealed its heads being attached to its body no more, or no less than heeded.

Escape was rather not as incalculable of a poultry being chopped by a rusty cleaver in one clean swipe from an awkward angle while doing it with as little parameters as possible while having your eyes close as you'd undergo this nigh-quasi impossible task of trying not to give too false of an impression of the incumbent ineptitude you'd soon enough to be more than overly capable of purporting in front of a crowd of people watching closely your every feasibly observable move to a degree required only to a close at hand investigation or some interrogation instead of a display of some faulty thoroughfare; but instead was something highly likely and esteemed as, that is to say, for those weary of their stay inside their dirtily unwashed cells, a worthy chase-after highly-likely to obtain, within reach, goal the guards kept a nigh-close enough to itself estimable by clearly ordained wilfully arranged satisfactorily opinions bequeathed out of rather-shown, unless abhorred, educated guesses as to liken an increase to the chance of escapes finally being passable under the radar without alarming the residents of the upper levels of the boxed in towering Babylonian floating inside the pneumatic space figures of scented bony-encased creatures inside of which the tenants reside; whereas it was constantly reminded, whether or not by the pulp of seasons being squeezed after generations of other prisoners of similar likens to the humans who had previously impressed onto the guards and their likens, esquire, as well as the general assembly that worked behind the bars as well, that these life-forms were highly capable of taking care of themselves and not only that, but proved willingly able to deal with the utmost stress that came or followed along decades of imprisonment which had a habit of ruining a spirit to such degree that for most it was impossible to recollect, let alone commit to something as bold as an escape or an attempt at it. A conical rhombus-room was where the cellars of large bulbs were being kept and fed in. Right around the corner, belonging to some side-entry out of one of the many, adjacently placed to one another and connected hallways that lead to the prison enclaves; and the general areas of propagation. They were floating but not at unreachable levels, leaving as much as twenty or so filaments of meters between the lower half of the retractable ceiling as well as the level they reached by semi-flight alone. It was a burden, trying to establish some communication with them, especially since they were partially deaf and revealed their secrets only to the most trustworthy of figures they gyrated their spiralling borderline-corkscrew bodies in the direction of. Kept in the dark at all times, without a slither of light being shined in their direction; it was something that could barely be held to them alone, this suffering that forecast come from one of the time-decipherment machines only added to the deprecatory image of their soon-to come expenditure was to be made a reality from which they could not escape, or at the very least not without some kind of assistance of something beyond the limits of flesh and blood could achieve. Wretched parasites as they were, largely fattened, almost slug-like and growing in pulp as they grew and grew, devouring what they could, something being brought tiny weak men that could not work in the side-mines; forcefully being shoved inside their wriggling fat beak-like spread, inward drawn openings, and why? Because that was the only way they thought they could get rid of these things, since they could not be touched otherwise. Too sluggish and leathery of a faceted by blob-a 'skin', whose surface was almost chitinously filled with semi-partially spread, beneath the blobs but at the same time above them, as if they were sandwich-see-through-builds that absorbed the energy as well as the force that was being cast and thrust against them, entirely so. It was a mystery how they appeared or why they appeared in this room to begin with, or when. Only one thing was certain, albeit not entirely, since the scarcity of resources did not allow for any more experimentation to be enacted upon them than it could be spared; that being the fact that they were immovable because of their weight and the inability displayed by outside forces to grab a hold onto them, maintaining it even for the slightest, most irresolute of seconds that were to come or highly-draw to nigh-approach anything resembling a grasp finely held and wrapped around their forms. Previous attempts at starving them had failed, as for reasons unknown to most, or the unaware, they retained their growth at a slower pace than witnessed once forcefully fed. Which lead to the final option, the final solution; forcefully feeding them until they popped, or at the very least until they started devouring one another for reasons they could only guessed as to be competition for resources; since they displayed such signs of being victims of the instinctual eeriness many forms of life became guilty of adhering to at one point in life or another; as any reasonable inquiry would come to terms of accepting it as being an inescapable universal truth that refused to die or let go of the firm grasp it held over all existing life.

'I'm going in, wish me luck, since I don't think it's going to be easy, trying to get myself out of it in one piece. They're getting angrier as it is. We taught them bad manners and it's of no use trying to incorporate force since they'll only respond accordingly to it. My good fellow, Ink; we shall paint great signs upon this door and signal to the others that it's hardly a matter of entry from this point on, for what's worth, I do say. We shall only join some leprous covenant that shall aid us in trying to deal with the fact that their growth is inescapable and we shall soon lose our dominion over the lower side of the Stratum-Ikh!’

Whose metal crags only allowed for slim but slender come-in through, an escalation of mildew.

‘There, listen, maker of the broken passages!’

An echo had just outdone itself from the sounds of a most profuse end’s escalation! It had paid little to no mind’s come onto the brow of the likened figures who approached to ask before they had tired themselves out by a sheer show of force and unknown rancid pacing they had encumbered a likened padding on the floor, from which and onto the slope on which they thrust themselves forward, no sound of gull could ever enter the entreaty they spared themselves of hearing of! Since that metal ambience dreaded no less an upheaval than there was when it had first occurred. Dead birds singing through the intercom! But no answer:

‘Did you hear that, Strott? It figures. They wouldn’t send food this early on in the day. It must be another attempt at someone’s life we’ll have to clean up after!’

Would they fight in the Coliseum tonight? Was the thought that incumbently followed through and throughout the dark approaches of the falling on top of them, darkened and blighted by the falling talking lamps and lampoons brokenly shattered and taken apart as they continued madly dancing and spraying each ankle twas carried on their backs. Broken piglets and tall standing beings with niggers shoved dead inside their fluid pouches carried over when the night was still indulged in the continuation of.

‘Eicklust, you need to stop devouring the children now!’”

‘I shall not be beckoned to stop just yet, endure as I may this may continue until my satisfaction shall be fully prevailed with entry to the dark heavens the arena had promised to be given and lend onto my sight, as I am still the saviour that’s been chosen to devour the gods when they finally fall through the one bottled roof, chatter all you want, but it’s going to come eventually and I shall reign supreme over the bastards slaves that propagate themselves through death and its remains!’”

‘You’re an insolvent madman of no petty mind, why are you doing this?’ ‘

‘I must cure the blindness that’s almost driven me through the snot growing on the benigned backs whipped and strapped by sleek knife and razor straddle! They shall ride through the valley of underwater, deeply submerged prison cattle and grow in them if I don’t!’

‘Blasphemy, you petty thing, do what you’re told!’”

‘I shall not do so, for that would mean only a slight miss swollen laceration of the spirit I’ve yet to convey in silence’s Eve!’

And they would’ve parted if it weren’t for the feet that invited themselves in, cut by cut and brought of thunder miss-bi-got, and gotten still, were they belonged and betokened as to fit only the body of women from and out of which they had been extracted from. It could only spare no man to ask again and waddle back and forth, lest remains would speak of much befuddlement twas come after.

‘The root of all evil is hidden in the room that’s being presented in front of you, look inside of it now!’

But he didn’t, as he wouldn’t dare. Yet there was the Horn-wretch or at least something of her remains; leading through her body, entry into the fine-world. One of much incumbent wrath, empty pistons madly dancing around some malady that could not be helped as to be approached any longer, safely that is, therefore brought were the ey-empty slaves who trailed lines on the ground, filling them with rubbery moist-paint, melted and filled immediately with smaller baton-wearing arms that grew. Forming large lined walls, unevenly contorted such as wriggling shaking cobras or squirming snail-snakes, bastardly gnawing here and titter, there-away and there-again! A mad dancer started voicing it true:

‘My lord, I’ve come to ask of you something but you were not here!’

He withdrew, as tall and slender, pale as he had been, an ugly thing of gelatine, encased in a pure crystal of no shatter, no boisterous come after and wrapped around-crack, to have it eerily described would mean defeat therefore not, not a single word was muttered for the time being, since they were in the presence of his court. An ugly thing like some dock or port, wide-spread around the site. It was a dreaded hour that came soon after. The hour of silence and of pain, the one that had been brought out of the remains of the little leprous cranium came into the landing area where the puffy lobes appeared to be connected to some of the wretchedly hardened veins, or the ones that were in control of them, beating around the brush, trying to eat when clearly they were let known of not being allowed to. Surrogate mothers bore large lamps and swivels of spoons and other cutlery they carried inside their baskets as they continued their march towards the broken door, betokened to listened and obey the Jaundice of limbs that convinced them not to burst through, alerting the guards and the ones backing them up, for they would most assuredly die before a mere slither of a few seconds could come about, telling them of what happened, then down. Although the buckets and the other containers they were carrying were mightily strange in appearance, and it would not help to think of any more than needed, such as to scuffle and to wonder less for wont dictated that their utensils were dirty and their flight had only lead them way too far away from their zone of plight, that being one of the recurrent to their being, kitchens.

Trapped cranium:

‘You may approach no farther than a few meters off the second of the fallen boughs, and no closer nor beyond the pillar upon which my form shall begin to proliferate into existence!’

‘Shall I prepare myself to be humbled upon your abode, then and only then to be butchered as if I didn’t exist nor my form, to have been withdrawn from the hole in which you had me thrown into?’

‘You may do as you please but don’t make my call be held with contempt and self-pity, for that I will not dictate as to be alive, nor will it to be had still slithered from the empty blob in which your standing’s still mildew!’

Anchor stepped back a few paces, only to listen to some dreary lamentation he had no power of strength trying to eerily get through, nor would he lay an arm, or settle as easily as he had him beaten in and beaten through. Truth had been besmirched for something that could only be called a lamentable hour; for weeks even, months at best, incontestable from the sound of which they almost appeared to be completely dragged out of the way; since he could not have the others see this wretched display of insolence firsthand. And since he could only do so much until come onto the living, the man, the man was offered something in exchange of his silence. A woman, a female, a thing of beauty, taken out of some pile, then chucked in his welcoming arms, to be had from thereon-out until the day he could not only no longer serve, but until he could only bow to little cripples with no eyes since this ugly prison was too hazardous, beware of them, the simple thought had just about brought them out of their hiding lot and into the plot of metal upon which they could devour everything or trample it beyond each sight.

‘I welcome thee into the dampened ranks if that’s the case, and I shall if there’s still a chance to lend onto you a darker thought.’

But simpletons didn’t follow as easily as such an austere whisper that befell an empty sack. It’s what Anchor carried with him after all, the maiden, to whom he had been wildly bestrewed onto, lend onto him by force had already knelt and presented each piece of ovary she could pull out of her compact belly, which was partially mechanical, yet allowed for such extractions to be taken out, whether or not willingly, that was something to be considered by none other than the pair. And such a fine pair they made, two mockingbirds, singing after being wed. Out and chuckled, there, war-candles sinking in their ears. A plot of empty post-men bringing back to life the tears; some of their youthful songs, or the least that they remembered during the many times they had considered laying forth their arms and jumping into one of the black seas, the ones that were preserved into the trapped, entrapped and chained carcasses, beyond the metal rifts and the chaotic aftermath that destiny had gloated with, contenders as well, many of them well armed. Carefully observing; the spies spitting behind hidden in the dark walls, carefully walking on top each other’s nodding heads, without as much as doing a single verbatim of empty sayings. They spat on the ground and continued watching. End’s meat was grown on each plaque, sugary cones the size of human arms and bloated water silos, but this sugar was nowhere near the sugary incline made by man, but instead a pasty thing with features such like his it had inherited from, and carried away, it had become, trying to chase wild goose in a place that had none. It was called for. And the people worshipping the altar hid, since they knew these things as to be dangerous and contagious and something they could not even hope to endear the frighten before and behind of; since they could gnaw and leap; albeit a simple feat, seeing the maws beneath them expand, forming strange planet-elongations, conical on at both ends and each side, as many protrusions started popping out as well, expanding, all during the leaps, before reverting back into the main Injun-tent body each bloated thing bore as well.

‘Since I have made my case, I think I shall take a nod.’

Claustrophobia was a wife that was brought back to life. Wed to some old officer that had her stored in a cryogenic unit, unfrozen, standing on fore-front feet, as she slowly regained her composure, she looked mightily distraught. But alive, another experiment that was pure and freedom bore a strange light. It was a strange covered in tatters being, but, it brought with it some light. It brought some lamp or something it found along the way, still wondering how he’s made it, but at least, it travelled not, without a simple wont in mind; whilst asking:

‘Leprous toothless Tower Twenty five, the one prodigy has imparted onto me the gift of many-makings, with which I shall make you whole again if you want!’

‘But of what use will this be? What is there missing from me? I feel rather fine and as spry as I were; eh, still am, youthful, yet to be blinded by an ego and twice the steep, forlorn decline!’

‘And they shall have you slit and put through slitter-ratter!’

For there were many such brought onto the sight; wretched hooligans, empty men just torsos with giant overly grown arms, filled with muscles and ugly pseudo-rat heads, hairy everywhere, each bearing flails of tails of cords of metal and of alloy that waggled around like dogs’.

‘Don’t look at them, ma’am, it’s only going to anger them more.’

‘What are they?’

‘First sides!’

‘And the seconds?’

Larger ones, that made themselves revealed as well. Taller, more tubular, made to connect to these lower-sides first sidlers, were some spongy, barely kept from falling apart, wrapped by bands; plug-creatures, that had their backs downward pointing like mountains made of soap and bubbles, yet calcified somewhere along the way; for some discreet reason; hiding large figures inside of them, although bony and decrepit, all bore them kept inside, bloated and growing like infants, benighted. Far too leprous to be likened to rats, these things were, unlike rodents, closer to bacteria, but were of a kin to them, which prevented any attempt at separation or to keep them apart.

‘They’re much worse, since they don’t listen and they make problems, all the time, fire-starters I say!’

A blob sprouted like some ooze twas shot and splattered across the ceiling, then it got ignited, but not in the way she expected. Instead, it looked as if, as if, it was some puffy-tender plot of growths that wormed their way around, here and there, before and after disappearing, therefore cowered no longer around the throng; of metal-sweet imbued. A miserable sight, seeing them in action, how they threatened everyone and formed points of pain and sweet remains that wretched each day and therefore stayed their hands whenever she approached, since the tall ones feared her more than anything that could be said.

‘What’re they doing this for? I’m certainly an appealing not, creature of un-well brought, onto their brow, a threat withdrawn, fancy me no likened, crabbed!’

‘I fear that they’re not made accustomed to the presence of a female around them, strange lady. Not that I would say you’re of any fault. Not many humanoids get brought down here, at all, nor would I entreat any out of fear of losing the few we have under our protection!’

‘May I see the others?’

All of the sudden Claustrophobia felt it become too vulgar-looking, strident-such in stance; therefore decided to step back for a while; toning it down.

Her husband, shame on him, the shame of the trapped Capital, a few billion miles upstairs where, across the many interconnected and interposed on rolling around sings that were stimulated by some strange glowing puckery energy, inside of which smaller beings were being formed and malformed then cast back into the primal chaos they had been beckoned out of, being surrounded by billions upon billions of entities of various masses that were conjoined to the structures and were dizzied into eternal sleeps, that fall could only slow down while the heap started forming in some asteroid shaped mass that joined the rotation; a planetary system with no sun. Whereas he was tucked down in a bed inside his office, staring a picture of the moon, with an American flag in the shot and an astronaut thumbing up the conquest as he prepared to take a leap for mankind. Those were the days, those were the days indeed, from what he could remember at least. It was no use sparing more shots; since his Luger-parasite entity, the one he kept by the end of the bed, praying still that Providence would give him another day to repent so his suffering could finally end whilst being delivered to heaven; was empty. Only blanks filled the room. And even they were wide-spread across the floor; lazily provoking him to get them up, or leave for more, whichever one be; it was rather fitting that he was the one there, trying to get his knees on and on and off and on, then play around and lose himself before getting another take, another shot, run-around the mill. Brought to an end; partially erect as he pulled out another porn magazine; how's he spent his night. Texas:

It was one of the inscriptions on top the gun; a silver-sluggger without meaning in this day and time. A slugger would not suffice for the Texan had already out-bid his time off during some gamble he could not proceed counting off the fingers off of; since they were tipped down, curving, passing over eye-to-eye, before another drink had been delivered now.

‘Someone’s been listening for a while now, and they’re a-likened not to move!’

A Texan who had been overjoyed with finally being allowed stay out of his jail while the other arms that floated around him, holding the chains that were attached to his collar as to prevent any feasibly interpretable attempt at escape could only filter some of the most utterly unnaturally defunct; hardisome of wretched scowls that ever had entreated his allure come onto the sighted site where they practiced, out of his cave, out of his insolent remain of tatter in which he still bowled a nip on the reeds brought onto a most pernicious plate for him to devour, an abhorrent up-throng of bones and silver-cutlery tinged on the shark-fin protrusion coming out of the bars, withheld by many other wretches that elongated themselves from the wall, singing-still; the radio and the submarine panel and the strange cylinder in which they had been lodged in by slow-remorse, outside his clearly delineated horse-shaped prison, with its four Trojan-Horse let-in, great leg-pits he was constantly dragged towards by the arms as to make it so he would fall as soon as there was even some recognisable chance for him to take a wrong step, for them, not him, that’d lead him to some slouching wont for long-escape, longed for, tattle-rust and corrugated veins that kept drawing back and forth, threatening to dice him up in little forms brought as little as no, close to nothing, that was known, peace to him, knowing himself soon a butcher’s cleaved-up toy. Roy, you need to live for at least another hour.

‘Brother Roy, you may walk for fifteen minutes if so are you inclined to!’

This strange cage, although benigned from various sides and spots, most peculiar as it were, untold was the fact; at largely discharged, a mammoth-like shape rather than a horse and bloated; which bore the platform beneath him, of a stretch of fifteen hundred miles all the way, one side to the other, back, to front; with as much of a width beneath, although it couldn’t be seen from inside or where he were unless he gaped or got close enough to one of the four holes, to gape at the downward stretch, which in turn granted him no lesser remorse to the fact; that the bars were curved or curving in such ways as to become flaccid and grown with smaller appendages that wriggled their way much closer to him whenever or whether time allowed for him to re-open his lids and grasp a hold of reality once again. Large-unnatural things inside of them that whispered, often enough of time’s readying itself time’s come whispers of escape- withdrawn out of torture and solace of no moon; to be. Screams that followed of surependity; wilt him wild-a-thought or as wild a thought as to have crept back and beg for nothing else other than to be left behind; as not to suffer.

But an escape was not only not feasible but it was also maddeningly innocuously inopportune for the cage itself who had grown a certain likening-disjointed faulty yet endeared to its own, itself being drawn to the idea of housing this guest it grew so very fond of by means of destitution never-be, of likened prodding therefore see, and seething had not it wilt him out just yet, entreaty of force mighty of just use that might be called oft yet, since it was of an aloof and mind to keep him in forever, whatever the cause and whatever might bring it, therefore withdrawn, satisfaction of an eerie sight it grew accustomed to seeing and be met, which, if he were to leave, it would allow it to succumb to such a depression that one could not forgive the swallowing of the world by the eerie worms that were its 'legs', if it so much as grew a tiny-tad madder by the minute jointed, killing hundreds upon hundreds of men in the recourse, while feeling nothing less of some shortened inanimate lack of guilt, clacking its barred by iron gritty teeth of bars, as it would only jump and jump and jump so wildly upon some windy platform that one could not forget what happened if it happened for him to look around, therefore singing therefore dead, and not to say much of the mighty petty starving dregs who've done nothing to deserve such treatment, they would not be spared of all evil in the world, lest allowed for a Cretin's suicide-sparingly in use of draught as to drown his sorrows-aftermath of what's to come after, when the singers, the ones bloated in disgust and growing, whose growth rivalled the ones of the mighty cocoon shaped mammoth-legged vortexes that were no legs nor pits but four great abysses of their own Roy was drawn towards, had also, being rivalled by means of destitution had brought on an agent of theirs to talk to him and appear in the 'cage'. It was an awful thing of many lumpy Roy heads that were moulded on top of some tetrahedron-lumping within itself metallic body that rested upon two tails that were elongatedly spread like split hairs, bearing one great 'stinger' in the back with a single face adorning it painted on top, out of some petals that were oozing still as he looked. And stared, many shapes and many men fighting to get through were desperately shoved back in this eternal metallic prison that was its chest. Its mound-head almost a spiralling drill, a body of moving inwardly frames that kept them in, whereas legs, two fleshy tongues; beady tail, teeth in one, eyes in one, the 'hairs' but the beaked stinger itself.

'I've come to liberate you from pain, Roy, but it's not going to be an easy task, knowing how desperate you've become for company. Such a thing disgusts me, knowing I'd have to deal with the sight of you on a daily basis from this point on. Your company is disturbing to say the least, for I looked into your souls; all that I bear in this great cone. And they repel me beyond all reason!'

'Say no word, creature of deep succumb into tin reed in, wretched mound of desperation! For I would rather perish in this place than entreat a second more of your vileness aroused to question!'

'You will rot here without my help, and you know and must be aware of the fact that I cannot be the one that crushes your skull in order to deliver you from this prison you've been thrown inside of, by un-felt spite and thereof bend such laws in favour-idled for; time's cast. I'm to answer in disgust!'

'Then what shall it be? Wail for help or wait for another saviour that will grant me death?'

His holiness was nowhere to be seen nor heard and there seemed no likened end to the oozing worming shade that drew around, then flung to walls, and therefore wrung itself wherever else it found but little more than some decided warmth to cradle in.

‘I am a rapist.’

The secret code that brought on the promise of setting him free.

If only she were plainer, that might’ve explained a lot; but there was the brooding sister they were lest of yet beset truly, searched for, cradled in a bet of blot; straddled in hiding, and uncouth to ask of Yore, much closer than any reason that might be fit to abhor standing in its presence, beneath one of the tiny disastrous plasters, resided the family.

‘I fell in this cove, the cavern told and brought upon you, there’s but little more left that I might’ve seen!’

‘Yet there’s a strain onto you that might tell you get ahead and walk until you’re dead, dearly beloved son! I won’t help you unless I see some reason shining in your eyes at all!’

Both were bore in the little slouch.

For what would, necessity involved as to be abrought to question, a chance in a million, as to discern the intricately barely decipherable readings the submarine radar that was strapped against the pillar undulated the rays as well as the rays connected to the bloated reedy antennas that emitted slight fornicated waves of radiation that upon being interconnected with the melodiously inclined vociferous alacrity of the voices that sang from below allowed for some sort of incoherent resonance to slowly make it way in by unexplainable means it could barely, if there ever was such an unexplainable event seen or dealt with before, be heard by organic hearing devices, as well as barely picked on by more advanced civilizational-devices, which in turn granted them an air of mysterious vagueness that only added to their finely-grated allure; being already over-done to begin with. Although of high-regard in terms of their heretical tendencies, well-kempt yet beat beneath the bush, or inside of, these beings were of a strange luminance that allowed for no other wont, in terms of the spectators that might’ve been or not there to begin with, other than to stare in any other direction than directly at them. As if you’re staring at the sun and your eyes start tearing; not good. A precipice of wont as Frank could only think of no less of a reason and no more than it was needed before he could, before he could enter the room and finally be met by the man Ringer had sent him to meet while somewhere around the disgruntling maligned, yet filled with josser of pus; was there a stop at a red light. The streets were empty with the exception of a few men after all, wearing raincoats and grunting as they only made it so he knew he was expected to jump off. Although ice was something made harder and harder by the lot to jump on top of, breaking each joggled with bone in his body upon being thrust by some winds that were winged by some unnecessarily broken apart mourning plain lambs that were there. A kill of bodied flying bloated leviathans marching out there, upon the pinkish sky, and all he could think of was that one dead lamb that replaced the sun. It was infuriating how they made little noise but giggled like school girls being met during their first day by their crush. Paradise for him had always been somewhat of a disease he could not escape out of once the door was slammed eighteen eight times, albeit whereas he’d be granted a slimmer of a chance to make it through, leaping through as many hoops as it was necessary; this was the point of no return, where reality had grated upon his skin a jostle of many oyster-crabbed little nerve endings that appeared to be faced light him, lightly whispering how numb he had become to the pain facilitated by the trucks that were passing by. He's been staring at them throughout the greater part of this day and somehow it's never gotten old; nigh-elating, to say the least, how often he'd seen it.

'I will not conceit my advance as long as I long for someone to come and step on my face that I may be met by such intense pain as I will stop breathing once again and fall asleep, asunder from the thunder-wrapped around the brought on climb, that I shall wilt upon my soullessness discerned to, alas, my admirers, who shall beckon shots of my post-bodied statue-made after I died!'

Encased in cement; as he was.

It should make no difference whatsoever any longer, seeing how there was, upon a second entreaty, to the little to no avail, during this bizarre circumstance that was preponderant to their hearing, the men that were cemented into the globes they had brought with them from the compass entries had already benefited from the lifelessness of the corpses that had been delivered out of the fallen abodes in which they had fallen, not even twenty days ago, during likened-likened few and fewer-less than most necessary a duress of bodies found themselves flung into the most bizarre heaps they could hope to let go off and fling away, not to stay or else convey what Adler told them:

'March, keep marching and you're going to keep at it until I'm satisfied! And no slacking either! I'll have none of it if it can be helped, I won't have any slackers blowing by!'

'A journey's long abruptly unending retort has been spent thinking about it and lest you give us something hardisome to chew upon, I'm afraid we'll have to starve ourselves to death a while just so we could make it, barely, on time!'

'What about your contractors?'

'All dead, sir!'

'If you don't mind me asking, by what cause?'

'They were the first to fall down and rest with us in some of the broken piles of stained glass, during the time we know of lest be-had a better mind to point it out for them that it's too dangerous for them to head down here!'

Many of their lobes had nonetheless survived the deep-freezing process for reasons yet to get bestowed upon them and likens of similar understandings. It should've brought no good, greater God, he entered through one of the Oil lots and started opening its mouth as soon as it was allowed for him to talk again.

'My good men, you, my slaves are to be chopped and put through brittle throng, suffering be long-prolonged, until the quiet's end is finally put through lest endure, and therefore through the burning of a single lop-laundry's ever' thrice, shall you find a moment more to green respite!'

'And who shall listen to this thing of yours if that's what you've cast us to walk along, the path sullen and miller's boat's still mistake, the people who had been put in your trust are nowhere to be seen any longer, nor will they want to move again in the solace of the broken coast that's been cast onto your home, the one still seeping away. Pray do tell you've gotten yourself a mind that would somehow, dear me, somehow make it so we can still save your soul from whichever deepening it's been cast inside of, from whichever quiet's respite and the bile that's come onto the broken shore where the filaments of the dyed poles had made it so they shall start squirming inside their deeper throngs, they ones your rapiers had cut in many pieces, and the ones that shall call each cost of life, tender- to their very recesses and the ones they've been hiding inside of for eons that were cast and bold!

'But how could I have understood the message your master imparted onto me when the world was still young and I, the only man who was but livid yet tired of the quiet that's been left by the rotten death of the countless generations that left little to no trail, entailed as I were by heed and leper boats, the ones hiding in their tents and the ones that were still strung upon their bastardly grown rods, how could I have given them the pain to be dead or given onto a sight that would lend them nothing short of living in the disease that my ancestors still pained themselves to live through during and during only the age they allowed me to pass through once put into the sought after disabled nest of mildew?'

'You, wretched Ifus Rolpho, you were the cause of their deaths and it shall be you who perishes on the front for the bitter part of a mascot for death's ill tented bore upon never-thought for, leper's strong and strung upon, bodiless odour hardened for no gas could hope to stay lifeless, shattered still upon milled grass. I beckon you to reconsider this, Ifus, there's no other man that will listen to me; and no proper reason would do either, since you're known not to last!'

He only tried, only tried, for that bore could only figure it thus. This man, this dredge, this fire's stench and coal there-burning, coated upon the pile which makes no heart adore, to have ill-cast a simple nod upon them, would mean look therefore no more. No more than needed from a pointed insolence, therefore say what you mind. And when you're done talking, Ifus, in your insolence blind, I shall strike you down and hereupon pave what little trench I may and have you sit still and there, there remain, until the will of the worms will have rotted your souls; wretch of no teeth, no less, and blinded! She waited no more than it was needed for some kind of beckoning of no reason to survive, to have a note or so, and such-n-such be said by the party, the tables, the tables being very much occupied. Everyone wanted a say in, but little was there to no doubtful release, to have come to some peace of the mind would've released no anchor to the soul, no bother anymore and nothing but the insolence of some people that had died long ago but still urged her noiselessness continue.

'I am given onto you as a form of credence's call. My dear, you shall come to the realization that not only am I not your enemy, but that you've fell upon a bed of resin made out of my very numbed mind, benighted by the people who have sent you with nod returned, to be wilt come back and deliver the news of my return, as to their accommodation or to the creation of a foaming brothel that had been cast upon my stare, the need to survive this inglorious countenance that is, simply put despair, fashioned at my command and shown onto you and your brow for reason untold to any, or anyone for, as a matter of fact, I would not feel no rescind to what's been tilled for days or been had for this reason wilt into existence cast, for I seek but destitution, well-knelt repulsion, that, and only that may be felt and known, for I shall fashion some that will bewilder even the greatest and most dastardly of cones, who shall join me in the singing of the quiet's even, while, I and your masters shall stand upon such cauldrons, or on top of them, of gelatine that there will be no longer any reason to fall behind or rescind whichever need or nod would one knob such as I am feel there's still left, plenty would therefore mind if you happened never to return!'

‘Would that so happen to be a threat I’ve such received for heaven’s above caught in contemplation, such as one would have it, deep retrieve?’

‘How could I even be asked to answer this when there’s never been a single soul to carry on out the blasphemy that’s been a deeper-bowel’s trenched but rancid, platter-prowl?’

And they danced around as if there was a fire-tray of ashened coal beneath them, dancing from table to table until landed finally they had upon the tabernacle, juggling with spores, the Judge being grown like a giant hubris-pus pucker with many incisors sticking out of him, therefore made much stronger still abhor every living moment he was forced to deal with, upon command, when there was still a second left for him to ask, therefore had he approached; and would’ve made, if that were the case, a reason bold and broadened still:

‘If the two of you persist akin this awful chaos’s stilled resin, to have been called upon reason and feel it so; I shall but slacken a pace less and beat you both to an inch of your lives and have you kilt where you stand and therefore lay no longer any moment probe in countenance for what’s been had!’ A threat, disastrous, but quickly brought!

A light flickered, the present people were very much startled by this confrontation that’s barely been concurred; at an end:

‘Judge Bag-fur, you’re but a parasite and a slug, filled with fat, drenched and enacted upon reason, you’re still clad in clothes that do not belong to you, not had they ever seen a lightened stench, as odorous as your remains are, show yourself an apparition’s near end!’

But this was not answered. Days, days, since the fall of the many planets in the moon, since they conjoined themselves and the pyramid flew inside of it, deep sinew but cast, steam coming from anywhere, and the people that came after that were of no mind to continue their bickering out of the fear that they might anger the wrong and the wronged, the ones that followed in their footsteps, whom were of a bile-surrounding, glanced and glancing still, dancing with the fire of elation, been.

‘Our lord has promised us a lot since his passing. He’s been communicating with us every now and then, from beyond the recesses of the fall, inside of each of his thralls, plenty in the making, worsened by the fumigating rum that’s siphoned but a ruminating crown! He’s been missing for a while now, but I beg you to await!’

Said the fourth one at the table before opening up another champagne bottle; it was one of the other ones he’s hid inside his private stash. The one with a tip of a cottle-prodder-corn-corkscrew puffy lustful dance-shoe wearing little midget-barge; the one he’s kept tied around his cudgel since the last time they spoke to him, before he caught the cold that made the back of his spine evolve in a large radiator shape coffin-bottle iron-maiden torture device holding, bolted trap inside of which he sacrificed his children for the lord that never answered back!

‘I am frightened still by what’s been happening here while I was left for dead in the little pucker that had devoured the lower half of my body, since he’s told me, Hugh Oyster, you’re to be encased in a little putrid lot of spiels! Since teal is your blood, you slug! You giant little wretch devoid of salt, made of many put together little parasites, all feeding upon you like little puckery maggots!’

‘But you forget something, dear prophet of no slackened mind!’

‘And what would that be, little wretch?’

‘The recompense for having but reeled a simple pucker-trot upon the blot of a little single snot I took from dark abode, and therefore nod, still thinking there’s a little blot of quiet where I may sink in deep resin still, and talk to you and ever-since; from that point on shall there be reeds, and better tits for gelatine beats that I may sing to the servants that still endure!’

‘Oyster; toy of little land, you’re of no mind to still yourself and run! Abandoning me in a dire moment of need would mean death for all us within!’

Can seagulls bark at the moon?

The VET swoon:

‘I’ve been out of it for a while now, going back and forth, trying to, attempting to resuscitate it, to perform one of those fancy CPR manoeuvres.’

‘I’m rather disappointed in you, more than I’ve ever been before!’

‘Truly so, King-reagent, but I thought I’d see a vulva snake cuddled with your children, the oratory of Blasphemous Peppers, as they lay stranded upon the side of the fallen half-over the River-stricken prattle-cottage! Inside of it, insidious worms are still praying to us to return!’

A rose for a maiden; such’sn likes of De’ Orleans!

Crude was the day when they suddenly egged themselves to begin working on her during the lot’s gun and there around!’

‘And he has joined us still!’

‘Is he not dead from the fall? Hill of blood, there to come, abhor!’

The signs of the world

If they were to be lost, all would stop existing, nullity untold!

‘The wings have swept a few off, ledger, what shall we do about it from pointed tusk to the ever present musk, the musketeers that arise shall make no lest employ attire trident, as either present or ever-bearing advent shall take away least yield release, the conical puncheons that rabid sink and wretch of such-protrudence bearing shall withhold from reproach!”

‘I say we shatter the few we’re left with and make deal with the ones of low-regard, they shall listen to us from this point on if time’s right and therefore standing!’

‘Yet the symbols jerk eerily in contemplation and in yearned-for-watchfulness, trying to endear an approach. If we still our hands even for a tiny moment they shall squish themselves past a slither of a breath and fade away, taking us and everything that’s the slightest, slimmer, woeful-cyst, alive!

It’s a saddening thing we’ve yet reasonless decry staved off by mere starvation!’

‘My daughter’s at the door, will you please answer the bell before it falls off the chain?’

‘I shall not do it, brother, for you are evil, vile and you have stabbed me many a times, and I cannot endure another stab, as I will’ve been bled by the time I reached the door by your fancily distorted caveat into the realm of death into which you’ll have cast me to sleep eternally by the side of, where to rot, where to be brought into a spiral of many fallen-apart crudities that wilt me not alive a second more than needed!’

‘But Fill-Boat, I have sickened a trifle!’

Bernie Sanders is a subhuman dumb-dirty kike I intend on ethnically castrating and Holocausting the entire family of! Ugly fucking retarded communistic-degrading; fucking parasite trying to brain wash people into accepting the Judeo-Communism kike-racket trap! Henry Ford was right about kikes in the International Jew; filthy, ugly, peevish, decrepit, non-intelligent scammers with little to no mind; morally degrading, cheating-deformed, inbred nepotistic sub-human nigger-promoting miscgenators they are! Filthy fucking kikes need to get as lynched and clustered together with other inferior races before being sent back to Hell where they belong, with niggers as well, whose skin is ashened coal, sulphuric in smell; ugly little dumb-retarded and drooling like their nigger children like in a point and tell recognize the nigger from a pile of shit and bail before he stabs you, since he’s nothing but an ugly dirty-nigger criminal with the size of an almond, tiny-tottery ‘brain’!

‘Monkey-nigger, come around, I’ve got a little pile of trash you are to lick off the ground, clean it now! Or whip’s a crackler comes the light! I’ll whip you with my whip of lightning till you’re struck beneath the ground, two feet, four feet, twenty or so, into the pit with you, ugly nigger-mongrel strewn a strung, hanging upside down, towards the sky, you’re being drawn by gravity as this nigger-lynch rope is specially designed to sent you shoop-a-flying into the nearest star, where you shall burn to all eternity with your nigger brothers that cause but harm to all!’

Nigger’s not listening, dumb monkey, I’ll shoot you! I’ve a rifle I’ll put to good use now!

But my nigger’s name is Obama, and I must be careful not to kill him too quickly as that would not grant me the much-needed satisfaction of punishing him for dropping so many bombs on top of children’s hospitals, opening borders and ruining the country further.

‘Your birth certificate says only one thing. Born in nigger and is a nigger. There’s not even a name on it, or anything other than that, and a picter of you!’

‘Uhm, there must be some misunderstanding here. I am a nigger, but I wasn’t born in Niger.’

‘I said born in nigger not born in Niger, you dumb-fucking deaf nigger. Do you want me to write down deaf nigger? Is a deaf nigger what I’m being presented in front of my eyes!’

‘No.’

‘No what?’

‘No, master!’

‘I’m going to take care of you from this point on, Nigger-Obama Barrack! Barrack Obama, you are a nigger! You are a nigger! Have I ever told you that you are a nigger?’

‘No, master, no!’

Time for the whipping session to commence. I’m going to kill this nigger; Barrack Obama, the former ‘president’ of the ‘United’ States because I hate niggers.

Since people voted for him only because he is a nigger, it’s only natural that he should be hated for being a nigger. It’s the only natural conclusion there is; the only logical thing there is. You’re invited inside the house for being a nigger, well, you should be kicked out for being a nigger.

‘Get out of my house, Nigger Barrack Obama, the former ‘‘President’’ of the ‘‘United’’ States! Go back to where you were born, a jungle! Play with your monkeys, nigger, go play with your filthy fucking monkeys, nigger!’

But the house was only fifteen meters away from the giant nuclear water-silo shaped mouth held on by the elongated arms of eighteen dead effigies carved out by the insolent hands of the architects whose unnatural body parts, these worming their way in through parasitical lodging – nigh- ‘self-sufficient’ organs by other means had only harmed these almost spills of growths, as if out of glue bottles, filled with lumps, as if they sprouted from beneath the Silo itself! There could be seen, every here and there, some darkly abode unaware!

A strange strangling lest strengthening noise was lured from one sober call, and most adorned turnkey snot with little puffs of cones that started drawing in and out of sight, emerging; membranes ever-yet reticent as they were unnerving began making a fuss out of it since they could barely control themselves, from what was going on and there-around:

‘One, I ask, a single bloodied bloated eye, that I may use to as, adorn my chest-high crest in tender cry, as I beg of thee to come again!’

There should be no chance whatsoever to draw any closer than that, would’ve been his chance, if he’s still doing it, still thinking of it, thought of it by now, of rape and kill-murder come onto the brow gully of the fight during the Rape of Sor; he’s a crude fellow with pistons for knots and a leper-tooth Tiger riding alongside him, while the kerosene runs out, he’s to stop a ga-s station but Ssssss-lowly he’s starting to mentally slur it and that’s a bad sign, truly it is and who can blame the fellow when there’s so many bad people on his track? Truly the man’s gone mad, that’s why women are spreading their legs to anyone who's even slightly two feet over them, and not because oblivious to such attendee as they are, it's a cruel thing and an impossibility of self-possession to even consider that the mark left behind by one of the cruel starts that have encompassed the world in its most innocuously dark, strange and estranged from the civilization he's been thrust in; niggers; had failed him somewhere down the line, which being the reason behind him trying to search for a single coin inside his pocket, this has resulted in him asking for spare from some cigarette-flingers with their fingers up their asses; fucking flaming homos on hormones thinking they're women.

'How much for the gas, ey? Please give me a good deal or I will go tell moom-y, mummy I got n'thor Injun scalped!'

'You look like a nigger yourself; well not really but you sound like one. Who raised you boy? Who did it? How come you sound like one of these little monkey-boys that keep ruining the; where to?'

'I think I'm part of the gang, I see, there's the end-knob rub door snaps only when I, the crude ideally rotund caveat-that was prime to licking or to rub it against with the help of his rub-around stick gun;' a lever by it attached to the robe- grown the babe that entered this Motel-combustion who only allowed for him to check her out while she was on full-display with her Hooters being plimped to the fukk-rock, mayonnaise by the strip which signalled she was open for business, while this rod, this lever-knob was but a plug to her brown-stock he grabbed a hold old, playing with her as if she was a nut-cracker that forced itself to keep taking breaks before it could, before it could do the thing; made her feel all nasty and bad inside, as if there's been an ankh in there waiting to be resuscitated by some Heinrich device. Her corset was a giant book-cockpit of metal that only gave the impression of a grown, that was attached to a giant overly grown, phallic at its end, but which served as a hinder-thrust leg and a foot on top of which it erected herself on top of; tiny-pepper- magnified-shaped boiler-room thing coming out of the boot in a way such as it looked as if it was a mermaid, frozen in time during the precisely-right about to dive in a pool of water before splashing moment during which she would either splash the remaining amount of water covering her barely raised to surface form in your face or it was actually only but a flaccid low-drooping with its head close to the edge, incapable of flinging itself into the swimming-pool, fish; kicked as well, where the boot and this flaccid metallic orca met and welded into one another; hybridized each other in this pseudo-fleshy metallic growth that had shown up from beneath her mini-skirt; whereas to her right side, or the right side of it; the other leg was like a bull's, but forced in some awkwardly prone position out of which it couldn't move out of, shaped like some ugly root, that had, out of it, right at the middle, where a knee might've been, sprouted a pseudo torso-looking pumping 'man' with some embryo'head that had its mouth pulled out but had two clear-black eyes, one giant ogre-maggot 'appendage' that had no opposable thumbs, that made its left arm; and a pair of 'wings' that were two elongated paper-thin sheets of nigh-stalagmite puffy wrigglers that kept shaking and spreading disease as the invisible thin-figures started appearing in Nigger-Obama, who had been sent on an errand's tail of the eye; right so. Later:

Chaylice Herero- in the heart of the French Republic, the newspaper:

One of the doors was almost knocked out its hinges as the council approached. Louis Aragon, Michel Foucault, Jean-Paul Sartre, Jacques Derrida, Louis Althusser, Roland Barthes, Simone de Beauvoir, Gilles Deleuze, Félix Guattari, Michel Leiris, Alain Robbe-Grillet, Philippe Sollers, Jacques Rancière, Jean-François Lyotard, Francis Ponge, Bernard Besret; naked, alongside a horde of nakedly dead-nigger children that rolled alongside them.

‘I am Chaylice.’

Another man came in:

‘I must fuck every single one of them, every dead being that’s been brought forth onto me, by the council of paedophiles! There is not a single man in this room that has not performed a act of supreme-rape butchering paedophilia, and that includes most of the Jews in France, especially the Jews, who are now accompanying the Council of Rape, whose tribute is much appreciated as a result of the abolishment of the consent age we are now free to rape as much as we please.

While Europe is being distracted by Gypsies, faggots and niggers, we are free to do as we please with these underage children I’m to dine upon.’

The feast had begun. The beasts had come in and allowed for rape to carry. Hundreds upon hundreds of journalists, of moguls, of rich people, the Jews, Arabs and other Paedophiles were welcome in. Allah himself was there, forefront upon the rape that had commenced, upon the bodies presented onto him, the dead-nigger children and their ugly-puffy bells that upon being rung for the last time had caused a most concussive of dark abodes to rise, the deathly countenance that was to be swept beneath the brush by the array of false-flags, jewish lies, as they, in a most befuddling manner as there was, managed to completely brainwash the French folk into believing there was no child-rape going on at the Chaylice Herero headquarters, which had served, ever since its very inception as a; ‘I’m going to fucking rape you!’ Quickly enough, yet expected, Sartre interrupted. He had been a finger’ itching down a brown-hole out of which he could not pull his arm out over the course of the next five or so following ours.

A hobble for hobos and hooligans; and niggers; of which race Chaylice Herero himself was a member of; poor nigger only knew a few words; poor nigger only knew how to spell his name, that’s all.

‘Damn niggers come in France, take our childs; take’m childs away. I say, as a famed French Philosopher, I say, there’s but little to be minded of their behaviour as is, what’s left to say and make out of, these, these dirty, filthy, un-civilized monkeys; they’re to be cast out and made learn and do with who is charge of this place! Oui, oui; oi! Save sum for me, you little faggot!’

He but yelled at one of the journalists, who was already knee-deep in one of the most, the most; time was come to sail:

‘France must be divided, but, wait.

Well, well, well! If it isn’t Sarkozy and his very own son. Present here today, after all that happened, who knew, who could even expect it? It would’ve never crossed my mind that the very two of you, Jews, would join us, during this most sacrilegious event we’re hosting. Who would’ve thought that the two of you would join in, this rape that we’re holding, with dead-nigger children, forefront, presented onto you, as the feast’s begun?’

‘Why of course! It’s only part of the course, of the conversion ritual! Were you not let known of it? That we would attend? Have our people not instructed you to let go of that buffoon by the name of Maurice Sinet just so we could attend this ceremony without any interference whatsoever?’

I say, both I, Sarkozy and my son are paedophiles! But, we could not risk endangering such an exposure as there is! Otherwise said, we could’ve jeopardized our very own lives by doing so!’

‘I swear, my good man, I was certain that there’d be no way to, to; well enough, ascertain what mightily a perdition might be endeared as to enclose upon your affirmatory indentation with regards to the strange confinement in which you’ve very much so, lest beset with a disproving yet remorseful retort to the decimatory enfeeblement that otherwise has been presented to us so far, thrust yourself into; to which I’m of a mind to tell you off, and drive you away from this rape’s rawness that’s to follow through as the main-meal is about to be presented during the totter-off!’

Obama enters the room. Before anything, anything at all could be said about this sudden, most insolent-endowed intrusion; this strange party made out of the two Sarkozys, Sartre, a few journalists and some dead-nigger children that had been carefully placed just so anyone might feast upon them as if they had been presented, during the conception of their placing as for some sort of open buffet from which anyone might come, pick and choose that they might do with the niggarrish probes left to their endowing; had carefully removed themselves from its immediate proximity; that of the nigger-monkey Barrack Hussein Obama, the former president of the United States, who had been left in complete and utter shock at the sight of his dead nigger-child daughter, whose life was met by some untimely end, as this little-dead-nigger-daughter found herself most firmly planted in a pile of dead-nigger children that were stuck in the process of being systematically raped by crowd of Illegal Immigrants, just like he was; once, incapable of showing his birth certificate; as is, the poor nigger Obama knelt down in shame, in terror, and in fright, incapable to fight back the avalanche of feelings that rushed inside his head, wave after wave, of reminders, for every dead-nigger-child rapist that had its way his daughter.

‘I am the vileness that courses in the flowing veins of each man dead at that dead-rear end point where your ancestors had ill-behaved to much bereaved therefore dead-ened, much in vain as I’ll have ill-withdrawn myself from the point where they had seen themselves dead thrice thee wonted! I shall call upon your sighted wonder only for a moment’s pass!’

‘And I’m still listening although I’m still of a mind to ask, what and where-to have you hindered such approach?’

‘This was ill-inclined ever prior to your wonder’s wont! But I shall make of it as I see fit!’

The man had rose from his seat not fifteen meters away from where they stood, across their feet it spread, a miasma no doubt, instead, he pulled his shirt out and a few gaping holes as if from a barely standing frame, a straw-hinged-man or some wicker, burning man, out of which, little pear-shaped with bumps and lumps, diseased little puckery organs started coming right, snapping with little broth and plenty brought onto the sighted-crease, disease was spread, and growths were seen, of lordly-dumbfounded gelatine with little humanoid-fetus-figures coming out of the seething cyst that had came out of the middle of the room! It was disgusting and alarmingly erect; how the many organs drew to it, and to its vile ends, none could voice their sayings in, letter-by letter thin, growths were made and through it in, and deeper in came a rod.

Tall men with little wonders and with wont; of each partaking started broadening each gap, started doing a toll-sought after snot in which they crawled inside of. That looked like a miniature whale-shaped tiny booth, but broader-like-a-car; see-through because of the organic matter that allowed for it from that point on, a never-ending ask for more. A therefore scanty, therefore snore, and sort-of asking:

‘Who shall sleep near the retriever?’

‘I counterfeited the soothing timber, but I lack the necessary tools to breathe through one of the cradling-much to their likens, snappers, they’re going to eat each other if we allow them to, brother!’

There was something that had to be said, although the near-taking that entreated such a likens to occur only added to the broth of contemplation the treaty that had been prior to their savings cast, to have it spilt into some chasm, taken away from them, for no prior knowledge might’ve saved or such allowed for a yearning to be had from that point on, nor would it’ve served men of the scholarly kind to be made aware of what was happening around them, either then or now!’

And then again, five minutes later.

‘Much requested, Nigger Obama, I’ll let you know that this place, this is a holy place where niggers are not welcome unless accompanied by their master in all terms and all regards! The Tome of niggardly ever-had!’

Hinder-room, a trifle of a breath taken in paces forth, there standing a single, if a simple more than a few itches past the clock, a single little truncheon cat. Nibbling on the turnkey!

‘A hobble’s drivel one I see, turning onto you for food when’ else to be if not now when the ruler of France, to the king’s alarm has gone missing into the leper’s abode, to which I tell you, wretched knob, you’re of no second more’s tender coming and therefore standing in wait for ruin’s come. When they shall find you still hidden into that dark brothel of a town, they shall only see the plight of day driven into their chests by which they will have bled each other with little more than you could add or say! Have a say in it, if you will, but I’m still of an opinion that they will trample you where you stand!’

No more a tramp than, ought to come for him in practiced forth and tender, much remorse-filled and remorseful deceit, that might’ve yielded them no faith’ or drawing of the blood, content on ever-coming closer to where they stood. Ill of petty minds and done, unable to react to the cat that made its way, albeit benigned, through the fewer, lesser, plenty more, to the ones beyond the petty whores and those beyond them; it made little sense to have been stopped now, or to have a say to the threateningly made curses, that were withdrawn as soon.

‘That cat, it doesn’t belong in this place at all. It shall be the bane of all our of existences if we allow such an attendee as is, by all means, as to call on it there-again at large and unawares, whenever as to call to it, or close an eye, whether till’ th’d been, or seen it act in the manner it is means naught and is a manner of less than expectedly wrought in peace of otherwise knowing!’

Its bloated corpse brood of dead cats repelled the common sight, the darted fright that had accompanied it after and the ever-knowledge ever-front a’wearing, to have been kilt by it might’ve meant disease; once finely spread the contamination might’ve found itself anything but ill-at ease as for the foreknowledge that accompanied it, there was nothing to be said of it, naught at all, naught else, and not to bother some of the observers that were straddling around as if bred on the encampment, standing; had fashioned a lease of foreknowledge-built-like standing; of breeding never-ending damp receipts; scrawled all over; with notes and bills; all but false and falsified and fakes; nothing but some dirge of little puffy, knob-like ends, that only added to it, to brother and ill; a chance they might avoid the court, but made all too apparent that they knew what had been told, hence the perfect forgery had been made, well-crafted and fashioned in such a subtle way that all could only but avoid thinking of anything else other than the robbery that was taken place; the cart slowly moving with a pile inside of it, yet to be addressed!

‘But what is that I’m seeing in that corner?’

Philip, Philip Sarkozy:

‘I like to have sex with Jew-child Hairless!’

‘That is unacceptable!

Unrespectable! Detestable, get out!’

‘No.’

A family of inbred kikes in control of the French Republic; the outer-reaches of the Sarkozys had been unabashedly so, a top-front piece of uneasiness, soaked in a bloody-pus wound out of which, starting with the end of the Second World War, has yet to fully coagulate and accordingly heal.

‘There’s a man in that room, open it, come one, just for a little while, I’m trying to peak in, just a moment or so, don’t make this harder than it has to be! You’re only going to bring it down upon yourself the harder you resist!’

Upon marching forth on the brow of the first Solace of the Vanquished and leering at them as this asphalt-muncher, prodger-cradle of much to itself, dandy, rancid, running in circles, somehow more niggardish, more bickardish, liquorish in taste, octave carcass try-harder in terms of how to, and how did, and how they, the oppressed numbered on the front for execution blasphemers irresponsible for their own acts and war-crimes that had cast, to him this means nothing, really, take a look at this looter-faggot who is now acting like a nigger in heat; past the curve, kicked-up-front, lop-lop, flop-sided, with a rusty puffy-maliciously benighted armour made out of floppy disks kept together by rubber-bands, and tape-worms, filled with the most perniciously erected, dumb-founded, dumb-struck and never-ended, put for brim, yet strings lay attached to the lynching rope this ugly dumb nigger is to be fallen and stricken forth, played with by dancer of the niggardish-gook king, God’s fear they might breed together come onto the sight; and there’s no one who can really have a say in it, or else the Great Elk-nigger Killer Murderer, the suppository- yet winged, as if in actuality one of our Lord’s great Angels in disguise, prized in a collection of trinkets, yet; a leash might whip-him blind; blindingly aware of what’s going on, he’s staring, still interrupted during this sudden speech come out of the gulley of the Trapezoid-nigger-killers Brothers sipping on a truck-full load of nigger-liquor globes that are still used to this day, needlessly said, about one of the most intrusionary produced to the nigger-cattle-bouncy brothers; the few proprietors that are present in this little house by the side of the stirred inside of car-bouncer; ones being before em being incapable of presenting themselves any better than their respectable counterparts, there, there they’re standing in a circle, smoking pipe-cigars with puffs of Injun tent-niggers dining around with; smoke of blue puffs; and what not; strange fellow looks about to say; with a strange right eye – inhumanly long, stretching all the way back of the near-end of its close-to stretch of a receding hairline; where it curves to the left in the eyes of a the beholder, like an almost top-iron piece of a scythe or horizontally rotated ice-pick lined depression into the skull, which curves weirdly as if it's a highway curve like the ones that have traffic at the rush hour drive by, drawing near into, a few centimetres in this vertical main eye conundrum, that gives onto the onlooker the impression of a slingshot; that further down curves, but only at its other end, to the same direction as the top of the eye, but only slightly and in an almost arc-like formation; like a pseudo J; or some umbrella's stick; or it might've been the imprint of a small broom's tray's dust-picker; without its compact plastic depression; which was rounded 'round his cheek; his almost flat head being drawn to the right side, or to his left eye that stuck out like some giant maggot that pulled the rest of his skull nigh-out; into some twisted unicorn-horn almost pupae deformation, some insectoid thing that were its real eye, that had some squirmy almost implants that could be seen from the side endangered but closer to the reel that drew deeper inside of him and had a go at the devouring of his eye-tubes; a crooked mouth adorning the lower side of his face, open as thickly as a flash capturing the image of a bat flying into the projective; toothless yet never closing down upon itself; the side of it being protect on his left by a half-torn apart piece of armour that was closer in likens to a partially crooked blade that's almost been charred by an atrophy of heat caught in midst of self-devour; a potato of flesh but humanoid nonetheless, whereas his eyes were actually squirming like black rivers of ink but made of strange modular parasites with little antler-blobs made out of slug-cells that had black nigger-like but shrunken faces; pruned with piercing puffy puffs; wearing a businessman's suit, he was; this figure, but armed by; and this was only on his left side, his right arm being a large sarcophagus shaped bulbic cylinder-thing; like some tubular crawl-inside of toboggan or tunnel, slightly raised a eighteen centimetres in, as to give the impression of a shark fin upraising; at the end of which rested a giant scorpion stinger' pea-bulb of meat that was entirely kept above the 'sea-level', that is to say, perfectly angular, or straight, as if resting on the ground by the sarcophagus elongation, which was attached to a flatter than usual shoulder, and, which had beneath it, as to give a better impression of the general form the tunnel would begin at the end of a human's armpit, and would allow enough space for this chick-avian body-bag-sack with a small stone drooping down at its end; that was almost entirely a bag of flesh but this thing that drooped down was in actuality a stone that was placed in it to drag it down at the end of an ocean; a body-disposal 'meat'-fluid filled with sack, with a chiselled stone-thing inside of it, insidious as well; a fully grown adult human male's body stuck inside of, sack; that was stitched to the sarcophagus; which, if the sky was a floor, henceforth with the stinger pointing at the ground and what not, this 'figure' of a bag might give one the impression, the outline of the form, from the distance, of a hunch-down resting old lady; a hag; but one that's been tortured, killed, then disposed of; he only had an arm, and his body was a big neck that curved down into a succumbing in a sand pit or shifting, moving? Sand; like in the movies, or the desert Sahara, or the nigger one or the Arab one; bearing two legs but long, ugly, deformed and being erected in the same way open scissors would; or the opening of a maw, some alligators', entrance into a cavern; with a third leg being an elongated fully grown sting, scorpion like, but less beady and more of a clean stretch; an appendage-looking growth; the strange smaller beady scorpion growth-sarcophagi-bulb bearing a fluid bag coming out a flatter shoulder neck-side contortion bearing the strange shoulder-arm; flatness an unflattering sight might bear; once seen; a three-legged Locness monster-imitation with the head of a man and a cancer growth of an insectoid stinger coming out its throat; twas a strange sight to behold. He was a rapist; is still a rapist.

‘The essence of the chalice is still permeating within my sight, I yearn for such elusive trifle as to have it commence yet again in sulphur yet called upon swollen decanter shall I wait!’

‘But have you not been a man of little mind no more than fifteen minutes ago, of worthless gnawing and to enter the premise, whatever might it mean, will you not suffer any intrusion since?’

‘Nay, I shadn’t, for that would mean I could only bestow no mind nor wont upon those that came along and ran their fingers in the wrong wall and I have chiselled them well!’

Everything was finely if not truly beyond it, prepared in such a way that it allowed for no ruse, for none too obtuse to temper with the intricacies of iron that had been made do with when the smelting started, when the chests had darted, set in their flight, eyes open in the middle of every single one, as they bespoke their token words, their ghoulish servants and the vines, the lichens and the remnants of men they carried along. Their masters, their dominators, and the ones that carried in with woe; reeling in and out, with jamb about their formed crests. And they spoke no less, but did impress upon the servants of the home that there was such a thing as a wont of something or someone, so much so as to appear tainted by what was happening around them, through the lost Cajole.

‘Break one brick open, pry it so if you must, shatter it while wreathing in disgust, but have it open by the time our livid clock strikes for noon.’

A baboon-darkened pillar; with many attached to its every side devices; most of them had been stitched to the poor mountainous-looking bull-frog by convenience but house by giant lardy parasites sprouting out its head; playing around with faces of men, out of which, drew strange water-wells springs they coated themselves in, bloody-puffs of spore-membranes, out of which hundreds of put together see-through as if prying in fat allowed for these humans to serve in death just like it was when they were still alive. And they were messing with potato peeled reefs of coral and of boats, even a submarine visor and some other things that were stolen from.

‘Have you seen my friend, Malt? The one that threw himself down the gulley and was never seen alive?’

Asked one of the Sailors after he’d been brought from the below-abodes! He was an engineer as well, a scholarly thing of little to nothing to himself.

‘Shall we begin the cutting in that case? Will there be a, a reason to alarm the other ones if they convey a little moment’s foil and dirty forth what’s left of the soil we planted a few moments before?’

The door shook a second time, adding up to a row of a few more shakings before almost falling off its hinges. There was not a single worthless whore around to throw along and in its way, as a little pop of air started flinging some of the most insolent apparel of shrapnel cones of old and so-intoned shrapnel of chisel prick-wood, alarmed, were, as they had begun wriggling around the same door they were pointed in the direction of to grasp a hold of every single shrapnel hole and littler, tinier, informant’s row of corpses they found themselves cradling inside their arms, children that not only did not belong but were of no measure to push out of the hole they were flung in, and in this abode they found no peace! And that is how they drew in!

‘Lose him somewhere, drop him off!’

Trucks started coming in at a much faster pace than before, unaccounting for the pressure in terms of soliquity of banditry; these highwaymen inside the trucks being rapists as well, with-with women, hehe, naked, hehe, with naked women in the front of the car, put with glue. Hehe!

‘They’re of a mind to eat your corpse once you stop moving around in circles, and I’m not one to interpret that as an act of poison, nor would I make you leap in one of those pools, you know? And I can see it just clearly, far more so than you could possibly imagine. Since I’ve seen you around, I’ve been watching you extremely closely, my good friend of no mind, contorted such to murder as myself’d halted so the training before it happened to devour the good side of my trophy of a lower side of the body, this giant hornet where the dead children of Emerge are hiding inside of. I can only pout for this long before finding myself devoured again by the blind people, whom I’ve sworn to kill in order to free us from the torment our fathers have cast us into. Yet, I’m of a mind to tell you this. This much I owe you and I can only give it onto you as a sign of malpraxis, my little cotton baton of rods, inside each head of yours, you damned beaten to a pulp of bloodened braises pumpling notter; for you I’d mention this, there is definitely another one of a similar kin I would find myself gnawing on top the bones of, there, a symbol of sin, it’s urging me to kill you on the spot, I’ve sewed it off myself, have a go at it, you won’t die from its venom; I made sure you won’t. It’s purified with a prairie dog’s blood I siphoned out of; blood group AB positive, I wager, with which you should be able to drink the poison straight shot, empty it to a little more than an unnecessary defueled brat’s poise! Don’t think too much, empty it! Empty it, I tell you!’

‘I will do no such thing! I won’t do it and you cannot force me! I’m afraid you’ve made this, this trap, yeah, this trap, personally, inside the train, you’ve made it to kill me and to have my blood prevail on top the darkened clouds that enter my eye still, I see not a way through reason or what’s to be called, otherwise swollen as well forgotten!’

Giant beetle-head with a horn instead of an eye, the other bigger, wider, his head an ugly pot; neckless but looked about to eat its own body, large incisors shaped like man-cocoons devouring its own body, whereas the body was like that of an infant with an arm, with pea-drained out of all energy, completely, mass, armless, legless, appendageless ‘limbs’, trying to make him drink the poison.

‘There’s a lot of room to move in, isn’t there?’

‘It sure is, and there’s going to be a lot more if you’d only have a gulp of my special sutured out the body gully! I wage and shall still but tell nobody of what’s been had, said and exchanged in this place. It could be dangerous, you know? Releasing too many of the poisonous hormones, all at the same time, with so many victims trying to get a gulp and a reaction out of me. It never crossed my mind you could get hurt. Look; Fish-Rotten Pour-Cotton Erick, I’m the barman, the waiter. This is for you!’

‘Piss off already wretch! I shall have none of your poison nor spirits for as long as I still have two legs that shall carry me from one side to the other of this dark slackened upon world, in which my parasites still lay inside of. I see a dead corpse flying out the window, can you?’

It looked. While distracted, Erick but threw the poison off the other side of the window into one of the growling moving along mountainous formations. Red and reddened as if bloodied and much worse than that, they were peculiarly inclined in weird directions, stalks of the kind that lowered one another and raised each other to such levels of ladder-like protrusions that they had been or had become wildly innocuous in terms of how wicked they were or how wicked they've become. A kill yourself sign. Sigh:

'I think I shall sleep with one of the bed-rotten canal-eaters, they shall warm me with their comfort Dark-Galore, or I shall eat their livers during the sleep-walk call, when the spirits and the ones possessed, if they're as real as I thought them to be, or have presented themselves as, will come to vision, will come to stay, and dark-away, damp shall be the day they'll cut a piece of this dark regard I've left behind my passing!

'Who is it you're talking to?

As I've beseeched you see and seek no reason to comply through such comfort as manifold, and deep derail, and therefore trail a sock on top and deep inside your mouth, if you know what's good for you from this point on, zip it! I'm need of a moment's make a call, for such foundation would not stall me to know or wait or wager or stray away! I'm poisoned with gulps of eating part of Human wager!'

'You cannibal!'

'Zip it I said so!'

And the phone gulley-gulp, the ship-shaped canoe fish that drew out of the bodily lowered side of this unnaturally dark formation only allowed for no second's stroll until, right after:

'Hello, hello, who is it that I'm speaking to? I'd like to know, and I'll have but a single simpleton's call, to have come onto the brow of the end of each other's snap if snapper's woe's still to come. Who shall follow me once I open the side of this wagon's brow?'

And it opened the door, and many of the poor illimitable men that were harpied by elongated backs whose wings were their twins, conjoined but with no eyes. Within a minute it was crowded. The Sun? Dissected by someone widely contorted and sought after, darted, sucking on the bloody entrain! Beating at the strange wronged little puffs of dark flails; most of whom were attached to chains, by which dark fiends of men, the coloured, the niggers were carried and lowered still.

'Where are we headed towards?'

Cut-in the line, there was no one yet as mildly benigned as the one on the other side who looked at the receptor still confused, almost as much as the one much-obtuse who looked back at Erick in shock!

'What have you done you little rascal? I blame it all on you, for you're the reason my life's been filled with the worst of deep sinew and the river's pain and high methane, which shall kill me eventually, need I remind you so?'

'I've known of it for some time now but, you know, I've never truly considered it a threat! You've done things to me while I was asleep, haven't you?'

'How?'

'I knew it for some time now. You've removed my lower side of the body! I'm attached to a giant fluid cylindrical tube I can only assume as being the only reason I'm still living.

How, how could you possibly think I would not observe such a change? I'm but filled with squirming black wires and gizmos and all kinds of unnatural things I cannot lay an eye away or off of. Did you truly think me daft?'

'Are you in need of still to ask, as one might have it seen or heard?'

The other men that were ugly and were deformed and harpied by their kin visioned their eyes from one side to another, across the room, where a nigger, a died for nothing nigger, dyed as well, needlessly said, a cheap paint-job of blue, eyeless, on the cotton porch then put on the ceiling, with nails holding him elongatedly stretched. What's he looking at if he's got no eyes?'

'Shall I disturb your company perhaps? You sure there's no way for me to add it in?'

'Add what in, Erick? You are diseased, you need your upper-height, the one that ain't right replaced! Immediately before it started spreading in and away, like disease in New Orleans, where I picked these niggers like cattle and I whipped them like boys! And.

I had to cure you from this suffering. I had to cure you of your humanity, of being a humanoid. You're much better off this way!'

'And what of them? What of the others? Are you to change each harpied man in here as well?'

'As long as the steam infects us, then it shall be done. It's like poison to the body, for it changes it too quickly for a normal life for any normal life-form that could possibly have it shall not endure such a thing on the long run, you know that, right?'

You've experienced it yourself, on your own skin not too long ago!'

Road-bumps on the rails, they whooped it up and down, flung it right around before an onset of a few unnaturally; seen, and drought was the one brought to death; as the corpse joined the room, a pirate that stole from the jellies a single glowing sceptre named Sarcophagi's lot.

'Ruler of the Patch, you've seen it with your eyes, have you not? Long before kilt, long before joining in this ride, this train; I'll settle with just as much as I'll but have!'

'We were killers, criminals with toothless grins to which were added incisors come out of strange-ship cargoes that delivered cannibalistic little pegs of little numbs and rum-bottles we used to drown out sorrows. There were no tomorrows for as lightly as they were taken for, none the matter would suffice, to say the least, comrades; but out camaraderie was something so benighted in terms of how disgusting it's been forced into the convolution that was out heartless mind decline, that we're still of a mind not to ask for who and none too blind to ask for more, I bestow upon you only a fraction of the brow I found, upon the emptily forlorn deep shores, mesmerizingly be-gone and turned to storm and tatter vests; the ones I found upon the bodies of the ones I myself have eaten pieces off would find no urge to empty the cattle I've yet to endure a moment more, or so forlorn a second to adore what little musk is left; I can only gratify this, lest you could forgive this intrusion!'

A little tetragon of spiels drew forth to his voice's light. It shone upon them, as they were inside the Garden of such-delight!

A few knifed men were standing around him, surrounding his plea of little limbs, lingering appendages and the broad, dame, the whore, fucking bimbo, that was retarded, as all women are; she was a dumb-fucking cunt:

‘Oi, I am a cunt, and a dumb cunt at that, thatatatatatatatatatata Thatat that!’

‘Broad, you better get my dinner ready or I will drive your fine behind and the side of your head into the nearest wall, after which, I will start beating you as hard as I can and you won’t like it if I do it, for when I do it, then there’ll be hell to pay for the cleaning bill that’s come to after, I am the master of this house and you are the whore Moister!’

The Universe already died. I hate niggers; stop, please, mind!

‘My brain is corrupted, filled with a disease I cannot get myself rid of! It is disgusting and disturbing as well!’ ‘Here, here, I think this should do you some good.

My gut is poison and I am one of the lower Stars of Darkness.’

It said, with its many star-singed brothel fat cones coming out of its puffy humanoid chest; an Armenoid whore had been killed for him to enter through the tract of lesser, lesserly digestion, mawing with incisors-teeth, many drawing at the feet of the little crow’d-s little point of blackened ashes, digested trances and the littler heads that had been erected out of pain and wreathing as they did away, there was time begun again, for only a prattle.

‘I have served my betokened to command brother since the day’s come to handle slither’s come onto the mighty falter, yet I’m still besooked as to be akined to ask. Where to and what have they done to me while I was asleep?’

‘For what is worth, and what is ill-inclined to be endowed onto you, from this point on and what’s to come after, I alone would like to add to the addendage that’s been ripped and ripe as your chest benigned, as to forlorn and emptily disorientated as to scorn whatever’s lustre, I would beckon you inclined as you are, as you must as you must carry on this road, forbidden knowledge passed along the way and forget what’s been had and haddened, unless you want your memory ripped clean and empty on a whim; discern what little’s lap might grow. The empty cone of gelatine snow; of bloodened ripe; to which I’ve nothing to decline or add, but to’ve stilled it in place, might’ve meant, so much so that I could’ve been killed and slit, before I’d know what’s good and rightened, blessed the kind!

For those responsible for your faced mask and what’s been taken out of you, this soulless husk cannot be forgotten easily, nor endear, of empty fear, might I see no such thing as to beseech!’

‘Yet your hands are as bloody as my very own feet.’

‘That you from this point on are in a lack of!’

Many of the fewest Termites of the Turpentine Tube-window Lesser God-Drones of Michel John Boot-leg with a single blue ultramarine pigmented eye from fifteen years ago he got from some war in Iraq while during some conflict started by some startled Talibans in which he happened to be there and a part of, they threw a blue-popper in his eye, like an oyster grenade they shot the kidneys off in his eye, think them niggers would throw off a land-line before passing off some of their Kool-Aid? Didn't think so, but he was a result of that pantomime of little rafts and racks and shooting here and there and hand-grenade kill myself-kind of ratio being included in the puckery bomb-plant in, babe-Y inside the World Trade Side-of De-centred; he, he had a blue eye, a blue fucking eye; like crayon drawing pictures of Aryan Eyes, but low-quality, trash, the worst, my God but not in the kind of take his name in vain kind of invoking the name of, Alabaster, pus, and appendages sprouting out of the cellophane building's room in which he stood by the side of since they were smoking, the Termites of John.

I dream of murder and blood!

Born into the lot that never forgives those that stole a leftover snout from the pile, and bile surroundings corn-flakes of puffs and puckers of lust that would come after, after dark, during the blooming of blue, on the ground, the lord of Alabaster, killer; only in name; opening the gates inside his chest, only to refrain from displaying further affection.

A remorseful thing that could only bring the pain so much farther than the manifold counterlain upon the ANtrichamber's deep hived-lust.

'That one, that one right over there, it won 't movv-for some reason,. I can't tell why. Perhaps you could help in! clarifying ! This ! iSsue!'

'Are you choking my lord, my sir, the speak of beads and needles?'

'I'm dying of a stroke and suffering no less than needed, wretch of many cowls. I cannot wait a second more for reasons that might be unknown to you, lest besekt to try the same!'

Rape never to be had, unless pronounced; for miles above and the ones that come after, temple-brought upon the end of puffy lobes; the anchor that kept them moving also drove the bile away.

'Next bus' stop isn't coming any sooner than this.'

'Leave piss blood water! - Wrote mother!

Who writes these things?'

'IF you don't like it, you could simply wipe it off.'

Another perilous wretched regiment started grinding their broken gums off the Ghedur-pliers.

'Bottle spins again, and yet.'

A weather-spun cockatrice dangled from above with the man.

Cross-bolted Eurpyr comes from above; he stands thinking of no less of a reason than the one that's been carried on and exchanged, a reason not to kill her, the maiden, whose breasts untold and yet yearned to be exposed by anger, to have been ripped and ripe as they've been held, beheld, and untouched for thirty five years since the day she's been birthed, then locked in the citadel of no powerless incline, where the many agitators had her almost skinned; yearned for to be sent in trunks and little plain things that were, very much, unnatural boxes; that would, under all contamination's brink, to have been called within reason and since, eaten, by all parties to which they would be sent to. Such treason, might, it might serve some people with as little a mind as they would fancy it, right.

'She's suffered enough, has the Grail not held her accountable for what's to be regarded as no man's truce with himself, as such abuse would only brink in destruction's Eve, mistrust?'

'Nay, Pitty-Forlorn Tent. You, you are of a mind to spare the women of all accounts and all that would make her bring ruin upon a man's folded tower, and therefore snore when she'll cast you away. Think about it for a second before you bring yourself upon the brink of destruction. Such contemplations upon partly crossed stairs and the ones that would follow soon after, do they come at a price and are they indeed worthy of such despair as you've fancied yourself a part of?'

'Not that I would think much worth it, but listen to me now, before all sense leaves you!'

'Or before the woman's drowned!'

Ah, the wretched dregs got a hold of her. They leaped out of nowhere's dark abode, and within the moment's lost, they almost, or as it happened, it almost came at the cost of her dearly succumbed to brothel of a life, foretold, forlorn; seen to it that she would not move. What agony, indeed, to see her beg for mercy, soon bothered by such retrieve, for neither man would make a move to save the poor maiden, despite retort. And despite that, the unnaturally dark fiendish figure that had lain in the dark until this point on, with its many mandibles open; agitators be called weary of sightened stare; and holding many of the chains that were still attached to her, in part, since he was the leash-holder, slaver, the master, the edifice of many unnatural girths that could only bring the destruction of air and air-tents that were held within the hour's mount, and mounted girth that drew within. A manifold of many whims, and leaping bull-frog giant fleshy bags it carried on its back. It bore it body on a giant tail. A beast-humanoid with exposed ribs and four great heads sticking out of them like snails' eyes that expanded in the weirdest way possible. A conical thing that snared itself within and beneath some room's temperature's exposure of diamond-sharpened long green flashy dark exposure cysted blobs it pushed out from beneath its chest with the help of some of its free appendages, which were immediately released from its coach-shell, in the back, where it store the openly exposed for great coffins it held on all sides; inside of which, emptiness rang to some abyss that was lost in the dark. A slither of puffs, coats of rust and grim coal being released soon after. Both Tent and Eurpyr being as disturbed as anyone whose raft swollen anchor came upon falsetto barn's entry come down caster; right after, niggardly as it protruded out. A blasphemous thing as it were, or had been numbed upon coming in the light, for either one of them to beseek a sightened stare upon its magnificent beauty, still distorted after dark. For the chest-errand gallantry that held the lantern cones of light –almost, in sight, these being the four heads that expanded in billions of smallish; but seemingly broken into pieces, reeds and smaller heeds of cones and plenty bones of light-succumb; they were pulling all the meat from the bones until this wretched cabin of a spine wretch, of a bone-bearing thing it were showed signs of losing meat on the tail. It was odd. It looked like, it looked like they were swindled for a stare. They thought this tail had been but a spear, to which, against, then thrust and seen after, the torso might've been impaled; yet it had not been the like. Instead, this trifle of some unnatural thing was instead, like an organ that had grown from inside. The awkward peculiarity being the fact that it looked like the humanoid ribcage had been lodged inside the tail, not close in kin to some Gorgon but instead a snake eating from inside a buffet; deeply engorged in his activity, by all means of no use or little much more than, as it been obtuse. But the couch-shell, which was fully wide and open, and appeared to be holding the coffin 'gates' as if they were fluttering wings had a hole in the front that was connected to the tubular giant-fat tendon-broach that entered through the neck of the 'torso', which held all the appendages grown out of it, outwards as if it were, in all actuality, in possession of a lot of skin tags. Albeit some of the cysted blobs did show up from beneath; that is to say with the aid of the appendages; the ribcage torso humanoid livid-device. A peculiar thing; how it managed to hold this great floating gloating structure in the air. Yet, this shell of a man might've been naught but some hardened insect attached to this snake-coach; with the four great heads being nothing but some, but some play at their nerves.

'Shall we begin a conversation as to see whom shall betoken such a need to be aware? Or be told of what might be sullenly slouched upon the chamber's counterlain?'

'The chamberlain abhorred me long before we even met, my dear friend, and I think that's but his servant calling onto us to stop once again and forget we ever existed, to begin with, since, she's of no use to him any more than we are, not that I would or could complain about what's happening here.'

Out of fear of offending the slither of man, the darkness that came ahead and the growths that formed the great bulk of the three carapaces of green, yellow and some ugly purple that made the entrapment of the room they were in, they were silent for a second, then resumed.

'You stand here by the likes of borrowed time, you seek a reason not to be blinded, or have your eyes pulled out!'

And the creature leaped as soon as it could, right across the side of the cave, nearest to where there was an ugly reeling in and out head, with many ugly, nasty, filthy crane-empty droughts; where the sand-pit had begun, where the holes came in and out, where escape was feasible to one and everyone instead. To them, what might be told here and there-again; leave no more, the parcel's paced upon little bodies being carried on their backs.

'What is this travesty I'm being exposed to?'

'Naught but some empty sound, and the sound of the sea's coming from the North!'

Somewhere, farther in the distance, what would be referred to as, some, some emptiness deeply elated, and elating to the senses. For only they would bring such remark to open wounding; would to be and deeply sinking; yet again in lust. All would be forgiven if they'd save the lass.

'These cannibal-rapists, they're aware that she's a virgin!'

Said the one head that drew back; of course, an insect, what else could it be if not, impossible, empty willen-had!'

Days pass uncannily so. There's a reed and a rack, there's a whip and a crack'; snapping-snapped, on nigger's back. I am the boy's master, I cannot help myself today. I'm judged for many people for some reason, yet, I yearn to be administered some empty crane-head.: - Written by the man of the house! The man of the house! He needs a woman, he is desperate for a woman. But he cannot talk to her. Talking to women is hard, talking to humanoids is difficult. It is an impossible task. Somehow, hardly would there be a matter to forget. Hardly would one forget what it once meant to be erect at the sight of a finely breasted, big, giant, impossible to carry without a strain on her back, the sight of a fleshy-tall blonde, taller than the man, dwarfing him at a ratio of two to one. Her fine features borderline resting on his chin and head. Ah, this beauty, if only I could speak to her. If only I had a voice to heed my wont and guts, to tell her what I feel, and forget, forget about what once meant for me to be alive!

‘Are we to stand here, the three, or six of us, or seven if the leprous snake coach if but one!’

‘Tent, might you not forget that there are four empty coffins in there as well? Four for them, four, the heads, eight, with us two as well, ten, as we outnumber the savages, I think we stand the lot!’

We could save the poor broad and ensure she’s not to be raped after that!’

But they had not settled the dispute with the one most benumbing wretch of empty there, no cure! Meat and tenderizer stoves were being brought, with tall heads and most unnaturally a dark wax figure that followed; looked inhumane!’

‘Chamberlain’s pet dog, is she not your slave? Are you to waste time and see her gain but empty marks of maim across her body stripped?’

‘I am into it!’

‘Ah, but there’s no reason for us to see such sight, not since there are things we would rather have that could not be gotten far, and after track.’

The wax-figure was made out of the bodies that were put through the boiler and allowed to melt into the most unnatural of dark concoctions that followed straight through the furiously distraught gulley of disease that could, or very much so appear to be in such a villainous-vile disposition, as one would be opposed to interfering with, or could, if opportunity allowed, make a wild move that would ruin the bunch and ruin their thrust, upon, word to you, my dear friend; nigger, nigger- kill, I need to. They were, he. A wax ruination of blood, furiously clotted with disease; they had only got it from one of the sufferers of the juggling snot that came in.

Poor Tent had leaped on top the lady; from across the pyramidal cavern and only allowed himself a second less’ to spare a breath, as he gazed upon her cheery eyes, as she only tainted the bowels of a rottenly forlorn disguise; as this could not be helped, ever less and ever so.

‘Master of no wont and candour; shall we see, and sightened, less disastrous rottenly a Pastor?’

Such words would only count as meaningful to few. But he had a gun. And they were frightened by the sight of it, especially since he pointed at her, instead of them, at that.

‘I intend on killing this woman unless you all take a few steps back. Carry on, go on or I shall dearly claim all of your lives, twas fold, as they’ll be vanquished!’

Silence trembles, empty varnish, forgot to paint the room; twas a cheap-obol, hobble of the hobo, fucking whores!

A cab dropped her off but she barely noticed it because of the numbness that had entered her from the lower left side of her ribcage that was exposed to the little puffy aluminium foiled flashy, armoured by black cage-iron corrugated scrape-bars:

‘I think I’m going to be dropped off the next side of the reef, if you don’t mind. I could never wrap my head around either of those things, you know?’

Bloodened sight and bloodened right, of what apparel would’ve been deceit. It came to waiting for the door to open, a single thing that would’ve found itself forsaken, broken and exchanged to the likens of a simple filthy mace that sprayed, on their bodies and to follow after, past the reigns where they’d to breed. Another door opened and she was welcome in.

‘My sister, you, whom I’ve.’

‘Mister, there’s a woman in your cab!’

The man looked round the rear-view mirror, only for a moment as the shock settled in. A dead-cut broad dirt-filled hoe resting by the side of her body to which she was attached. A corpse gray ash-look to her, with empty sockets, out of which a tiny bloated elongated blob, oblongish-with her look-a-like twisted round nakedly imprinted body flashing at him as she revealed no humanoid reproduction organs but another bulbic face at the other end that squirmed as she was warmed on by naught else but the most insatiable of the filthy, filthier brothel rods that drew out of the body-prod.

‘I know kid. Do me a favour and keep the run will you? I know how to handle road-skipppers.’

Two heaps of wife-beaters waiting in line to berate him as they’d drive her four to five feet beneath the ground where this wretch belonged in. No remorse could do enough. They were watching from the other side of the window, inside the mansion; with little to no regard to what was happening around them; a drop of a phony and a little alabaster flash coming from the other side; playing with the continuously stretching lantern past the trenches, screaming Jolt:

‘Come in mister, come inside the house. You’ve dropped the pretty lady to her death while stopping here and the night she won’t survive it. Unless you step forth and drag her back!’

‘What’s wrong with you hooligans today and your little puffs of smoke and tilt?’

There was no answer ever-still!

It crawled upon a giant globe of nigh-cobweb coloured iron, made to be a wheel, the Earth, on top of which a lower-jawless girth of many tendons kept its head pinned in place. Two fat arms drew out of it, and appeared to be flailing around the breath. Rottenly but eyeless on one side, that was its shoulder-blade welded in half of its face, benigned in a bar that was attached to the spinning sphere on top of which it rested. An ugly head it was, rotten, but crested with many strange devicery pins that allowed it to move akin to its servant that it followed. Sluggish in appearance, and almost falling apart like a dead man walking, caught in sight by a drooping stance, a hunchback with little arms coming out of him now, that he had eaten along the way. It blocked the access to the one way street. As it raised its top-half mouth it spat on the ground a large cradle of rocks, chunks it had coated in its saliva of globes; like bacteria bulbs or egg-sack looking, they rested and grew but corkscrew rooted; so they remained in place. A pane of tinier blobs that sang and reigned:

‘I beckon you to stop what you’re doing here and entreat a simple flaundry of mischievment that I may look and bear sight upon a fashion’s trifle to’ve endured no less during my stay, your lordly sight be met, upheld and held still while I’m still of a thought not to despair of what’s been stolen, brought and sightened upon the trance you have fancied me forlorn and spoiled as yet to follow, deep-enchanted, for this unsatisfying fight I’ve been exposed to, my dear sister, is something that cannot be darted no sooner, nor less, than the distress of ages might’ve allowed me such an ounce a’moment that I may look yonder as to recuperate, since your entreaty bears just simple siphon, such andante!’

‘Yee a witch and a whore of a slubber, and I seek sisterhood no more of likened kin!’

And their slackened satiated lips were met but quickly repressed back into their places. For God was standing behind them; pointing a gun at her temple. Twas certain to’ve begun by now, yet they were resting by the throttle-brow of a single lampoon of waiting people of different lots. Put together, emptily brought to such surroundings as they would see if fit, by common sense, to latch abandon and therefore end the relationship of apparition and come onto the dykes of broth. Empty spaces, the house floating after dusk settled in:

‘Wretch thou art, as we have been betrayed, no doubt about it, seek no pray for the time being’s converted lay, from therefore after.’

Two candles of pus-rot

To have’ve been come onto the brow of the stop, amidst the undercoming and the undergoing, by the time’s last tick of a round, when all there is to know is run was when he ran and died. When the thunder cried, and when his hope in vain had wilt been gone;’s the reason, for why they were there.

‘What is that I hear?’

But there were naught of else betoken tooled, for such’s pantry to’ve befallen onto their kin, were they robbed and were they faulty to be told. That what little was there of the men that fell, the ones that had endured talking to the boisterous brats that had entered and cruel as were they by the time they sailed, hinder and away, though meaning might be lost. A bloated candour, fallaciously disjointed in terms of reprimand, was there no hope to the sullen and to the ones whose cries were laughter. To chopped, rotten and the poor; the ones that lost allure; all had gathered and were cured; for ailments were plenty broughtened-had; around each corner, for the ones that had been known to last. Plenty of which in peril for the ones that sprouted from monsoons; whose faces were plain with evil and all too, venison might be cut, entreaty fur; oft, leper, the winter’s come and autumn’s gun. Which shot, alarmingly wildly, for the ones in the distance were never to be had; prior to the making, prior to the quiet, when and after, was there no end to the wilt that had been wilt be-haddened, saddened to each throng that came. When and when to move again; for as they moved, they were as frightened to be, lest away and quick endure, stay, remain, be stilled in their seats as they were quickly enough wilt to be stopped. Cannibals of their wills were made at last. And not a sign, from halted sky. From anywhere their priceless hope distilled benigned. For us, whom were in trees were spoken, to thine maiden's pity, provoked, bethroval.

'I shall yet see your body rot, until my hope shall be ebbd into the one piece of the sky that still belongs to me. Look, out there, what I've taken and what little there is left. I need to speak to the captain, who stole each heart, robbed me of my fate, grabbed what little powder was there in his keg and threatened to himself's fate benigned, to try upon entreaty, thine, and thine is the mark that shall come and rapier to the swerving.'

For the chalice he had in his chest, cast inside him, still he bled. Left a trail, so far and wide, and he could trace, all the way back, the way upon the kingdom's blind. A languor of no little prattle's grind, with each finger that was lost along, here, there, anywhere, being of no truce; nothing that no mind could abhor to reproduce, unless the boisterous bodies, manifold upon the taking, blinded by the making, child of little hope; cut and chopped and forlorn in time, bespoke. Was there no more, but blinded lay there, in such turn, a little more than he and he was long-cracked and spilled in fire's broke, the brook singing. The singer's blade and therefore sleigh, of little mind to cast away. But in the quiet's making would there be no stench, no treaty to be signed, and nothing more than an empty, little inconsequent body of no stretch than eight five hundred miles, a giant that had been cut down as his waste and allowed from out of him to sprout, many a likened to his body and face and growths, all of which were added in some angular spear that cast a blooded by many spools, strange figure that was faced by four stars-coming out of his antennae-like mantis-head but with billions of bulbic eyes, as if these were spore-makers, flashing with flesh, allowing entry from the outer-grinding stone-like, but filled with smaller figures, like that of some tiny culprits with wings in their ear-encompassing bloated hive-ringed worm-figures that only gave the impression of being made of ears but ate clouds and spat blood-people, whose clot fell apart when they entered water. Running and pacing in circles, confused like schizophrenics; with tubes attached to their blood-guns with which they were born with.

'Thine drink of mead and iron-sullen, sulking yet benigned by men of lowry slither's worth and candour, lest betokened you come after, ask again for piece of bread, and those twas' had been given forth to you that you may sink your teeth and breaded-bed, of piece-rot with mould, to've been choked by it wilt've mean meant for blooded-cold, and slither of forlorn cast eve, back and forth, and chokingly abhor, what little pastry can be held to you; unless agape by all the evil-due to've become come forth again, as prior errands disembowelled whatever stare, oft and forth, allure of kindness lend upon you, which you have forced in errandry dissect, diffuse of minded solace breath of cowl, thickened by the turpentine towel, as blood 'uz gushed down, and oat's become but blooded by the crown of your partaking, kindness returned benigned, that which you have cast away with him returned, and to thine poultry meat, there shall only come but grind, until no bone shall be left, delivered onto his poach, his parcel, slithered, whether it be in many pieces or in one baton made to be erect upon the sight, I cannot say. But the least that I can do is sit here while you gush upon a crime that willen 'had itself returned benigned onto you as follows. I would cherish whichever moment's last respite forlorn, and the one that follows true and crone; shall be made of your mother, as she will be thrown into husbandry withdrawn, for I shall kill your father, by means of destitution and by means, employed much so, with the help of a gun. A rifle of the kind, with that I shall kill me, murder, murder, murder, cry; and cries of laughter shall be held only by those who'll have to bend down above you to make out the form, that ugly thing that you've become, unprovoked, or had-wilt yourself betokened eight times fold, as you shall be delivered from this point on, onto the other, with kin-alike and likened brother.

For I've made the necessary arrangements that are usually meant to be done in these kind of situations, since it's a bold move to draw much closer, for I've known you, sufferer, to've bitten and to bite. And to abhor all who are cast down-site and all of the surround where they dance, and leap, like paganistic heathens around a fire's heap. Whatever you've cast down-sided, and oft, betokened, humble yet forlorn be frightened by what means' abode, that which follows in your trail and hope. You might, that it shall be cruelly bestowed upon you, sightened by each fright of what's to come. Moments come and moments go.'

But he refused to aim his gun at his temple and seal the deal, or put the poor sob out of his misery, of disciple's lot, turpentine appeal. As that would only mean death of globe. A globular embrace forth-come, out of some giant gelatine cone, that spoke in tongues with him.

'Do not let him die just yet. Finger a wall and pull out the tap of many-a-face, that something might be done to him when no longer wilt's he breathing past the trunk. Let him sink in for a moment, submerge and forth-come, so much so, succumb. Whatever twas's s's had mean to meant no longer from this point on, provoking!'

And it spat gelatine-blood on his blood, forming clot-wings with faces and with large legs sprouting from the side, that all kept giant long-men inside of them, squirmingly benighted by the giant exposure-walls filled with squirming things that moved around. Like cavern-melted but like candles- bricked by tortoise-shell like plated brownish-dirty muck-filled covered in tendon-like pseudo lichens that adorned them on every side, and around, everywhere, rather, set on sight, these walls, these walls looked like praying hands that had been pried apart, drawn apart and pushed in opposite directions but infested with tapeworms that had grown and fattened, inflated-like balloons until were forced to be like humanoid men caprice leashes, whips and the likes.

'Cancer-niggers, cancer-niggers!'

Wishful-drawn, a lot that was corrugated by much-to-itself-provoke withdrawn:

'Is that the light I carry forth to the choking singer?'

For the light that came from one of the bulbs, that which lowered itself onto his chest pulled all the bread out, forcing it through gusts of air, those that were heated, and he prevailed. Standing on his two stubby toes, which had devoured and assimilated his feet right up to his ankles, there he stood. A dancing devil, misunderstood.

'In search for a muse, I wager?'

'Where's the maiden hidden, that whore, that whore, if I'm not mistaken, she is but of a lot belonging to miss-brought to dark sewage-quarrel!'

And they had long bespokened to the likes of disembowel, for it was rude. And rudeness-prude alike. A poster, a poster of the USS Liberty Incident, accompanied by pictures of the Jews, the Jews that were in the Congress and who slowly worked towards the destruction of the United States. Henry Ford's International Jew, The Greatest story never told, The Protocols of the Elders of Zion, The real numbers detailing Jews that died of nothing else but Typhus during the second world war, documented by the Red Cross, and the Holocaust didn't happen, being only some of the many books that were put on top a desk-stand. There were also books documenting Blood Libel, the crimes they committed throughout history, their involvement in Slavery, Porn Industry, the Dryffeus affair, Israelis dancing during nine eleven, the Rothschilds and their shady business, how they manipulated Churchill into selling out his country for money and his warmongery and what not; how the jews keep stealing money from American tax payers in order to fund their in-human kike state, Israel. Books detailing the paedophilia the jews keep getting away with, especially in Hollywood, how they're molesting kids, the media being controlled by them, how they're trying to bastardize the white race and mix them with niggers. Their control of the academia, their involvement in the Bolshevik, and the Menshevik Party; the massacre at Holodomor, the trannies; he was extremely well-read on the subject, as any man ought to be.

Horn-there-Rib, the crying cage

In a giant's half cut through there stood a maze, they had call none other but the bunker, or what had remained of one of them, still cut. A bloated red miasma brought to their nostrils only what the crimson petals' deep miss-brought to their tusks, the once carried forth during ancient day's gone deeply abhorred past; it showed what little had remained by mere glance, there-come after.

'Open the door, I'm in need of a heart.'

The permutation of aridity allowed for plants to grow in bodies end.

We were met by father's sons, whom were both standing on chairs, without their heads. It was unnatural, yet we looked at them for hours. Sitting in the only chamber, in the only place there had remained no one's deep's end call. A giant conically thin at its further at the top distorted end, but thicker at its base, like some antennae sticking out of a bloated pie, its tip being a spear of sleighs-put together rounded, diseased was the rod as this fleshy thing only squirted, squirmed and anchored itself after. Night had come quickly, as the child of moons, surrounded by Gooks, his clavicle-slaves Salving our God, with antlers brought from corpses brought to life that followed. A bloated miasma of unnaturalness benigned only added to the strange fear they felt a trifle of, but could not explain it at all. Michael-Fellinfoy-rnkillnigger drew forth into the room and started yapping:

'What this sleigh of lotched-uniwise? The titillating crowd of leper's gone and there-around what little quiet's been distilled?'

'I have eaten my sons and I have made love since, with them.'

'Of course with them and not with I, for I would've abhorred such thing benigned!'

'I see only wretchedness anchor in a box, a boil in the other, and a small hare-mined but brought through means of rancor. How could I ever hope for such trifle come belief to spare away? '

A man made out of cotton started turning into fire as the dead children came to life, momentarily so, gripped the poor fool, played with him, played with snow, uncouth and be not known to them, for what ail-ness of the mind, what little cotton-blind, had become part of the fire. Then they fell black like ashen coals, rotten with their father's cottage being brought thrice fold into the fray of a littler than thou art, a-saying. They had eaten gut after gut, contemplatively. For they had not known what to do.

'Rod of darkness after brought? What's been taken and what's been had?'

But there was no edible answer, at least not one that could easily be put into the towel they shared. In that empty room, they had erected bodies and put them into the lamp, in the middle, in anger, in Spanish fly fever, feverishly declined as they had the anger had benighted their sense, and they were well endowed with the means of war. Tools of rot, bodies brought, and in the end, this, this was something that could never properly be had. It was too senseless.

'Seneca's parted role, the one that had occasioned us to think that he may've had a soul had little sense in what was dire!'

All of those failed reincarnations. All of those failures; they're; they're;staring at me; they are; staring at; me';,.-;!!!; ahh,m,-- hmm-, 's there.

A lamp in the darkness light a ligh-lub camp, but the conditions are windy, saying:

'There's the forest I've been yearning for a sight, a trifle after that.'

The room it was in was fifty by forty five, eighteen meters tall, with a corrugated- by many welded, thrust into each other like charging chariots that interconnected in the same way a volcano would erupt but inwardly as if the eruption drove downward, and the sky, with its air was suddenly become lava, with the people in the helicopters slowly being roasted alive, despite the expectation of them being suddenly evaporated, they have to suffer because I'm cruel and mentally ill, fucked up in the head; pointing at my own head -finger guns, pop-pop, you wish I did, naughty-lad; I'm coming onto you; Florence, the city is under siege. Submerged with pain and fell faces, arms and other limbs, frozen then fleshed into the water as the water's become organic, out of which, this having become his house, emerges Clasp-Tro-Nbunhleyt.

'Caster Bundle-hate, is that you I see?'

'But my good sir, my real name is Clasp-Tro-Nbunhleyt!'

'Such's vergus, time to go.'

On a Sunday-scutch, the years snow; fifth-fifteen, when the welders' pin of bones drew from around the ground. Everyone who's been drowned remained alive during intermitted conditions.

Many of the bodies lay brokenly washed up near the city's stone floor drowned below, down-pointing as it were, on a crude curve; with a little fan of people curved together, tug-of-warring in a cone-spread, their hands with them, a rope-ear-tonguish blot with tiny grabbable wrist-thorn, without tips, as thick as humans, grabbed as handles, whereas they pulled with mighty strength, the others drew and drew away, awry-back and forth thinking of what might follow through, of what might follow after through the carpet of sinew, beneath them, lain to see, leaped on top of it, death and gone awry! Far too many of them were of no mind to understand what was going on, nor would they try, petrified in quiet, dancing with the macabre disquitude brought by ever sights:

‘Call the shot, I’ve yet to hear one of them know what’s going on.’

There was no reason to pry in or to understand where the confusion came from. Only the flood that fell from some apartment, thrown out the tingling window soon after. It was that blasphemed upon dire-man that was making all that hardy noise but never spoke to anyone whenever from his deep slumber it so happened for him to rose out of.

Many of the slithers of the moon sufficed.

There was a dampness of spores she had failed to notice nibbling at her fingers, as they were only superficially inserted in her uterus, while no one in their presence minded her being raped violently and volatile blood erupting from the gushing wound allowed for a growth of many appendages kept together by a foamy bubbling gas-like rounded with bubbly-cloud lumps –mass of tendons, flesh, livid chitinous-but-soft round-arounds that formed on the spot to come into existence, whereas its sudden apparition did attract the initial attention, it had evenly, there-after allowed for sight to be lain upon the very strange wall-like formation it foamed itself into, with her being kept in-encapsulated, albeit this imperfect wall had not only been chipped and broken through, but it appeared as if it kept her hanging a few feet above the ground, ever-much so that the appendages would begin a live-open, in the broad-daylight surgery to commence, as to be sutured together, arms and spare parts, organs and as such being harvested on the stop by the same aforementioned appendages that extended and elongated, wincingly, unnervingly sprout-through, shot-like spears, into the fray, where, they, all of the sudden, rapiers of hardened drills sprouting pincer-through their tips, hornets and wasps’s stingers having chopped off a leg or two, only to bring it to her, suturing her almost nigh-fallen apart body back together before finally withdrawing into the small slither of a cut inside of her they had emerged out of her, with the rapist being lain on the ground still, since he’s been knocked down by accident and nothing less of a sub-concussive blow having altered his brain structure and Phenotype, having left or caused a dent on his forehead and top of the skull-through which blood, lopsidedly, inundated the brow of a river he was but sitting on top of soon after, since she decided it was the perfect opportunity to gouge his eyes out, poke him with a ice-pick iron-bolted by, in the hundred, rodded tiny-meticulously placed around of by, fragmented, but longer at their tips, leashes with facial features spread around, this being a tiny ‘one-road’ interconnected with various other entanglements, maze of leashes, or ‘quasi-frozen’ North Pole filled with poles, fleshy bands that had homunculi fleshes inside of them, most of whom formed isosceles triangles, nostrils being connected to some pole by some uglier iron-chains of bone sprouting out of them as piercings would, or some eye shooting an iron beam in another pole, or some finger splitting around the nail, in a hatching out pupae-kind of a way, out of which another finger sprouted out of like some butterfly, connecting to another pole, and these strange almost PUNISHMENT picks were the ones holding the fleshy band, or bands-that-were-stitched together, depending on how you look at it, since they’re a visual mess for the outsiders, who are uninitiated in the arts of war, as I am, who’d fail to see that what held them together was but a two-sided club, with two human-nasty rotten old men faces and their bodies, and their fetal position contorted into each other’s arms, facing each a different way, on the top-most size, the iron-picks being their hairs, and they held these crown of a sort like encrusted spaghettis in forks, whereas the opposite side of this club, which was their throne, was attached to a spear-long shaft, of about eighteen centimeters or twenty eight, thick, thicker than both of her arms put together, which was like a broken tree, that had been crushed apart and filled with a multitude of nail-driven in to the point of being bloodily ripped apart during the process, scratchings, that were pseudo-insect crawling in her skin, legs, cutting in deeper and deeper as they fed on her, deep-driven succumbed, like syringes.

Her ankles were sticky-numbered by succumb-melt to her partner's brow which disallowed her continuous forward-descend. Evil eyes were onto her, but the men in the crowd beckoned her to stop for a moment as their backs were also drawn into the nearest building's front wall to which they were become a part of. Part of the moon as well, that, upon being split in half by pornography, in essence, stooped the lowest it had then, the lowest it had been in the entire history of humanity, a cracked in-half egg shell pointing at the clouds, cutting them in half as it allowed them to bleed onto it, with all the honor it needed to begin bleeding dry again. And it shot, out of its craters, since it sod like a perched baby, a blooming stone-flower that shot caterpillars below.

'There are needles on the floor, pick them up, will you?'

'I can get infected, you know? And I can feel that stench emanating from inside of your cunt all the way here.'

Said one of the men tied to the walls.

In the flash of an eye, the facial features that had been adorning the fleshy band disappeared, dispersing, slowly, albeit in a highly illuminated way, leaving behind their illusionary forms in exchange of a smaller, mesmerizingly-dancingly equipped with rows of pseudo-feet attached to the bands like oil-rig tubes, with their arms like sirens, and mouthed at each end, humanoids without heads but with giant eyes instead of them, chained-still to the poles, but rotten to the core, they tormented her no more. But she still remained a dumb-whore!

A brothel-buddle of a cauldron stood untouched, torched even by the looks of it, but didn't move at all, not even when they tried their hands around it. Some slithers of the moon followed through, a horizon of gradients, an aurora that wouldn't let go, and the sky was filled with golden lighted scythes that didn't move when the ripples were cast again the side of the river's trance; while the poultry only served as a means to help the mass. It could only listen every now and then when its ear was not cut off then thrown around, like mold-molasses.

'I say, open the door, and bring her in!'

What a travesty it was. Every house being locked, with the pillars fallen and the scepter having dropped and bequest-a-lichen's priest's prayer, had allowed her to walk carrying the folded bars that had ended up impaling her back, as she carried them, on her way back to the one of the apartments.

'I see a wager that's to be taken.

The two olds will take over her body in no time! I say!'

'Don't satiate your need for blush, bulls eye comes in deep contrast and need to die at least a dozen times until they'll take a notice of you!'

A man was stumbling-drunk, barely on his own feet, shameful:

Awakened during a coaly-errand, feet lodged inside some intermediary enter-through the door, passed out during an elementary abode-drifted reflection, hence, joined, presently by a few Gregorian statesmen, to whom he is subservient despite having taken an important, worthy of praise, an appraisal to the very finely-aged flintlock used during their disappearing in the midst of yellow-blank pages purposefully left in the annals of time, their standing being unlawfully misspoken for, during some loft-beheld auction, role in the liberation of, an act that ought've been kingly, as well as royally, handsomely rewarded, with accordance to such's n been bee-beheld for, lack of disparity, quietness serving only as a sign of the drift, between the lack and the moist-handle, he holds in his hand, sullen yet awoken by sight of them, who've parted ways, a dagger-curved along the way of his spine, betrayal like just Persephone, a fucking whore, who was not loyal to her husband, who worked hard to feed his children, take care of them, always returning home to what should've only been a lovingly caring wife, turning out to be a demoness, by the sole fault of their wretched kind, females, breasted only by the focal of God, but their treacherous nature would not allow him to touch again, desperate at every turn, where he walked, he saw them, in sight and luscious feel, tenderly tenebrous in repel and appeal, as to bleed in this peculiar, unnatural Limbo out of which he could not escape, abandoned by his allies, by his friends, his enemies now appear, pretending to be friends, yet, unknown to them, this bleeding in his solace - angel of a man who's done nothing wrong in the entirety of his life, I swear me mum, has already been conditioned to react to the betrayal of his friends, let alone would he accept the pretenders who'd betray him further, disappointed in himself, not longer a patriot, but still wearing the gross-leaking with grease, flag, at war with himself and everyone; awakened during a storm in his very chest that would not let go of his swollen, hanging by his cane with all the strength he could muster out of his dying brokenly apart body that wilt be dead or ought've been if It weren't for the refusal to flee, be it out of sight, be it not right, evil in concordance with forgetfulness of self, his stronger mind keeping his rotten, nigh-destroyed husk of what had once been something nigh-recognizable as a man; to heaven, crawl out of hell, a most deceitful haughtiness to his fright, hidden away, but cannot reveal it just yet, because enemies, they felt fear by nose, nosy-cervical shaped bodies, and they each bore eight or fifty legs, armless and their faces were large canoe-wide, pseudo-fans with fang-crowns and their eyes were extended like roots, bloated like snail-eyes, with large infant-fetus parasites drooping, flopping down; awakened by the wonder of how he's survived, while his bleeding continued, while his cried were stifled by him, by his biting down, bleeding off the lip, spat then in front of them, in order to communicate; all of whom spat lips they pissed 'n a pool they made he drank out of like a fucking dumb nigger.

Her entry into the building, as it happens:

It was a shameful display if there ever was one, to say the least, the one, most bothersome, corky thing in this quarrelsome affair that was subjugated only to an unfelt resonance that could not have had itself restored had, oft beckoned to be-told on an immediacy retorted, a prancing about being finely supposed, as to be taken as assign of the infirmity infringement of leprosy that was soon thrown out of the window, then, again, beckoned to be acknowledged by her, who was, without a doubt in as much of a trinomial abhorrence of the sort, since she could not direct this intent-driven gaze that was perforatorily incumbent on this innocuous-to be prodded into by normal means, hardisome a pseudo-corny man of the stoppage from entry into the finer part of the building, the access through which had been purposefully cut, albeit not by her reasoned, resonant to others, choice, but by a momentary cult-perspiration, a respiratory obscuring inner-breath having cut her short of any kind of asking that might help her retrieve anything from this adversary of fine traverse against which she was powerless, in terms of how hard and lumpy she'd become, torn apart by rummage and by askance, say, onto her there lay his, now placed, rather cumbersomely, worthy of drop-page on the floor then by pray to spare, made in an attempt to draw away the fury that was being so-fully pronounced in those lamentable two-globes of so much unnaturalness that she could almost swear to their other-worldliness.

‘May I enter?’

‘Do you live here, fine lady?’

‘Not that I know of, I’ve never ventured in this obscure palace, nor have I endowed a know-about it, if I were to be asked.’

‘Well not to intrude upon your intermediary fragrance of no-doubt repair, but, your patrimonial affair of silk-age as I see, pronounced, the finery of which, purported to the ones I’ve seen before you, my lady, of far beyond yours, trance that could only be worshiped by endure, make me think of you as nothing else but an arse-rapscallion of an empty-dame that cannot help herself but seep-intrude in people’s other-worth of praise abshowered by nothing short other than some leprous ambivalence, of which I cannot properly give a say. But if asked, if I had lain, in solitude or otherwise, by chance or by given away a tail of eye stolen from my sight, alone, I shall say this, madam, I’ve never seen a lowly creature as worthy of the sought-impoverished, made to think of, as the cause, as there had ever been lain before me as it so happens as for one such as you to’ve been brought and lain in front of me, today, in this finery of a thing I’ve never seen before, nor will I ever, if I hope so, track of worthy hay.’

‘So, can I enter then?’

‘Piss off, cunt, I’ve already told you not to come. You’re poor, and the sight of you makes me think of dead-animals.’

‘I shall travel by ways of meat either way.’

‘You shall not be stopped, but be weary, for you shall lose a leg, or something worse than, either lay.’

A memory not long ago:

‘Bah, but what is this and why does it stare at me in such a most peculiar fashion? I yearn for understanding yet am stopped by deep-concern, for I’m to known no better end just yet, what’s done by it leaves only a blasphemous taste in my mouthed turn of a cobbler’s cut-in-tongue. A catch-a drift that’s gone did far end inside a few meters in, cutting too much, for what I yearn for is to properly have spoken to him, eye to eye, this dark-mischievous fellow that never calls back. He’s gone, is he not?’

‘Father, you’re old, beckoned to stop by everyone whom holds you dear. Feast’s gone and disappeared, yet you cannot make a remark of the lot that’s been stolen from us.’

‘I will accept nothing short of murder!’

He took a few –dragged by someone else - - a fridge like motion of being pulled if you were a solid mass or frozen in place yet at the same time “gliding” on ice, moving in this motion of – steps, for he had no legs nor heels, but a plate-square almost mannequin-stand that drew upwardly in a coiled-snaked giant gut-kind of a fleshy growth that pushed into a body of a giant humanoid-chest that stopped mid-way while pulsating outwardly while being inflated until become similar to some balloon, then allowed for mold to grow out of it, left arm being a downward pointing united to the body thin as a bone, fleshy ‘stump’ of a wriggling, flaccid actually made of rubber in appearance only –tiny inflatable balloon, with an open downwardpointing end you could blow in, or a deformed pseudo-humanoid bloated turkey of a mass whose feathers and tail pointed down and got rolled in a tube. The right arm was an elongated-big pincer at its end, thick muscle-mass-filled by appendage. Instead of nipples, it bore a giant pea-hybridized giant head-Neanderthal fleshy –covered in tribal-tattoos- a’ constantly opening and closing its mouth ‘a face. Next to it, the other nipple replacement, a squirming little spherical see-through organ that was both empty inside while at the same time it gave the impression of a universe of little tiny, atom-shaped beings that constantly died and were turned inside out, before being brought back to life, endlessly. It had no head of its own, or at least not a stump or a hole or a dead-giveaway of there ever being something of the kind at its upper end. Instead, it was accompanied or constantly covered in this unnatural, clearly visible gas, that was not gas but a squirming flying storm of tape-worms self-devouring and giving instant births to instantly maturing replacing one another children that only gave the impression of there being gas because of the mess they made while eating with their mouthfuls. On top of them, they carried what was to be interpreted as a real head, or an artifact of the kind that could be taken for a head. It was a pockish-ugly thing. An almost deformed like a stone-animal skull, or an animal painted on a seashore stone. With two eyes like constantly swirling grates of metal-iron connected to it. What made it even more peculiar to lay sight on was the fact that this head was thrown back and forth, across the back, the full extension of the pincher, then the back, but never in one spot; a thrown-volley ball at their mercy. Or, this body might be taken for a giant dog’s flea emerging out of the body of an overweight man, but forcefully melted by means of wax and some arduous fire, the side of the flea’s slightly beneath its head, but into the chitin-buried there being the side-human head, whereas its flaccid down-pouring mouth, a fleshy tap, but accompanied by some strange holding onto it growths as well, of various sizes. Strangely enough, other than the pincer-appendage and the thrown around painted chunk, the body was still. It almost levitated above the floor while approaching. His daughter was normal, and most likely a slut. Albeit she was never allowed to leave the house and a virgin, kept so until marriage; a pyramid, the closes divergence into organic while connecting to the lower gut-area of a lower-side of its body; the house they lived in was made out of sutured-people and cadavers; a pyramid-vertically rotated funnel, but fatter, so fat that it grew on top of itself, holding onto itself, never letting go of itself, coiled, while also holding onto the entirety of the weight while flying.

‘Pox –Rotten Box Principle Shyngle, also, my father, you must stop this nonsense?’

‘Are you asking me to stop, or are you asking yourself?’

‘I do not know, because, I am, a woman.’

‘You shall marry a white man of my choosing.’

‘You don’t need to make it about race. I wasn’t going to say anything.’

‘And you’re also adopted and from this point on I’m going to rope you. I mean rape you.’

I hate jews and niggers.’

A knock came on the door

‘Horn, would you mind going ahead and opening it for me? I cannot, just do it, for me, if you don’t mind.’

‘Of course I don’t, I wouldn’t rule it out either, he could be ebbing to have a go at your neck straight out of the window, you know?’

Truly a most dangerous raffle that could end up with you, my dear loving husband being murdered by a most violent thing you could not for the likes of you wake up out of. This empty stooper that will have you kilt, it’s something I’ll have to live with if it ends up happening, I think.’

‘Then do not open it and wager no soulless stare I may have to deal with, otherwise you shall only be cast in disrepair, burdened burdensomely talking of empty vows.’

For what was felt between the two of them during that momentary show of caprice could only be shown as a sign of the obtrusiveness that was cast away by glance alone and gland of torn-apart there being a single, simple, simian-simpleton on the other side of the door, stooping low, lonesome as he awaits in place. I one were to only take a simple look at him he’d know what’s happening here, between the two parties that are only being kept with no regard. The simian, behind; from behind his neck erupted a grown-out-of-him-gas-cloud-filled-with-lumps shaped a second torso, shouldered by armless with a pseudo helmeted bone-cranial-skull of a second head that reared and aimed at the sky, a giant spear-spread-of a spike poking out of it, empty on the inside but domed as a helmet nonetheless, a crude open-mouth there laying. Whereas, from its every side erupted tiny unnatural, pointing randomly here and there, beaded by lumps elongations that almost gave one the impression, if he were to unite them of there being a blooming flower readying itself to sprout. Hidden in his hidden prosthetic simian stumps were strange dark appendages, holding in the light-hidden.

Lurid was struck almost nigh, her gander tried for, never-nigh approached by her husband who had lain benighted by her, in this eight body that was made for him to breathe in. Now, with him lain dormant as if inside an apparition of himself, cradled and submerged in this unnatural thing that was but a swollen-dived in barge of a see-through transparent cast, whereas the many bubbles that could once’ve been seen connecting him to the outside world, where his nose had been, the trajectory leading to where she had poked the straw of air through which he was given the ability to breathe; she could finally put herself to rest, no longer trying to forget, or forge another body at the test of a whim’s nest.

But there was this bothersome knocking, inconclusive, and ever-strikingly made to be aware of it, she drew nearer, fright of fossils there to be. A born-to-skin they lived, wretchedly dark-cast apartment where no shade came from the morning lump of a boiled cloth, the dish hat, that rang before their cast-away:

‘Open up immediately or it shall be carried on with most obtuse a wretch and quails a wonder!’

‘Who’s on the other side of this door?’

Recast yourself be-spoken or none shall be let it no more!’

But behind him, the simian, with his hidden invisible third-arm grown from beneath his right one to which it had been conjoined to, it drew with him a most ugly thing. A giant aquarium shaped little unnatural simple toil to grate, chameleon-hidden as if on a pane, and if one could see it from the side they’d know something was wrong.

Bliethe Lyiek

To his whim I give what less is there regard; and to his house whatever lays in hinges, and to the ones that shall follow right soon after, who had been taken for granted when benumbed, married forth, and in their caskets, of the burning coals that had inundated their bowls, the ones in their service and the ones belonging to their family’s culprit sin. And to them I vouch what heartless whim of soul, of wretch, of that which may be tokened by blood and drank forth by gluttony, purloin and felt. For his fat may rot and out of it, the buttons culled, one by one, inside the sin that may true follow; his sons but killed during the venial revolt, the riot of perturbation and that, which followed, that cannot be forgotten, nor be allowed to resurface from the pits in which cast.

‘And to thine servants I shall bid that which lip alone cannot taste, mercury of one’s own blood, and the one that follows true after and the one who bathed in himself, and to the ones that are blinded, the ones who serve the cones, the ones who bother so-much so and soon forget what happens when one forgets to move on.’

Prone to disease, his animals that waste; him the sculpture without limbs, appendages but a fat and a head, whose eyes are blind and scours the skies, bleak and beaked the men’s feet are whenever he flies by. Growths that never die but rot with their bodies, incomplete, yet yearned for as to be completely benigned they might, in future’s come and dark apparel. The caged fiends beneath them hid in barrels. And to them, wine and broth shall be brought and to his sons, I call upon such dark command as something to be still succumbed. Fear and frightened by no sky, as must be spoken of. They shall cry onto me and shall be tokened not search of flights, or be forgotten yet again as the tar is set in paced between darkened clouds.

‘Lands of your surroundings shall be toppled and reborn. Allowed to bring whatever’s cast away from them in whichever’s most ludicrous desire, from this point on you shall set forth. Anything for dark regard, anything that you ask, all shall be done, but for your blessing I beseech but hope that I may regain such fright, so much benigned, and so forth cried for, in the land of fright; where to be cast for, I shall rot away.

Benumb me with what little mind there is, allow me to recover what little of my mind there is, all in hope of such retrieval, drowned in blood. I need your hope, to be succumbed, forcefully if cast in spikes, and bleed upon such rotted Rhine, as thine bodies bid farewell and growths are to be plummeted in whatever there is cast away in darkened throne and mask of leper in the making, maimed, maimed by pain, maimed by resurfacing allure, which might prevail, whatever thine cast-blood that would resurface from the brothel of disease. I shall sullenly cast no prattle-peace, if thou must ask of it.’

Altars made and raised again, and whatever I can do, to bring it forth again, I shall. From the darkest, dampest pits, and flutter, from the pain and the ones that are yet to be called, disembowelled, I shall do and spare, cast and snare, thrust at unawares and do what must be done, frighten whatever little there is called forth, left, to be rotten or benumbed, until you're eaten by him, of frightened fear. That I may bask upon your glory before you disappear; whatever reason's left, such's may be called for, in trance or through disciple's end, may thine soul be blotted, cast each laughter's fear-fright.

'That one, the ones you've cast away in laughter, whose haughtiness's felt in prayer, heat. Painful as I may join each heap, twas your call before and twas's been each felt whiskered in fallacious ear, cut end's ear, made to rot.'

No other way could there be, but to worship him for long, until death's come early glance, which had been wilt to be carried through grave and through the darkest, longest-felt, longer than before prevailed, bloodiness abode, fallen in disease and forth, until mind's rot. Until your maiden's rot, until all is brought to an end!'

It would suffice no less than to bring forth fifteen harpies of different sizes and made to be rotten through caprice and through end's rotten danced, the ones that had been stilled in glance to have been eaten forth and made to dance like end's cottage made to be, burning in agony and in, thrice the altars, thrice the sacrifices, thrice the bloody bones obscure and the obstinate that shall endure, feet, arms, backs and the chopped off likes, the birthright of dirty-pus kings, come from long-lost wretched, leering forth a' paradise; but never of such livid-as were known. Never of the ones that spoke in tongues unless they rowed the same boats I was wilt to be carried in, for fate alone had me follow through, true and after, yet throughout my days I've never felt such true happiness in heap of succour's scourged and dark diseased, numb to the pain your bloody-wretched pus-begot!'

Something had to be brought to him, so that he would listen again. Move from the spot and see himself, by cottle-cottage, forced prevail, by whichever means that meant, and true, by the worship of dark sinew. If that meant what it means, if it would crack, piece by piece and crumble like the cuts that had been made to kill, wilt forth by desperation's come to an end, when the time's come to fallaciously terminal abhorred a lend; onto thine grave, when all's come and gone, to visit the benumbed of all pain that followed after when a trifle forth was therefore robbed, for you have paid graces for your crown! Lest be known of dark surround; such as fealty would succumb.

'I'm being raped by my husband's drill, Dave, our marriage is ruined by Obama, niggers, I loathe niggers, I am going to indiscriminately murder five, five children, the five children that are in this park, they're rubbery, slippery because I coated them in oil, setting them on fire, I intent on doing it, tomorrow, in the shack by the side of the road, near the park, leading to a trail of goading lamentation that Lucifer himself who is my father in law, and my lass, she will remember me for what I've done for the people during my youth, and younglings, kill your parents during their sleep; with the help of my friend, the giant volcano-pillar bloated-shaped torso bearing a head beneath it, at its base, that expands fifteen meters off its body-like some lizard come out of its hiding, a giant fleshy human head bearing a beard made out of a fleshy sack- as if bodies are inside of it, out of which, large spike-drill urchin bloated horn sprout at the ends of. He shall aid you in patricide!'

There was no man named Dave in the room.

Its head, the one standing in that corner was an elongated mushroom-stalk, filled with boils and curved above itself on an incline; revealing several twists, not like a cork-screw but with humps and bumps;:

‘I am heading to a café, seig-heiling everyone in the middle of their diner. I am going to yell kill all Jews, lynch all niggers so I will be listened to!’

A crudeness such’sn likes would instill-endeare yet endure the likens of the miasma that traveled into cones, bloated by their angular rows of curvedly extending rows of skinless bloated; there they cast, of ruminating rust, whatever was impressed on them, alas, was rude. A falchion of sparrows dead, plenty of them entered through the counting parking lot, the driver, I am the driver and I’m giving myself a thicket, tick-tick, tick’s the bomb. A large elongation of many tubes sprouted from the earth, bearing fourteen, all around, deformed figures as if imprinted on, those hands and legs were united into down-ward pointing yet elongated as well, as their legs and arms connected on an individual level, arrows, that were like jumping cords; the ones that had been imprinted on, the cask of a bloated figure, bearing sleights of arms, hands, appendages; held together by a most incommensurable amount of girthy blood, clotted by boils chained together by spiels, tendons and coils; whence fully come out, like rhubarb or lettuce on both sides, or a spade card, not the likes that had been destroyed and burned out, burned out. And the pack the man’s bloated heart twas saying, dancingly resigned. He bore a pack which bored, benigned, three of diamonds, two of clubs, the king of spades, as the bloated king emerged, dissected, erected from the spot and ended, split in half and playing along, nine of hearts, nine of diamonds, six of clubs, Jack of spades, five of clubs, Jack of clubs, the ace of diamonds, king of clubs, ten of clubs, five of hearts, nine of spades, four of spades, ten beating hearts belonging to the king of hearts, queen of clubs, four of diamonds, five of spades, five of diamonds, four of clubs, six of diamonds, Jack of hearts, three of spades, ace of clubs, ten of diamonds, two of diamonds, two of hearts, Jack of diamonds, six of hearts, seven of hearts, queen of hearts, eight of spades, nine of clubs, seven of diamonds, ace of hearts, three of clubs, queen of spades, queen of diamonds, seven of clubs, three of hearts, two of spades, eight of hearts, ace of spades, eight of diamonds, ten of spades, four of hearts, eight of clubs, six of spades, king of diamonds, seven of spades, all ran amok. But ten of hearts, it was one that was peculiarly reclined on top a gook’s mouth sprouted forth- hook on top of which the dribble cone’ awaking; soft.

Twas the year of the revolt, when of the great bloated brothers remembered emerging from one of the pits inside of which he had been standing for this much long; a stone-head of a body-torso fleshy with a boil instead of a head, with a hourglass pattern, as if a spider had been implanted in it, with a falchion-rapier sprouting out of it, from that point on and through the slouching bed of flight and wonder. Many growths started following after, black as shades.

A man was reading today’s newspaper; one of the ads immediately struck out.

‘I am a kkk-magician of lynching rope, my computations shall kill thine brown nigger; there is no hope! Do not provoke!’

Services-dumbfire; the drill was unshook.

Dave moved around the room; moisture still dripping off its corkscrew-hook.

It squirmed and poked, on top its weirdly most inclined, lest provoked, inclined attire, the cord as thick as a Gorgon’s, bloated and driv-el-ed with miss-fire! Where it shot each twist, each knot along; it gently turned the door-knob and got out the way it came in. By murder, the corpses lay hanging past each drooling crack, a snap of the fingers annoyed him, his neighbor killed alive, where he stood, past the cranny-crook and brook.

The pleasantries were therefore panting.

‘The bloated king Anaghash welcomes you to the perilous abode, the painted lobes that enter thee during entreaty’s woe, and during the comb of death’s abode, there staying.

You are to be the falchion, prying in the raft.’

For it had block the cast. A bridge, alas, from the open door was seen. His neighbor quickly drew the attention of the drill, Dave, as he had looked at the destruction that prevailed. What once’s been an apartment now lay in ruin, thrust and cast away, in some chaotic mass of spiels and of wretched airs; black and tarty gas of pink with puddle purdy blobs of white-magenta, yolk a trifle, then accomb-bry, hen of trifle feather’s melt. But the bridge, it was long and sturdy, made out of some fashioned-ill, planks of till’s weather-cock, twisted around, like a forest of thinned, stretched ziggurats, in terms of the patterns in which they were clustered, a labyrinth of thorns and formations that were clustered together and down-caster was the yolk that bloomed. Large bulbs like bloated oranges or Greek oil olives in which parasites looking like fetus-formed grown in the shape of humanoids whose faces were ripped and they bore large lantern, umbilical-covered in tubes as to promote the sustain of the light, the continuous feeding of these pseudo-hammerhead gobbling hybrid elongated bulbs of light, that were likely to be taken for inflated like balloon tongues, or worms that drew from beneath the gulley, or maggots of some kind with many squirmy kilt-frog filled with their guts out, tubes-with wide-spread, across their lower-bowels and around them, underneath there being children of their own these pupae for mosquito, moths or caterpillars, hymen-covered in humanoid chiseled with chitinous unnaturalness and corrugated rust, prime-in their growth and waking, hooligans laying dormant, starving, there-fore ending the expectation of there being such upheavel, deep retrieval. At the end of the bridge there was the large mountain sprouted from beneath the earth, corrugated with junk and bodies, citadels of pyres, large erupting lances with faces embed in.

‘A surrogate mother to your husbandry’s hubris; that I would see if I were one of the servants and the illegible writings I had to procure during my stay in the one errantry’s room come-to, the waiting having stilled my nerves, though, albeit, I and I thinks os’osó’os-os-os, that I could’ve found myself bewitched by thine enkindling’s sent forth entreaty if that were the case. Yet, I yearned for blood in a wretch of a body that drew forth and only let me slightly come succumb to one of the pyramid-stones, the ones I myself could not see of dark entreaty coming, self-sojourn and trifle cone-abode, lestly spoken by him in a myriad of self-entreaties, in a solace of giant bloated ticks with human face faced-faces-faced baboons and boons, and trinkets-milk, in which bathed ever since had I seen a moth, I the pupae of the blot! And I killed the whore, and never paid alimony, the cunt, she was fed to them, who sucked, out of her, all the blood!

Unsent to jail, I spent my solitudes in these chambers of regrets.’

To which the drill had been taken to.

‘Thinking myself better than the entreaty would adjourn for such allowed listened to, and listen not to them, I wager they’re liars, empty criers, who only show out of their windows when it’s necessary for them to take jabs at us, purport to rescind and amend. I, the come through, bearer of the lighter; shall only so besmoke a barrel filled with grim-cigars. Only the contraband kind, lest betokened to benumbed, by what’s been happening since.’

He could only see, ask, and only so, a trifle since. It was all too, strange. In a particularly benighted part, kind, and kindness get benighted, was there only one hope for him to get after. To kill him as if it were only but a trifle, only that way could he get be-hanged by the time he could see a light. And this room, rounded, like a circular, slightly raised ball from another, beneath them, room, like a closet, but archival, holding this top of a spherical ball flattened into a floor, out of which, a peculiar abstract structure; a slightly raised, two meters worth of a raise – surfboard that was chipped around the sides and almost looked like a corrugated filled with pinches and with cuts and unnatural chipped by chisel, more often than not, done by mistake by people who’d see this taken past and taken heed to what was given onto them to work with, their limitations, despite being masters of the sculpt- basin, alabaster, marble, thin. With a spiral somewhere in the back and some empty moon-craters, but like two of them – depressions in the back, with tinier holes in them, the shape of actual humanoid skulls imprinted the way you’d expect to make a mould after with some resin or a cast of bronze, iron, whatever that be. Awkwardly interpretable only by schizophrenics if they actually put the time to ensure they could understand in which direction the skulls were shoved in, like bullet shots from the distance, and the back of a hammer, high flat but curved roundedly around both ends, leading ahead, as if, slightly hinged, perhaps because of how their form was dictated by the eye while looking at it from behind; two bubbles pushing this ‘board’. That almost looked like some uglier knife, out of which, if seen from the tip of the slightly raised, almost an anvil rather than some board, a frontward pushing giant maggot-growth, of the same stone, leading to a perfectly straight-held humanoid-high torso, but compact, and with a slightly hinder-lost some weight- reminded of depression, as to signal the presence of a rib-cage, a crane-back neck-formation devolving into a frontward ‘bridge’ of fat, the size of a van, leading into a peculiar penguin-top of a sculpture in the rear-back of which it was lodged. This penguin-formation of stone cast a shadow, being placed precisely on top of the anvil-board out of which the girth of the maggot, and the stone was not stone but belonged to some unnaturally ugly fleshy substance that wasn’t skin; drew out of; that, that might’ve, if pulled out of the ‘floor’, could almost look like a sword hilt, albeit hard to grasp, and hold in hand, the difficulty being something of a misdemeanor; with the pummel, being kind of a weirdly sculpted brush even, its tip the beak and what not. And the room wasn’t simple either. Many hole and many raised structures that conjured no immediate thought as to what the reason behind them being put in place was there for one to begin to wonder what went on their side of admission. Since they were shaking like crannies-crooked, allowed respite only now and again while they shook. A slender-flying gelatinous chitinous rounded plate with empty eyes, it stole two from men, and they were always open or appeared to have been for a long time at least, crying with slander, hairy by spears of dead-skin that it still bore from some war, ancient and draft come hunter, draft-of many wont and wonder, a few centimeters of spools and poofs adding together as they were come out of its ‘mouth’, like dandelions or puffy white spores coming out, then twisted like hair-tails, where, at the end of there ebbing an ugly devil’s tail of a dripping with moist murky faces of men that fell onto the floor and smiled at them, the drill and the man, while they continued running amok with flight-end trifle come-between each end of day, pain, pain, the mad transgression started coming onto them. And he was utterly incapable of understanding, Dave, for he had accidentally eaten some of the blots.

‘I think it’s asking for an admirer’s voice to beheld, abhorred and cast into stone while fall away, get drunk.’

‘You speak its tongue despite the silence?’

‘I utter rape, hate niggers, must kill them into wincing railway.’

‘But what of it, what of it? My dear friend.’

And the moisture, so meager, eager to be-numbered; a trifle for what was come and done, when the time was come onto the prow, empty sack of gutten-tag:

Flights of mosquitoons, whose toes, they were largely eager, like men, tall, and like buffoons, all come bearing their large stacks of perilous treasure’s stolen left over; piles of men left behind so they could be sent to flight, and come alive, from the distance’s come to an end, tonight.

Was there ever a moment’s truly unruly peace when time was come of empty numb and where-to, to and fro, when they sacked the ends of Rome, when they hanged the empty throngs with dust, drowning the sepulcher with the roads, the water-canny antelopes out of which the grim bouffant allowed there-entry; death of kin.

‘I see a man of a similar ink, for he had been long in this cysted citadel of sutured-niggers, empty long!’ For the corrugated pieces of junk hid away the knives from sight.

‘Who, of thine kin of come to plunder?’

Lo, behold, Lord Nigger-Spherebox:

‘You’ve been waited for at the court, yet splinter cranium-alacrity into which hid less bowels’ drafting knife, with which onto you there comes only the most tenebrously benigned an architectural delight; for thine errands have allowed you to come after such entreaty, trifle’s come and onto play.’

‘Where to go and where to remain?’

Was the question of most agony prevails, when the hour’s adage, plenty cabbage for you to eat; I will pay for it; I am rich but I won’t retreat easily, unless you cut my feet, like but Dutch-man’s nigger-like, replace feet with hands, or hands with feet, the other way around ain’t fine unless you do me well.

Corpses cannot tell the time when the boat’s running, come-around the far-light’s pruning.

‘Holocaust is waiting for you.’ Said Nigger Spherebox.

‘I thought he was but a legend to appear.’

‘Ah, but trifle’s kind emerging.’

As benign as they would be set to walk, they were stopped, for the sculpture was but turned around, facing them, by its own accounting, by its own wanting, and in a second's stretch, it drew ahead and ate the ape, a gulp beheaded Nigger's sphere, boxed in gut, died away, setting them in flight.

They ran, they ran and they ran, away-away, away! Hinder, sightened by the light that drew. And many birds that came anew, of flesh-but rot, and they were all leaping about, shouting nigger.

'Nigger, nigger, nigger, nigger!'

Another bird came in and joined, they didn't know what to do; the fray:

'Nigger, nigger, nigger?'

But this time around, there came no river.'

Death was uncertain, they ran around. All chambers were colored and flashed, like seizure- giving you, retarded child, I hope you die in cancer; so does your mom.'

Wretchedness followed like a pus lantern they had carried along them, on top their backs, nervous at every step, seizure-confused by the many pulsating gradients of many such delights of similar ilk and appeal. Many, many, many that had almost rung their trifle gone and had seen their pleasure disappear.

Hidden Jackal Man the Rapist:

'I'm going to Holocaust the Jews, ha-ha, I'm going to assassinate; before that. Friends, let's kill the Jews, let's lynch these niggers, these spics, I hate brown people, fucking arabs, they need to, ha-ha, their children need to be tortured!

France? Going to bomb a few cities in France, yeah, as well as central Europe, there's no place safe in this world. I intend on planting bombs in the United States. I am a CIA asset, a crisis actor. Blood is on my hands, and pants, I piss it on plants!'

You've been holding up the crowd for a while, now, and across a few weeks, days-passing, albeit slower than usual, when I was a child, the same as then, I noticed, several times at this point in time, having come to wilt it, doubtably were it come at any time to've made a similar choice, I should know, but, while I'm in no possession of any perchance foil, that could aid me in trying to figure, I'm walking, slicing, bowing, riding, coming, approaching from the northern point of the star- A Magus of some sorts, bowed, bowling; that there's no way of crossing without being killed, dead-men walking who've been charred are now corpses down to their very ankles but unlike niggers they still put in the work necessary to have something done on behalf of my compatriots of no lesser measure, imparted upon by botch-snot; and the line, that formed behind the crowd, snaking in like a spear-shaft, trying to cut through this yellow-butter of yellow Chinamen who're devoid of understanding or placing some similar understanding to some reasoned approach, as to understand, what's there left to understand, why it is that they're dying in masses, killed despite trampling and having trampled on top their bodies; yellow-niggers chasing chicken-rice; four am, the other day, during the first latter part of the years, that come clashing every time I image a woman being Rpad; that being besides the point, there is no sun, nor sky, but a domish-square pseudo compact, ceiling holding everything together in its clasp, a multitudinous reality of ceilings had been shot like rifle bullets, then implanted, then stitched to the squared on top dome. It was a long rectangular-ceiling, block. With the people who lived at the top floors, who'd once been living in their apartments being stitched as well to their top lamps, their paints, and their upper-cement frames, lodged in there, eternally. And unevenly, since they ricochet-shot but were drawn back since these were not actual stitched but the strange substance, a moldy oozy thing, waxen-fleshy but part of four jewels, it was their blood that hardened, calcified but was struck in an awkward position, since it was like resin, or bark-bubbly ant harvested by - resin, which initially violently bounced, before trying to restore itself to its initial position. Mushy-forestry, but tree-lichen, it was goop. Several formations of them as well, since they were incompatible with one another. The 'stitches' were their out-grown 'hairs', that were caused by a spook of frighten, since they were assaulted, and easy to kill, but the supply was endless for they could easily be replaced by the dome. It looked like some broken apart puzzle with the people being dead-eyed opened for talk, but no one spoke to them. A sea of hardened cemetery open tombs, with them staring down, martyrs. Yes, they yearned for escape, not the men, but the puddly blood-beings. To themselves and left to run into the fields, they were like long Arabian-sized Plateaus, or sea-carpeted made of stingray interpretations, whose hairs were dead cells that became as hardy as chitinous chitin because of the trauma they were forced to suffer as a result of the impact. Less like hairs, but more like, in all sense and means to understand it, dead-cell-made spears. Without, and devoid of the force they were so desperately in need of, they were incapable of pushing them down. Weighted by them, yet the dead cells would not fall apart. For their innards-composition, despite being blooded-robed, being given birth by crystals that had been shattered, from a planet made completely out of them, yet during and on which, clashing and clashes between them were known to result into them being killed by means of some highly acidic steam that completely destroyed their, to their planet, earthly composition. Most peculiarly said, their form, inside the crystals was closet o some putrefied-hard lumpy gas, or quasi solid because of the moisture in-between the coming to harden and reverting to some form whose initial manifestation or the whereabouts were unknown to everyone, since, the crystals were entirely sealed and were still in need to devour some compendium of air-like substances it ate upon with a system of lesser, tinier, maw-like, with hundreds of bulb-attached smaller pincer-mandibles that were as elongatedly curved as Arabian swords, and mostly clustered together into a French-old gun-powder 'powered' canon, like a tiny skin-volcano, or something ugly and phallic but made out of octopi-arms which were wrapped around one another, since these hardened gas-sparingly cutting and assimilating, made for gaseous processing tools, were seemingly evolved to do this, applied to brute force as a means of selecting only the strongest and the most reliant that both allowed for the function, and the self-resuscitation, since with every passing moment, of being allowed to drain the gases to their "heart's content", they died endless deaths, as a result of some process sharing in similarity with reverse- asphicpiation, air was for them what water is for us if our lungs needed a certain amount of water being directly inhaled into them as a necessity for survival, while we also learned how to cut open and resuture our lungs; which gave onto life and sight, a most alarmingly thing to beheld, as these strange oozy-out of some olive branch taken, pea-long beads formed everywhere inside their cavernous stretched. Worm-like ridges being widespread everywhere not by chance but by the foil of gases that formed saws, a strange unexplainable thing, since so many of them were completely incompatible, the middle entry into these giant-give crystal cysted cocoons, which were ugly-formed two at each end, cone-fat united by their fatter four-sided, squared-beneath them, pyramids, but filled with larger mountainous regions outgrown everywhere. Their insides being thinner than that, regardless of it, they bore, after all, straw-like wind gaping formations which was like a drill- spinning many saw that had been put inside of them. But somehow these giant growing bubbles started emerging everywhere, awkwardly floating, unless fallen short of altitude, in which case they would seemingly be cut in many pieces; or altogether, ruined. Many blooded 'children' of the guts were born and being fed that way, since every single one of them, naturally, like some magnet started drifting, in terms of particles, to their preferred gas-mix. Since after all, most of the gases were a mix in different proportions, yet homogenous to one another, devoid of any alien-like particles; of themselves to begin with. As a result of shattering, the form that one would take, or the life that this patch that would be thrown and lopped against, would be cast out as some incomplete membrane that would eventually harden and die off, since in this peculiar state, its incompatibility of existence would allow it only the freedom of flight and scouring the ground before its untimely end would finally take it, since it couldn't feed itself any longer. An ending to it indeed; whereas one could only draw this from the whole, devoid of touch and human emotion, the contamination, that is to say, which occurred, rendered it incapable to revert to its gaseous form. A rotten bouncy carpet making dead-haired cells, which would further consume its body; by chance, it would also act like resin, so much so that, some of the dead hairs would have allowed for death masks to be made, for the unfortunate men, women, children and animals that had been shot out of their homes and into these dead jellies before falling back to their deaths, instead of being formally impaled. An ugly trunk- with many peels, rotting, decaying continuously as a result of not being put out of its misery; this showing up as no surprise since its current state only came as a result of being exposed to the various gases and particles of Earth; plus the domish-thing which was anything but a part of it, it being more of a four-great joined in, bone-like lumpy-thin pieces, that joined one another by means of growth. A giant man being outside, resting, see-through head and every body part as well, with the town in his gut, and the citizens being contorted into living organs, despite their unawareness; But it was a coagulation of many added together beads, tiny, really, that managed to implode into these saddening to look at moving membranes that were beyond abused. Cutting them even would be necessary, mostly so, in order to properly make out what truly was made of them, what made them tick, if there were tendons in them, veins, earthly organs and what not, and whether or not all they did was rot. And unlike the crystals, these patches weren't entirely alive, more like viruses, yet. No infection occurred, nor was there a way to properly test this either. It was a strange process. But somehow, while inside their crystal originators, their bodies, once hardened, since hardening was a natural occurrence after all, even prior to them being cut, they were put back together, piece by piece, whether it meant at an atom level where every molecule was somehow drawn into, it must be it, as no other explanation would do or serve one to understand. In the middle of this invisible cylinder keeping all of the gas-saws in check, there are a multitude of elongated segmented invisible, pure-invisible gas-hardened gas, as in, almost like iron, a special-iron hard gas, like long doctor-fingers ripped out of their hands and put together, waiting, but many of them, perhaps in the hundreds and thousands, protecting the layers, which would be like Earth's atmosphere, a stratosphere-like one, and similar to it, still belonging to some peculiar walling-structural gaseous- branch, that would make it hard for molecules to enter unless allowed and wanted to. Its brain being stuck in one of these layers, long-held, from one side to the other, trailing along; while some of the blood-beads, of hardened clots scattered or drifted, molecule by molecule shot, each 'gas-saw' being more of a, since rigged as well, oblong-fat made nigh-saw made out of thin-added together grass-blades of mixed that allowed the tiniest of particles, henceforth the bloody ones, or those other gas-atoms incompatible to them, to pass through without mixing and without doing any damage. It's as if each gas-saw was a race, or a peoples, made out of many sub-races, shredding everything to pieces but allowing some individuals to pass along without mixing or adding to the mix. One by one, each molecule would be drawn back into the main tulip of air, by one of the many arm's elongated finger-like tinier than themselves, hundreds in every finger's end open hole, out of which they drew of; dead ends, perhaps, gaps between each saw, not to mention that it was rather titilatingly dangerous for them to act outside their means of protection, since they could be shot down by the many extremely fast moving molecules they were vulnerable to the sight of. Henceforth they would have to act fast when it came back to picking out these organic components. And they were not only blood molecules either, but hybridized, put in a mixer or blender organs, which were all in possession of fragmented brains that regulated, at certain intervals, each necessity it was in need of, the crystal that is, to survive. Hence the reconstruction of every organ had not only and was not only in need to be precise to begin with, but it also needed a certain degree of tactical knowledge and planning as to not just fully recreate them but to plan ahead where they might be planted, for when the next lot began to shoot in and after they were properly eaten to begin with as well. Like giant tundra tree-palms. Perhaps most innocuously said lay the fact that, they were capable of endless reconfigurations in terms of shape when allowed to growth and exposure to whatever material and chemical there lay out there to begin with; but that lest be said and seen for side-to-side and sight of eye. One can only think and take into account the fact that, they had a brutish kind of society of cysted crystals they lived in, no further but closer to the sand-covered, giant fetus-being filled with, unbirthed creatures beneath the edges and ends of, by the one fallen king who rot, and who lay in a most disgustingly rotten, an ammoniac broth; their scents were only succumbed to stay. But regardless of it as well, the domish thing held the ceiling high. As if someone had iron-boarded a flat "I" on his belly, the citizens gathered around, at various times of the day, scanning with their eyes alone for something like the looling Nektar and the False Martyr who had once visited them during one forth-night. They celebrated Christmas and were all Christians, belonging to Eastern Orthodoxy as well; not the men, women and children who had been killed, whose deaths were interpreted by the locals as being nothing short of some divine reckoning because they were most likely so pagans who turned away from god. Sticky blood-trampolines with hidden hairy spikes, they've been implanted in the poor slumbering forever man, the life of his citizens, the lifeblood of his nerves. But the point remained; they couldn't revert back to their original forms because of how much time they spent trapped in this quasi-solid thing. Losing particles that would dissipate into the air, absorbed forever. Ever so more would one start considering the strangeness in terms of circumstances with which one had endowed himself, honored in some sense, to be met so by, at a later point in time or life, befitting in some way, rather, unpleasantly disjunct, despotedly-disjointed by this rusty brass-bronze rotted, corrugated and miss-gotten by chance, an ill medal in possession of a lost-forlorn and much to itself benigned rotten order of some twenty dead figures cast in tar, a few of the faces being imprinted if not all in this giant man's cap, trapped in it they are, now, appalled by the sight alone, as do many presently abhor, twenty or so in the gathered in crowd, all but highly opinionated to say something about this unpleasant circumstance, as they are part of the navy, the order having been shot down on the watery fronts of Waterloo, with an even heftier circumstance awaiting around the corner, only for the signal of reigns that would allow for them to be aroused, from what's been gathered, around the poultry of a nomenclature's direly abode, there's this incontinence of a faultry beaded-bidden-brought, petally rosy, where they spat the rest of the dire-rotten fishes they had eaten while submerged in rot. Plentily abhorred by stranger's sight and dark abode as four trains finally came, all bearing their elongated knives prepared, jousts of iron, slithering in squirm as they jumped around, crushing house to house, all of whom exploded and threw the bodies of the tenants wherever they were allowed to land. Giant nasty rotten figure, skinned like prune humanoids if they were contorted by pinching and twisting until they became flies without hairs, or filled with black vortexes leading to nowhere, thinned by empt-surround, cocked-backed by humps and rumps, hunchbacks, but mad, akin to jackals, they came out of nowhere, their faces were eight times the size of their bodies, and bloated completely with long-arm kept, from inside of them, arms made their organs, all were reeds of bothersome to stare at for long periods of time, hoses that moved, and kept the head connected in each case, satiated by greed of blood and meat-eating, they lasted not a second longer, the survivors that were charred, eight degree burns spread everywhere, only to be eaten whole by these squarish nigh-nigger masked voodoo blocks of push out of every corner a bubble-oblong of a side of their heads. And they were open, in the front only, by ziggurat formations of skin, piled one after another, on top of each other, coming in rows. Plates of flesh they were, with hardened layers darkening as they pulsated while the head was split for entry, when it came for the time of sustenance to be had. And it was a maligned thing, allowing them to run around, but they were too fast, fast beyond relief. When looked upon either by the trains or by the people who were there, whom were distracted from admonishing their admiration of the strange medal-ark, for it could not be referred to as anything but the likes, they immediately drew their long pincer-feet back like origami-accordions, until they feigned lawlessness; blown out by army's service, didn't sign up for having my legs blown up in Iraq despite having graduated top of my class, a sign of pride but that won't pay my bills if the Government is taken over by liberals who hate me because I sacrificed something for my country, most of what I have and I am, only to be spat upon- pure seething hatred being propelled from one side of the other of this, of this, unexplainable thing they called demure. It was a defense-ical position of the sort, children accommodating with oogling at the beasts. Fetal-position curved slightly, hindered, pandemonium-withdrawn, to the right, but, no closer to the broken moon, a slither and a song of the brothel-swoon. In actuality they were nothing more but some ugly overlapping raised mound formations, compact-square leeches, or open flower-maws that opened out of this overly blown out of proportions, fat, bag of a head, nastily trying itself to keep the organs inside. What a great medal it was, the canon shot, and these things, as the sound echoed, ran away, legless, even fell, got up, some of them, ran immediately, never were seen after. Yet some of the trains started going after them, thrusting themselves as far as they could, without a mention of the obscure arcane with which they were possessed by, the rotten figures of the giant monument started whispering in the dark. Pol Pot was a great man, one of their grandest magister their order belonged to. He had made an intercontinental bridge from one side to the other of the world, one of the Greatest Revolutionaries that ever existed, who had fought the perversions the West had fallen a crude-enough victim of, Oriental in dark approach, without a way of feeling the skin-rays that had placated with their bodies, sun, the world's eyes, being blindly forced to forget what was going on as they expanded, grew and formed a false sun that allowed for them to split in three open-wound formations which absorbed both the sun, wrapping them in, and themselves, having become strange pseudo rolls that hybridized-vaporized themselves into a most paradoxal thri-connected edifice that made no sense whatsoever for one who'd choose to behold a sightened stare upon, slashes that were crisscrossed by accident but mourned to be brought back to life; I really hate niggers and kikes, but I am also an evil kikes that ought to have been thrown in the oven when one's had the chance, the Holocaust should've happened, all this could've been avoided if it's been done; I should assid what the nomenclature in the following Pharmaceutical morose permeation of meticulousness tawdry bring upon the sightened faultry need of speak to say in terms of understanding's come today's chip in bargain's understanding of the matter. Chowder can only come from blood-spinach. And they gathered it, a lot of it, beneath their nest. It's where they dragged the people they had harvested from above. Large sticks-of bramble, ramble, put-in crumble, bread as well. Each pebble? Why of course, there was nothing in this hobble more important, inopportune a moment to talk about, but the pebbles. They had cave chiseled imagery, with bars and bats and little lepers fight one another, kept in thorny-bushy bramble, branchy hands, kept a hold of hard, some even curled their fingers, clenched in-fists holding these beautiful pearls, from falling apart and being lost forever, beneath the giant man's belly's wax-ford crust.

There is no hope left for either of them, at least not in the shape they are now. Mostly trapped, bars of fleshy bone-pillars strapping their shoulders into spherical crude spiked by cone protrusion things that disallow even the slightest movements from occurring unsupervised; elated in some way that one would even pay attention, as most busily a man, woman and leper merely pass them by without even acknowledging their existence, without even the rudest approach, the rudest contortion, there's a slither of a faulty hope leaping around them. A miasma coming out the sun. A block of red fleshy antler-frames put together in the hundreds forming every building around them, most of them having men implanted in them outside, the weather warring with their broken bodies as they'd grow into large opal-shaped butterfly manta rays with elongations beneath and above them, eight in number on both sides, like lyman-slug layman serpent boggling, with cylindrical glow-tubes at their ends like German war-grenades or similar to that design, wide-spread and seen even before the first or the second world-war. There was something of an un-ending, un-enduring pain, as they were allowed to leave only for the summer-before returning to their nests.

'A bomb at every level, including every floor and every hallway, every apartment, ticking continuously, in wait for release, an explosion of that magnitude would mean.

Indeed it would, there's no helping in it. This floor is the safest one, I wager. There's nothing but a single commuter that isn't even ticking.'

'They're not bombs, my good friend, they're triggers.'

'You're bluffing!'

'I'm most certainly not, see now, here's the danger, in the basement beneath us.

A nuclear silo filled with nuclear water that could spill and spit at any hour. If you mind me not saying just this; you should most definitely leave as soon as you can. There's definitely no way of getting through it alive. Certainly not with that in mind.'

'Is there only one silo?'

'Eighty seven of them actually, leaping from wall to wall, their corrugated legs, mechanical, leapfrogging ear-creekers, crickets of metal locusts, crickets of metal locus singing in the dark; if one of them ever so much spills that which he is holding inside of him, there's going to be a huge nuclear devastation going soon enough we'll be having to deal with. Or not. Best case scenario is that we both die in the explosion, which may or may not be so, a most inconsiderate outcome of their play.'

'Then I shall hide there with the Jihad. And we shall eat waffles and Canadian covered in corn-syrup pancakes until the world is deemed safe to walk in.

And I shall make cardboard rockets and bomb the Capitol thereafter.

A dead-end dead scenario which shall make me live forever if you understand where I'm headed with this.'

‘I truly don’t see any way out for you, my friend, with all hat’s end inside of which you’re laying, I see no tip you that may suffice your apparent dislodging from reality, not that I would see it oozing any time sooner, yet.’

‘Perchance, say, would you happen to have a lighter on you? It would most definitely be something of a lure for fish if you had one. I need it.’

‘What for?’

‘You’ll see.’

They were in the building smoking large tabernacles and ham, venison and breaded fish with water-soup, only water in it, boiled by rack of fire they turned the inner frame of a bed into. The lighter was part of his toe, he had been forced to cannibalize his own treaty delight in order to amputate the parasite that was hiding inside of him. A long thin fat man, with the diameter of a long-bullet. Hiding inside his leg, a livid-living peg of the sorts that had been drawing away from him valuable sustenance he could not do without. And now it all paid off, ripping him out, strangling the little fucker, then splattering him on the floor. Stopping the bleeding off his toe through which he had pulled out this liquefied fish-like inside its mouth parasite that had been lodged inside his leg vein by sheer brutal force, with the help of the lighter that was then left there forever from this point on without deciding or being capable of putting an end to this massacre that was unfolding in front of his very eyes as they spoke. A most intermediary thing he could not draw away from. Thinking continuously of the next day. What would unfold tomorrow? – From the thoughts, the mind and the wrongdoings of Bottle-Snake, the un-operated split god-being, oratory of the Yellow Rider.

They marched along a most in-contested upon territory that’s been grabbed a hold of inside the Basilisk-like room, a conical triangular below but cubical on the top deformed into a candle’s flame horn-torsion as if it had been pushed out, a tip-balloon with bodies hid in. Niggardly, niggardly, dark-buffoon. The building was locked. It was dark outside.

Part of the sky was covered in military barracks, and within the hour there were no clouds, no niggers outside, nor any people walking unattended. Many of the agents started filling in the giant bloated frog-shaped, with man-legs, and heads that were curtain-flat, corrugated and filled with long extensions that had horn-like forests drawing out of them, each equipped with thousands of harlequin-wrapped plates like taxidermist placed humanoid faces, of the many political figures and historical people that had been assassinated and revitalized, their organs stored in whips that dangled like tails. These were their living nests without which they were definitely incapable of living for long or out of. It was an unnecessary evil trying to pull them away from this, this innocuous thing that was the draft. But they feared the draft.

‘My brother, I think there’s no solace to be had any longer, there’s this thing I need to tell you.

I’ve burned whatever was left of me, my face, it’s grainy, filled with dark evils that draw at me below the curtain when I’m trying to get up. It’s something I never even considered as of yet, but suicide by carnage might be the only way out. And the only thing I can say is this. I need a bore of strong bottle-reeds to eat my legs with.’

Ladies remain uninvited for the time being.

Later in the day, the sunken blood of the mockery driven by the incubation, after having fed upon the polluted blood of one of the six great limbs belonging to him:

Somehow the mountains that were previously touched only momentarily so by a wind of steely alabaster trauma had been boiled adrift by a sunray of varied melting lights that completely suffocated them with rising puffs of steam, clouds, and geysers of some fifteen hundred thousand degree Fahrenheit, that had not only removed the enveloping coat which had been thoroughly melted by a gradient of degrees that lend a false impression, according to which, as such, as it would make him believe it had been cleaned by some astral janitor whose move left a corrugation of rakes, out of which, a few still carried along slices of heavy weather, between lanes of green Nevada; that aroused the worst sins of humanity whose maintained permeability of abhorrence had distilled into him the cranial semblance of a balloon while his ego only turned each shatter into gray, replacing every memory of yellowish hay spent caring about them before the time of the flight's arousal returned to haunt him once more, incapable of properly forgetting what had once been promised to him by means of tradition, by means of love, daunted yet found again, solace being claimed in this impossibly to explain, yet taken, endeared as a tenebrous abode he could not escape from any longer, since he's spent many summers, many petals, flower-ages, trenches that had come to pass, many yet rendered improbable by him, himself, as to account for his own and no one else, that he had failed in his monk-itude of a search, for guidance, being left alone to suffer an eternal death, caprice, nimbleness of fingers serving only as a pantomime's edge while nicking off the wings of fireflies, holding of the candle above its own reflection, of a pond. Now he was definitely losing his mind, in this play of cruelty. Why must he pick off the wings of a firefly? Why is this done, performed so cruelly, gruelingly so, like some surgeon who turned into a Neo-Con, it probably would've been more fitting if I had used an army medic or something more in the bein of, fugg, the state of the Union, and the Workers of the World United, Union, have, so far refused to answer his many sent-over-the-time-span-of-fifteen-years, by means of pigeon, letters, that carried secret intelligence regarding his communions with the goats that were Agents of the Government who served as CIA assets, like Reich Spondacks, a man he had been affiliated with ever since their early days in the Facility, of the Lord. He punches himself in the gun and falls into the pond, all wet, his candle-light, all blown off, he's trying to, he's struggling to get out of the water but can't swim, and he's drowning, while coyotes make their way around, forming a circle, waiting for him to come out, but not out of the closet like some dumb fucking faggot, but to eat him, yearning for man-meat, devouring him, cannibalism, there are cannibalistic natives, of the mountains amongst them. He thinks, because he is a man. A man uses logic, his rationale. He is intelligent. Women on the other-hand, would die, if a woman was stuck in the same circumstance as he is in now, she'd die. I'm most certain she would die, she'd drown, without a doubt, she would immediately drown as if she was never ever alive to begin with and this is why I loathe women of the females species. Dumb cunt, you cannot drown in a kitchen, you wouldn't even chop off your arm if you were stuck in some cave, but, you would probably chop of a finger by accident, because you're infested, with MODERNITY! Modernity is an evil disease promoted by the Jews as a means of subversion in order to brainwash the woman into thinking she's somehow supposed to be on par and equal terms with a man, incapable of realizing that she is far beneath him by a mile, a long mile at that, and she must serve the man and do what he says and I can grab my appendage with both of my hands, yet females seem to loathe my appearance and not give themselves to me, I Stefan, being a redeemer, someone in search of a means to destroy this Judaic-Bolshevik disease that has infested females, with modernity, while at the same time, I must also play both sides because of my kike ancestry and must Holocaust the Jews while also promoting Modernity in an attempt at controlling female-women, in order to subvert and destroy. But this was not a story about Stefan; it was about Phallic-Peep Inkghor Nigger-slayer Esteban, born in Spain, Portugal.

Esteban, you are drowning, wake up so you do not die by drowning!

‘We are holding a banquet in this hobble but you were not invited in, Esteban del Parnicia, Phallic-Peep Inkghor Nigger-slayer Esteban!’

‘How comes thee utters my name thrice?’

‘You can read minds as well?’

‘Why yes, I know all about you, porters and your hive-mind of portery!’

‘Poetry, dipshit!’

‘I meant what I said. Can I come in?’

‘You, fine, come in, you are allowed to stay on the side, beneath the table, but only beneath the tables, nowhere else, nowhere near the ladies since you are a creep and I cannot stand looking at your ugly fucking face. I fucking hate you, I’m a rapist as well.’

As are all porters. I hate women, I loathe women, I want to kill them in their sleep!

The party was expected. At four am in the morning, fifteen more of the masked guests arrived at the banquet while the pompous ladies, presently in charge with the current deliberation stood still. Pigeons finally delivered their messages, having entered through the four-paned gates, opened by chance, for them to come through, in their heads, the ladies now lain down, bleeding. Every single one of them suffered some concussion. It was beyond painful. Gruesome even, how these avians feasted on the poor ladies, and the lads were cracking jokes at them, the festivities having only now begun. It was a miracle, one of the critiques present, a Protestant Catholic who was smoking a hand, the side of his head, converged in hair, a giant shark-fin, diverging into a ear-like open tuba-formation that was the side of his cranium, his right eye being giant, triumphantly deformed, teeth adorning the rims of this pseudo-deformed maw-car racing track of one lane, one lap, pseudo long oblong that was but a bone-seen from the outside, connecting to the flapping harder-fatty fin of a fleshy covered misscreation. He was sitting on an ugly, pepper-shaped, fatter around the top, contorted barrel, instead of a chair. By him, a large fridge sized, pseudo old metal cigar, or music-changing thingy rounded at the top device-shaped – by means of inserting coins in it to change the tune, fat-bulbic round- thick thing, there being there one, with a small slightly raised out of itself, from beneath the floor, tinier –second cylindrical head of a rise bearing a hole as well as the main ‘device’ bore. Which was responsible for creating the smoke limbs he had taken a few of, adding more to his degrading, ugly-ly distorted stature; and the carpet was as far as a sea-ray, two or four centimeters off the ground, shaped like a giant elongated triangular rendition of a mountain, two-dimensional almost, that sprung out of a shoulder, if this were a man, that connected to a large truck-squarish giant razor, that could be taken as a shell, a snail without a head, the slug's tail being a tipped blade, which was inside, the entirety of the carpet, or, more like the upper part of it, nonetheless, pseudo elephant of walk-through without being impeded by it, invisible cubical, as in cubism, not really, but more like compact flat shapes made out of, forms, gelatin, of a specter it was. This tipped by its right' shoulder of a stalagmite, sheet, had a small human eye, its left eye that being, whereas the other one was sutured in, bore a mouth shaped like a raised bumpish fortune cookie merged with the back-handle of a rifle, extremely wide, which were both seated on top of a normal on top the water, at sea-level, boat, the rife might've been a baronette that was shoved in, whereas the cookie was more of a sponge that merged with the poop deck of the ship, growing into the rifle and the wood as well. Oh, and here was Michael, standing next to the Critic, while the women were still devoured by the bloody pigeons, he had no face, he was wearing someone's face he stole, an old vintage fat telephone-shaped head, a brick-thing puffy fat, with a left pseudo horn, sharp like a harpoon-spear, that drew some of the fat off the cheek as if it had shot through its head or was lodged onto it, and a fat car airbag-beating growth coming out of its right side of the head of an organ beating in the open-light. His eyes were see-through and his real eyes couldn't be seen, only a black squirming thing behind it. This face he stole, had no nose. But a beak-hole that could be interpreted as a mouth, because the upper' "lip" of a five centimeters of drooping, low-hanging, 'skin' gave that impression of. It still accompanied a hole and nothing more.

Many of the guests present there came from a variety of social backgrounds of varied stature and placing in the high-society, including gentlemen of high renown, street criminals of entered through the State's back-door with the help of their relationships and connections and what not, their stature and their, their sipping on the miasma-drinks filled the air with travesty come out of snobbery pulsating with every moment's reprimand on how poor the shmucks outside are for not being here.

'Reginald, please begin again with your most reprecitous up-dandy, I am in need of having tickled bow.'

'My poor dear's come to laceration's calling, but am simple, cannot do each o!'

'Borderline deprave and litter, I can call upon a servant to do us go, fiddle with it.'

And they moved into a more private room. She was pretty on the eyes, with the pompous drummer idling upon a riddle gander, for the foresty triumph which was promised to him for trailing all way home, come falter, but serenade come out of Baroque would not do, a hopelessly sung toodaloo, as to impress, or even gaudery tillen wax of honey rust. To remind her of the Spanish lust; he'd such consider. This woman, this woman's a tattletale, she'll tell the coppers if I do it too rashly!

If one would think this nasty, to say the least they should rear their heads onwards onto the streets, where this mulatress' walking, the Lady of Liberty belonging to the punk brigade, her father working on the Fireman department store charade, with an artifact tied around her neck, a pumpkin's trinket of the Halloween red-gum making implanted in the apples given to the children, unfit to the masquerade, tiny present, made, so their parents will remember you next time the cops cross your street, mate! Casanova is her boyfriend, but only on Saturdays, at any rate. Fashion-police ought to take this one and throw her out of the lane she happens to be dangling by, hardly a faulty grenade, the Pioneers would have to throw this one out down the mine shaft and never look back, again. With steps like you would think she'll never be capable of walking ever again, and would be grateful for it as well.

But the couple, Reginald and Lassie were in a simple room that was empty-grated, with a single black hole with squirming worms coming out of with, in pitch dark, just the two of them. Waiting, waiting, waiting, not even wanting to do something until, out of that tiny hole a black cord began being lowering the lightbulb. It was day again!

A Charleston, parked nearby. The Parking-lot dome. Marie Curie is a nice lady, on the Birmingham port. Christian-Christmas songs, and flying planes in nine-eleven children's homes. Homo-erotic aphorisms. Natives losing their homeland. Sound of chimes. Perturbations during flight. A rodeo down South, the French Revolution and impregnation. Ripples in the pond, birds that fly in circles, run along. Aristocracy-en-shambles:

Lord of many arms, destroyer of renown, nigger, I tell you now, I better not catch you slacking down, I am a bomber, I should know pain, blood is on my hands, I am the spoil of war, battering contender:

Lights of semaphores, the city is in the dark again, I see no rivers of blood anymore. Finally, he is there:

The lowest side, beneath her chin, of her neck, outwardly pushed an apple, rubbed the wrong way, cherry, stretched as if scratchings, but she wasn't fat, bulbous, tall, she had fifteen centimeters on him, or two meters, a plump hourglass figurine of pale ceramics, with hips widened to a punched-in hole in the wall you'd want to leave a dent in her, because of the water pressure that was released, since she had been carrying him for over fourteen months, a ruddy back responsible for being chained to a wagon she carried, on the rails, the conductor being deranged, thinking a woman lies only when she's guilty of having wetted her gown before him. Large long legs that were unwashed, and were part of a pillar that had erupted from her back and shot against the ground on weird angle; armless but had eight smoke limbs, largely aghast was he, once he poisoned her drink, because her breasts were willowy and in the form of angular gelatin; with yolk in them, that being, tiny humanoid pseudo giant fetus-tape-worms, with hundreds of arms. Grabbing at her, trying to gnaw, as they refused to be given birth to; this harpy; Bernard was in love with.

Should've cracked that fucking light bulb with a stone or a pecker, the sight was horrid; around them, the humidity of a torrent, lurid. But, ah, a female, a wet female, there it goes, prepared for insertion, insemination!

Generals and ladies of the scholar kind were licking the floor, the dirty walls and some of the lamps around their sound-encasing, trying to get a taste in what was being prudentially carried it with an utmost supreme sense of subtlety and rough violence that made a lot of noise. It didn't sound sexual at all, but rather hard-devour!

The vultures were awaiting the promised moment according to which his will to live had lend upon him to believe that they had belittled him ever since their most innocuously primordial appearance in terms of despotism, his disposition being down, still, he would not emerge at the sight of their sullenly impoverished by nature's thrusting hardness, since, umbenknost to him, penitent's prier, paradigm of undertaking, lest one should inquire about him, the dredge was still beneath a tablet of rustic chocolate, with the milk pouring during stench. Around him, on the floor, but no one noticed.

'I'm frightened.'

Deep-nine fluttering, wings everywhere struck in flight of soccer, they were waxing some of the women while the funeral, a-sunder, drafted a poultry drawn along by chaise, a taxi driver, a priest of some unorthodox calling and a few lobes that had been implanted in their backs, servants of the ones that brought them along as to draw even more attention to their lavished lifestyles.

And in this chaos that enrapture's call disdainfully-green swollen attire, there being, no napkin to blow each step a nose, by shambling chandeliers, grasping ever-so-ethereal upon a gambling's sepulcher, since all of the guests, mostly the gentlemen, pulled out their shirts, revealing, peculiar petulant tomb-stone machines, blocky, but they all had a flopping, as they were encased, almost. It was too strange. These tombstone-shaped devices that were also ill-equipped with metallic pliers and long stick-arms, that were also thin and couldn't handle anything, and which were also deep-struck inside their bodies as well, gave the impression of making it up the very shoulders of every men, as if the men themselves were their sarcophagi and these metallic-inside of them, skeletons, of the sort, were but mad-crypts possessing the poor wretches. But that was not all. The outward skin-layer that diverged into their outer flesh appeared to almost be cabbage-like in terms of maim, and flapped closely in mind, kempt so, close to elephant ears, drooping in an utmost eerily, uneven fashion, mostly the area beneath the hole, and they were all in possession of these 'holes' that had been dug or must've been shot by some giant rifle, because the similarity to a gunshot gave too uncannily deformed of an appearance to be easily brushed aside. Lest one step forth and make a claim according to which this would be fully explained in anything but an unorthodox fashion, we shall continue with nothing short of a severely felt indignation, as is. They were broken automatons, or each of the tomb, these vaults, must've been in possession of some secret mechanism, an open tray, or trap door, for the mouth-area, but this was too low-placed, the arms, perhaps smaller arms worked the holes open, which caused the gauge to occur, that could provide a most thoroughly received, most unlawfully so, explanation of the sorts, accordingly taken into account with the preponderance of the uncanny fashion with which this's been received so far, for the maim that was left done, so, to be observed, and critiqued over the sloppiness with which it's been performed. A doctor, or a butcher? A god, or my neighbor, Stevenie? Who knows?

Rapist giant bloated slugs hid inside those tombs, inside every 'man'-equinn.

Hours passed at long a sill, with the flaunter of a chug, grievously commencing during the exhilarant ambivalent retrieval that was finely lain in front of the rabid yet, strictly speaking, still human, whose intermittent vehemence served as insolence's abode, frighteningly forbearing this unnaturalness that was their search for a few bodies that were not where they were promised to be; beings, who've been charged with this task, by something so treacherous, so deprave, that the very blood that flows un-freely still, pouring down the flatness of their very worn, torn, crude, ruddy, blow-by-blow-taken-having stepped on each other's -toes, there having been left plenty of reminders that their feet were unnervingly forced to receive the penalties according to which, they were not made think that they belong to any race that is of man - boots, now, painted in a crimson that could only have fallen from the bloody-perched eyes of a sullen maiden, responsible for gouging out her own eyes with a rusty, sharpened by grinding, elongated-thrust front-forwardly into an unclean chaos out of which large other out-worldly edges emerged out of, with plenty more spikes and in possession of many humanoid figures erupting out of them, chained by limbs that were not theirs, as well as insectoid appendages - cleaver that was twice the size of her body, and she's done it without even crying, even had a smile on her face while she's done it, an ugly smirk, did it out of nowhere, the nun, leaving the others confused as to how or where it's been taken from. But their names were Carnage- Blood-murder Rabid Ulgii, Jog Parnaselt Cotoonwaxer, Binfas-Yulloug Niggers, or formally spoke Neighers, he was called Neighers, since with bloated bodily forlorn there crude and what's this been.

Earlier that day:

'There goes the sourness again, as it happens for now, I'd say, more of a cherry chip than that of a sour grape dripping off you, Countess, is the river flow that drew upon your stench and drilled of lot, emptily in grave or sullen-rot, will there be no other day wilt comb in burning, for yours truly will not be here much longer, or entreat a ponder in the morning. See to it that there's no dauntless cottage that might receive you as you are.'

'Else what?'

'I think you'd rather not be made aware of what comes after that, since I know the people who are behind this act of yers!'

'Was it at any point in time your intent to fully, earnestly reveal onto me what you thought of my stay in his little tent?'

'You were my daughter then as you are now.'

'Still, as I lay in front of you, fully revealed as to be done, devoured, to've not showered in weeks and crudities that might not turn a key and ponder just around the hour?'

'I think we both beckon for someone to come along and claim you away.'

But I've already cut your arms and legs.'

'They shall regrow, see?'

Eight little ligaments, fetuses of this poor sod of a lady, growing roots of flesh dangling about; one ever had her miss-grown face, another –the miniature of an arm. One had a prosthetic leg, and from the stump that was her right arm, one hundred fully grown, made of plastic, clearly stamped and authentically certified by the Medical Division of Health Ministry and the Co., Nurses' Office, Doctor CEO, with a PDH in Medicine, Doctor's signature- exactly one hundred syringes, and the ten of Diamonds, the card, a car shaped tumor-faced demon also drew out of her back, breaking the chair in an instant, conjoined to her like fetus.

A Buckingham-Thermopile disaster in the making carried on by our lord who had once abandoned his surveillance over a simple unnecessary to himself disregard of all whom were lain once in his care by the second lord that had come before him.

'Fine-of-crane of a brothel-bottle, what's been had of ill, a preparatory light for what is to be performed upon you, when butcher's commence and butcher's done prying through plates that yearn for long-belonging to him when final ardent call is made benigned!'

A finery indeed, said his roommate, once presented with this gift of his, barely wrapped, unable to run. What a maiden she was, tall and broad, taken from a brothel, he wagered, this slick fellow, sitting on his top bunk-bed with the lady on his lap. Coarsely dined by wine and dyed, her hair but flocks of which only redheads strive for; broadened hips, a two, at both ends, radish-split, a hourglass that would pour just rightly at her feet, then the gallows, then the shallow river between the breast, holding longingly to be removed as well, if it were not for his presence in the room, holding her tied, and deeply tried, was the patience of this giant with his house staring upwardly at the ceiling, counting the specks of fallen over tapestry, the roof. The gallant pain that melted, the boots; a body is hidden a few meters above them. The ceiling? It has a hole in it, that's why he's starting to feel uncomfortable, because of that damned boot that he had, until presently, thought it to be some corner of the desk, since it was the back of the boot, and there's a certain similarity presently shared between the two of them. Draperies smoked. Salmon hanging at the door with a Carpel by his shoulder; an old fruit basket, walking down in March, the rock band, Tyranny – atrocities committed by Pol-Pot, Chrysanthemum Of cysts – By Robert Galloway, Nigger – by Niggers, a fruitful life that was spent in this very chamber, arrogance of having had a try at it but also failed from the very start, Simians, are they Human? Clogged toilet, on the right, a basket-full in it, of dreams, drowned, flushed, by ginger, many shots, lost along the way during a parade that happened not last week. Hourless synopsis, antiseptics. A merriment of crows that wearing boots outside, singing on a power-rail, a power-house power-strong power-putter powerline of drunk-macabre. Insemination, a beginning. No reaction, hatred has betrayed them, now, they're dining in a restaurant, fifteen miles away from Columbine.

An-almost, as a result of nitpicking its every flaw, tearing it apart prior to the already waited for fifteen minutes or so, engorged-devour, as to already appease a critique in regards to its presentation, this being promised by the waiter to have been hunted, not fished, by Ajax during a mischance throw of a spear at Achilles' lower, back-boned, backward-pointing at the horizon- hill, well-enough-but on a nastily-cut, with his pinkie lifted in an almost perfectly parallel to his body, that being the body of the chef, bearing hand, that was holding the knife while the so-called, allegedly claimed "masterful" preparation, that was soon added to Bin-Turnpike's list of fallaciously benigned, failed expectations, that in all honesty ended being more impressive than the meal itself, since his wholesome expectations, Deuces be told, of rashness and of brashness and of rashness and of basedness, foretold, that were lain somewhere being reason, ended up leaving him completely down, since, what he had received was nothing short of some worthy of pitying, chipped-filled with actually stinging thorn-filled, wooden-sofran raft, tarnished, drowned in gravy, properly salted, well-done, burnt on the sides, crisp, chipped around where an eye is still there, with a nail-trimmed tail, a hook-shape like a dirt Jew's nose –overall "looking" , plastic-fruit-like, salmon-stake, with ugly peach-sized, embellished in tomato-Hungarians that were living in them, taken for granted, olives, with American Baseball-textured skins- that had been cut like Injun's scalps before allowed to adorn the top of these red-swollen things, the natives of were more than willfully prepared to defend at all costs, even at the cost of their own lives, if it came to it. And a Coconut-sugar- 1kg, in it, soda, extra-large, with fries in it and salt. And a grease burger, extra-large as well; and it wasn't in a metal nor a cardboard case, but instead, it was wrapped in ham instead. And the entire table was then, one of the waiters, it wasn't a real restaurant but more of a fast-food restaurant chain thing. The waiter brought a barrel of grease, of mayo, ketchup, gravy, coleslaw, broth, And a gun, bullets, gunpowder, and killed niggers. All of which were dumped on the table. They call it, the American classic.

'Anything for her?'

'This:'

‘It is done.’

‘Are you certain of it?’

‘This nigger-child that had been in my possession until this very point, he’s finally done with. I’ve finally skinned him alive, removed his marrow and ensures his disgustingly ugly repulsive tiny, ugly unnatural head has not only been split-cracked open on a pan, an egg-shell finely cracked and pulled aside, but I’ve also ensured that his survival continued for long enough to feel me chopping him limb for limb, left leg, right leg, left arm, right arm, his repulsive big lips being tenderly boiled until become liquefied, before me spreading this disgusting substance across his face, rubbing it in, after it’s been removed. Little nasty creature, he tried screaming but I punched him in the throat and in the gut. I fucking love murdering these nigger-children, you know me. You know what I get like when a nigger child is placed in my possession, to my care. I can finely pretend I will take good care of them and their nigger-parents will buy that shit up. They won’t have a care in the world, taking me for a care-taker, and then I snap this little fucker in the back, putting him to sleep early. These little fuckers grow wrong, you know? Running around with guns on them, stealing, selling drugs; I’m glad I’m being given a free pass to, to pay my due to society. I’m a great person after, I can’t believe it sometimes, you know? I can’t believe how well off I am because of this. Tape it, selling it where I can, and the niggers? They don’t care. As a matter of fact, they’re glad, these niggers hate themselves more than everyone else does them, and that’s one of life’s greatest gifts to me. Being a grifter that is, just scoop him out those monkey’s paws, then I just slurp his eyes, his guts out; nigger-children work the best when they’re fresh as well; they’re undeveloped for most of their life-spans but when they’re young it simply gets so much easier to work on them.’

Nigger-brat, I wish I could still work on him, to pull and tear every facet of his ugly-dark nigger skin off, ugly little nasty creature, with a tiny-ugly head, their children, these’ nigger-children truly deserve it. For what I’m concerned off, they’re worse than animals and are ever so deserving of a worse treatment than any other creature on this earth. Putting tiny little nigger children on the iron block, strapping then in electric chairs, beating them to a bloody pulp, drowning them in their own blood, boiling their lips, castrating and feeding them their own cockles, lynching them while they’re lowered, tricked to run, blinding them with batons, it’s what these nigger-animals deserve the most. Archaic ghost hominid mixed, it’s why they’re so sub-human, mixed with filth, yet-to-be-matured criminals, every single one of them. Their nigger children are the ones that need to be kilt the fastest before they spread like the cancerous disease they are. And one has to be fast as well, he has to act quickly when it comes to handling these little slippery nigger fuckers; they’re born runners, I’ll give them that. But you cannot always outrun everyone, animals are fast but humans, the hunters know that it’s a matter of time until you catch your prey, you can only run for so long before you tire yourself out, nigger. And when you slip off during the night, then it’s time to cripple. Time to cripple this little nigger:

‘I told you time and time again that I intended on doing this for the longest time; it simply brings me so much pleasure, killing these ugly-nasty monkeys, they’re not meant to live after all.

That’s the main difference between us, I suppose. There’s no need to complain at all, it’s just a matter of time until these animals snap, that’s why I don’t like being surrounded by them. But this, this is only done for society and society alone, for the people’s protection. By doing this act, I ensure that people aren’t harmed, killed, beaten, assaulted, or put down, undeservingly by traitors or by their animals, the niggers.

Not that I can deny the pleasure that I'm getting, this rush of adrenaline that's being shot across my body, I can truly feel it, you know, even here and even now!

'Thinking about doing it again, aren't you?'

'You betcha' brother, I can't wait for the next promised batch of twenty or so nigger children, I've been signed off to just recently; it's been worked out between me and the big man. And this time they're gonna feel it coming, you know?

Doing it in the broad daylight does seem a little strange, but when the big man shows up out of nowhere one night on a call, promising you the opportunity of a lifetime, drugging the little fuckers, locking the windows and the doors, giving the other children a day off, so they can slowly walk off, while I do my business, it's something that no one in my particularly peculiar situation would simply brush off the opportunity off.

Plus, I's not going to abate it any longer. Not while I can helps it. Just to spoon off the side of another nigger fucker's all I'm in need of, another prick beneath their intestines, then another one to some heap or another and all would be good, you know?'

'Are you in need of something, perhaps a pick or some scissors? Some bloody tools I could spare? I'm certain there's some stored in some garage or something.'

'Good-god Mount Israel, what would I do without a Jew to make sure that he's got my back when I'm the cruelest? I'm certain you won't back-stab me, eventually, not to add too much, I know.

But I do think your people have come to enjoy the show I'm putting on as much for them, for you, as I'm putting it up for myself, you wager I won't turn on you if it ever crosses your mind?

I know what you do with your golems and I know what you do with men that chirp too much. But lett me tell you something, fellar, I know where your private kike-schools are at, I know where your ugly-beaten on top their heads Heeb's are, and don't take me for a nigger who doesn't tell who from what, because I'll let you in another thing. I've had my eyes on another one of your Anne Franks for while now, and I've got just as much repulsion for your kind as I've got for the niggs I've skinned alive.'

There was no silence between them, just trying to say something, but it was going to be carried on out just as usual, tying these niggers as a means of precaution, it wouldn't do no harm making sure these slippery black crickers didn't wake up too soon.

A bloated little prat-and-prack, theirs was the beginning; the Court was vetoed after a single snack was eaten, swollen and paid for:

'I pass this cross and only move for as long as I'm in holdings!' Says Fisfad's eight:

'Yes, you've yearned for it but could not be clouded to up-hear their throats. What's lessened and dissolved of your body's carried forth on the mule's back!'

'Anger calls onto him, hold that wretch behind.'

'Don't let him jog a fellow or he's going to steal whatever's left of your mind and soul!'

‘Silence, all of you are wrong, miscreants of no little importance that you’ve become, sullen-yet incapable of ointment imparted, after that, I’m going to have you slit off this wreckage and thrown into that tent.!’

But they were only hiding under the bough, upon the thoroughfare, up-throned by their knees, four kings drew from the now opened back, allowing the re-surfacing to begin again, desperate to point and trout. For their fleshy skin was almost runny-algae; come from cold exposure:

‘IT’s been a long journey, a land-lot we had to rear-ward traverse in order to get to you!’

From the outer crevices and out of the lot from where they crept, all but interconnected still to that long-train growth- they carried, -dead weight of latching on every arm a pillar as if they carried the entirety of the world with them, large, almost unnaturally grotesque- halls, drawing into one another, as they connected to the lower-side and the lower holes that were just made. Deeper inside each, lain figure-nasty wept upon protrusions that rose, cemeteries that only added to the death they mourned, lain forth before the even more swollen for their own good, disastrous, canes, blaming one another, bowel-shaped stones misshaped below, anchored to their backs, large skins of mean, appendages drawing back and forth as if scythes in the nigger-cotton-picking field, were used to cut off the sides of wall, oil-refinery in motions only horizontal-like, did they draw forth. No face could be seen but one thing, as if these long-and forth fifteen meters below and above, beneath and beyond, around them, blimp-crusted by spined-thorns that drew out the coffin-giant bullet they carried; a large reedy, -skinned almost womb-ical a reptile form, without a head, cocoon-fat in likens, but capable of growl and growth to the size of a giant bloated balloon filled with growth in the front but allowed, not, from behind, for that’s where the tendon was inserted in, the bowels of the beasts. Stopped from their match to cover everything, coating with their greasy coats of oily-stomps, sluggish-ooze, dolorous-drool, bloatedly the mules, all started repairing the broken kingdom that had been lain behind.

‘You’ve reasoned yourself with no man thinking we were ever capable of latching on this dream of bringing them back. Are the other kings not dead? You morbidly obese parasite of a man; I can see them dressed in armor, or did you not think I would observe? What you’re carrying behind your back, their tombs, bearing a world that no longer is inhabited by man but by colossal unnatural-devourers you’ve put to your employ, to grow as mold, to do as they’re being told, eating whatever they could please themselves with. Trying to eat us, and you would still feel not a single reason to have our mouths willed, or be shut in the same way, after that!’

‘What of it?’

‘Treachery spoils the heart, not that you would know that.’

He points at the hole in the king’s armor, the one below the waist, around his ankles, around his face as well, large, plain to see trousers with longer legs there coming out his back, still his-bent crickets that only grew larger, unnatural plains of bowls-emerging from a growth-sack that formed a perfect worm parasite Paradise with many humanoids, winged or horned, attached to him, who stole his arms and spoke from five empty buildings that were abandoned, ancient, near-gray in coloring, cracked and wicked, destroyed by age, repulsive as well, tent-ish, Injun at their tops but beneath them, they thinned then they deformed themselves, brick by brick as they could be seen despite them being the size of a bodybuilder’s biceps, but thinning only as it drew or made its way to his forearms, looped in this illusion of them being made out of ligaments of bricks that gave onto the illusion of stone-amassing and readdressing the smoke that drew from out of them, beneath that mass, in this perfect parasite, the forges were being willed to create, not smoke but a hard powder of mush-mixed with some alloy that hardened and began chiseling as if they were millions of stone-masons and stone-worker- hands, that began imprinting many seals upon every hatched, hatch and every door, everything that was even so simply made to grow, the dire-blooded, bloated plants, edifices of the hidden-kind, blind men that had their bones revealed; that fell onto the floor, then disappeared, appearing in another dimension without eyes, and facial features, legs but arms become their seconds, thirds, multiple even, heads, forming foaming-head there growing down, beneath them, forests that eventually melted into one great foam of features no longer recognizable as if they belonged to human beings but instead were allowed to grow inwards into lesser-uglier stills where they stood, ugly and wailed.

‘How angry, pitifully wretched you Mongrel of no reason’s become, do you even realize what’s happening around you any longer?’

Weyld

Pardon had been begged for even before it was a trifle more left over yet to yearn for therefore asked, before there were still reasons to hide away under the grasp of a single left-over thrust and forget what happened after that, when the time to shine and therefore thrice was left-over such endear for him over-here- yearned for lustful such a thought before the family of Lofty Ought could understand that they’ve been brought upon the justice of the lot, cast away, two fortunes lost over night, whereas given onto the hands of the lawful yearning were they pardoned for twenty empty days where they were to think of a needful lot to settle in before the day of the hanging was to come along theirs. And they had settled with as much as a simple stay; in the tavern where they endured a simpleton’s handful conversation, oft and of course what was to be done here was a matter of complete extrudency in terms of some belter’s cast, upon the tray being brought, alas, were they brought to a repast reminiscence of the days prior to the bringing of the guillotine:

‘Himonthrope Bill, I think we’ve been brought to the last of our day’s ever’ been, with word aloof, brought and offered onto Providence’s cast away’ ‘eye’ as witness to our sin’s day past where we stand and wait another second Rhine’s usurping!’

‘But brother Sav, of ill got, I would’ve thought myself incapable of anyone and everyone else who had been come onto the day to make a mutter’s such the case, if I besake ill-en climb, upon a mountain’s roughness come onto a stop, as I felt before but yearned to stomp onto my mane of asking. Why would you discern your satisfaction ever-near to my calling’s due? I’ve had nothing to do with it, nor would I see you eye to eye and discern a better dye than was withdrawn of cottle-brothel!’

‘But Bill, can’t you see that it is because of you that we’ve been thus cast away? That our families are scattered and picked upon by Sevens of They? For each will die most thrusting to be cast, upon the blade’s ever lustful stance when their heads and while cast down ever-since, looking at the crowds cheering as they’d only munch on bin-resin! But they’re wrong as you’ve been. And they’ll die in gelatine, all of them, hunted one by one, for only the heads of our families are to be executed in such a humiliating way, I've known it since withdrawn!

'Are we to flee for ever since and what of it if I were called to rinse?'

'I'm certainly of a mind to forget and mighty as I am cast away, death shall but not sparkle nor disease what little I've got left of my mind, nor will I be blind to the sufferings that they had forced me to rescind in order to get to you as such, begin!'

With which he gave a start!

'She's been sleeping for some while undisturbed by the harsh-noises coming from beneath one of the cradles that had been put in front of her during the wake of the lost souls belonging to the brood she had been a part of as well as the dead-children that belonged to the one who took revenge upon our kind, cursing us to die from pins entering the ceiling, falling over itself whenever there was time. It should've made no feasible, nor.'

'I think there's a wretch down the road somewhere.'

'Have you seen such a thing as one would be inclined to believe the wretch of?'

There was a tertiary oomph, come up on top the side of the shore-line's tobacco plantation field's fallen plane, war-maze with them underway the niggers dropped like puerile torpedoes from one side of another of the margined sea.

'I am Rape Toto-gun, run, run!'

Said the master's hand is gone written on top of it, nasty gun! It floated above the middle-chamberlain's chamber; in itself kempt. Twenty canons held and aimed, just about the place and everywhere!

The vileness of vice had entered them right as he opened the maw that had been cursing the dreaded night it had been eclipsed through the countless births that had occurred during the ingrained upon itself death mark branded by the riders as they dragged him from out of the openly-dug and exposed grave of gravel-lichen the sweepers, cleaners of rust and bodiless cuts that had grown out of the gutless perils thrust upon his father, the mould, petty cold and disrupt of many wordless woes, the better cues being alarmingly allowed to fashion a powdery snow to emerge from the thrones of the unknown bitter poisoned lepers that had culled the chains now wrapped around him. Rape Toto-gun had been run through the belts of rotten delights utmost-rendered heedless barren.

'I shall ask the leper-of no hue to join us!'

A slithering rifle was raised fifteen centimetres above his shoulderless glove.

'I am rather parched, may I get one of your most famed drinks that I may endow myself into the engorging blood you've spat on the floor, my lady of Tumour-cradles in which our children are made of glass?'

She was only cancer in terms of how much of a nasty personage she was accustomed to adopting when there was no one else around, other than her 'loving' husband, the wretched Pagan On-Y-Gieg the wretch of no lesser regards! A penalty for every lass!

'Our bloodied king is resting in that perilous birth, rotten to the core of roughened broad!'

But they had stood their time likened to the rodded by its either side tub inside of which the corpulent corpses started coming out of, with each spin, around the muzzle which, had barely served as a grate to prevent them from falling back in before being dragged back into that ugly, petty, yearned for slough, inside of which their kin had much abhorred every reed and stench and every trench that had been dug before their shots were called, by every observer who was standing alongside them!

'One of these days, I'm going to get back at these fucking scammers, I'm telling you man!'

A man off the streets:

'I'm going to make a fine list and don't mind me now while saying this but I intend on killing their families. And if anything I never forget when someone does me harm.

Scoundrels, filthy sub-human retards, dumb-cunts in this filthy Vet Industry, incapable of answering simple questions, refusing to cooperate. I say, when the chance will come on my way, they will become far more cooperative than they are now when I will have taken a hold of their children then skinned them alive in front of them!

And the pigs are useless! They're scum, low-lives, lazy, dumb, fat, podgy, dredges and the worst of the lot, maybe even worse than these sub-humans working in the industry itself!'

I wish I had killed the dog a long time ago. But the reckoning will come soon enough for them, it will come soon enough and then and only then will I have gotten my satisfaction.

'They need to be castrated, that dumb-cunt downstairs, the other one they're legally tied to, I'll get the better out of them, eventually, it's only a matter of time now!'" A cigar was lighted.

'Slowly, slowly, the years might pass, they might simply forget about my existence, but I won't. This grudge, this grudge shall be eternal, I shall keep this grudge for years and years to come, and the years shall not and never quench the thirst for vengeance that need be rectified by the alarmingly obtuse need for bloodshed I shall bring and cast upon this world!'

'A German-Kraut Woman, she's sucking my cock, you see, she's drenched in my dog's blood, somewhere in Berlin, you see? You smell me?

I'm seething with rage; But I will rape them!'

'There's nothing you can do bud, drop it. It's an up-hill battle and you just lost, you got the short end of the straw. It happens; move on.'

'But I, I can still do something! I can still! It's not fair! It's not fair! Why can't I hurt them? Why can't I get back at them? Why can't I do anything about it?'

‘It happens; let’s go for a walk; it will be fine. Nothing will come of it and it’s not worth it.’

‘You know what? I got scammed because of the kikes! I fucking hate kikes! I fucking hope they get cancer and that they’ll get Holocausted eventually!

It’s most likely because of them and their hooked nose antics, these filthy disgusting cheating cheap scamming racket-driven filthy Semites! Nasty inferior, sub-humanly degenerate low-life disgusting wretched little imbecilic in-human animal-fucking; probably because their Jewesses fucked dogs, it’s most likely the reason behind the Industry being made of scammers and cheats!’

Blooded-sand moon:

‘Where the parcel had lain over there, I would’ve swooned a must, if that’s between a cast and rust of many petty little lob-lets to’ve come onto the brow of the soul!’

‘Maligned for no longer than’s been had, my dear, dreary is the rod that’s been brought onto the plain you’ve presented me with! I can see the eyes of!’

It came right as if on command. A dandy-wax candle trunk-shaped torso-ish, frontward thrust, worn as a long hat on top some blob-head cockpit-shaped machine-rot scuddly pouch, with a musket blown end spread openly as if it were a maw at the end of this elongated horn coming out from all the way back; little crawly legs attached beneath it, all dangling while trying themselves, inch by inch to ride away. Some suture-growths covering its little leper eyes; icons from the old age strapped every here and there with some unnatural flung around its crown blotch of spools, all unnatural and dented, therefore strung by the lower ingrained in it many fish-carapaces of claspers, needle-rack-sprung-forth dromedary pinch-cots, and little lesser navel whores, all adorning the pimple rods; and the unnaturalness of the lower-sprung upon itself dark filament of wrung and slither’s gone command coming from the lower heads. Infants-cherubs, barely-developed, fetus-choral, octopi-moulds of mutated humanoid faces that succumbed to entering the elongations of sea-horse, downward pointing peashooter racks of foils, toils and the most unnatural of things that emanated from the most unnatural rear-ends the filth with which they drowned with less succumb! Their tiny sea-horse tubular mouths were equipped with intercom-speakers through which the many pipe-protrusions, these frames, inner skeletons of many elongations and long extensions lead to puckers, large heart-organs of lesser grottoes, which had been nearly if not completely devoured by the armament of singing pores, breeding pores stored inside the throng of this flaccid pouch of a blob-head, carried by the flying horn; right into the room, the same wretched room it was waited for inside. Each chain that dangled blacked as if by tar yet laid still attached to the most unnatural of the darkest, most hardisome protrusion the barely centred by the manifolds of clot allowed.

‘Least you’ve got anything, if anything alone to add, I would resume the incantation that’s been brought along the day!’

But the night had only come for them to amass. Out of the recesses from which the darkest corners of the lot and the burdened by the shrill, the spiel of incantations ever-since. They came from the recesses, they came from dark abodes, from pits and hobbles; and out of the darkest corners of the dirt. From which none which may've still allowed so canter come but still; of therefore winced and wince there after came the most innocuous chills they brought from the cold-filled red, the one that bore heirs to the children of the dead, but none whom might yet still remind, or so remember, therefore blight, of lesser ones!

'You, wretch, dredge that's come from the abyss, present yourself, for I've seen since, not a single plot that I'd create, not a single brought onto my eyes, blinded as I am, sense. I have none and I've yet seen such perdition as none'd suffice to satiate this succour that's but mine alone, hidden in wretch and in disguise!'

Going to the second-to-itself by the right, left-headquarter lobby where, fifteen years ago an ancient colossal poultry-rock had spilled the blood of the first car – oil still crawling by the side of a mourning cone, one could find but the nuisance's end strapped to the rear-front end of a tambourine whose belly shape was corded by a few long-tusked men that spat on it dumbfounded at the sight of a dumb-throttling man with a little head-leper's bed coming out his sprawl! Time for ever-prowl!

Two blobs, long and longing for touch; one of them incapable of bothersomly nurturing its child, Hyhghaal.

'Shall I raise the serve, perhaps, a little tad higher, and would that do?'

'Stop, that's way too high, I won't be able to keep up with you if you keep doing that! Slow down, will you?'

'You know you won't be able to keep up unless you put your back into it. There's literally no one out there that's willing to take you in other than I, for what's worth and what's happened. Now serve!'

Another set followed in, they were serving an amicably- distinguished row of fourteen leaps of scores that were sore, downplayed and missed around the wow-charade! A prom with all the dead-kills put in wardrobe goals of fifteen to one; put him in the ground, two feet under!

'And I suppose you'd know that, would you? You'd happen to know it by accident as well, is that right? Because I knew you had a damn hand shoved in it from the very start!'

'You die knowing nothing, wretch! And you shall burn in hell with skin-tosses people becoming rhombus kites of head-extending shaped worms that shall wallow into your giant gut, dear red giant of skin!'

For the man he was serving against was no humanoid!

'Niggers.'

'Trevor Noah, you're a fucking nigger, fuck you monkey!'

'Whoa!'

'Ice-Cube is such a dumb nigger, his ass is still sore from that one time Eazy-E shoved his cube up his ass!'

‘Here’s a few more to spare, the slither of Skins have managed to get the main station overrun. I suppose there’s not going to be any more chances for us to reunite with the mole once they grab his flimsy hands and connect them with the plug!’

‘I can still see him on the radar, shall we follow?’

Some pieces of his ruby forming his pure-crystal seraphim chest of minerals and other stones began glowing right to the point where his finely sutured limbs started prancing around the crudeness of a little puffy membrane that had amassed beneath him. Various flattened as if skinned and made into carpets – people could be seen beneath his feet, trying to escape; dancing as well as they could until benighted no more would there be a shot come onto the brow of near-sightened yet beheld, need to satiate the hunger that ate at his hand.

Single room; one of the lights kept flickering at a weird interval.

‘No one’s at the door.’

‘There’s a few spics here and there running around but I never thought them as anything more than some annoyance, wouldn’t you think the same? I truly think there’s a, there’s something down there, go check it out!’

‘What it is supposed to be?’

‘I don’t know!’

Both men, niggardly trying not to step too deep into the strange little slip of light that fell from above the steps; it was highly disturbing, beyond it, useless trying to do something of the kind; the kid brought a popper with him, took it out, like a horse gun spitting in his face, trying to see whether or not he could have a say in, and when it happened, it was late. The music had stopped and they were already half-way in trying to eat some of the Pomegranates; these ghoulish little pops of skin, covered in themselves, deep within their grasp there being, a more benighted slither-peeing, of four great heads that drew from the ceiling, they stopped their urination only to spit blood in the men’s faces. And it was something beyond disturbing, it was something that could barely be accounted for; as the men behind the floor ate the worms off the ground and bred with the inbred animals they released from the hound’s mourning boar; stitched together elephantine! A door opened from this bulk of meat, this mass that entered through the door, forcing its way in. The faceless killer had entered the very same room they were in fifteen million years ago when he, the pretender had aroused from beneath the depths of the most wretchedly benighted of slithering needle racks inside of which he still clung to the very leprous timbers humanity had granted him to cut in front of them, during this night-continuous archipelago of disease that served as a night-tremble entry into the last of the slackened hours. The ones that followed after as the hour of the Moon continued during the preparations needed for the sacrifice to be emitted again, during the second death, whose darted occurrence had granted a night-close levelled benevolence of a most unruly kind, which in turn offered no less nor any more than needed, an excuse to set oneself in flight, as they had asked for. Inside that room they ran in circles, desperately depressed yet incapable of incarcerating the disease that had accumulated on the dirty beds; whereas this insufferable yet detestable thing had to be immediately brought to an end, rightly so, before the fluidity of the mass that had encompassed their guts could somehow reach the feared critical exponential that threatened to kill all of humanity-stored in see-through jar-things, lain in this room's archive, devoured by, niggers had been exterminated a long time ago, as were spics, kikes and gooks, a trifle, no less; by means of possession. A blasted robe of skeletons attached to a bile-anchor, a pair of rhomboid-deformed globes that were faced by a single one, deformed yet seen from distance as a bubbly underwater nigh-mirage of a screaming man, filled with rage but eyeless, humanoid but red, purple and changing in appearance as his desperate cry would turn to steam and pressure, adding on. He was the god of Lurid and Horn. The bones were of no marrow but instead of some hardened coilish, in terms of texture, tinier little men that squirmed in place, and tried pushing out, gelatine, nonetheless, and hard-filled with pus-iron yet arms filled with tendons threw around, bastardly trying to grab at what they could, trying themselves, but to no avail, nothing of this kind could do, and it hadn't been any easier, nor would it do to scream at it, since it wished little deformities, humanoids made of feet or a big diseased; a uglier big diseased, one of his eyes pushing out, and the lashes, but feet, elongated but carrying a spine-blob that was a longer oblong-looking star of silver inside of which the children that were stolen from the Moon had been implanted it, hybridizing themselves into some amniotic pool, before solidifying that is, then, and this was done only to prevent them from being aborted, since this disease that was abortion was but a most illimitable disease of the lot, something inconceivable that was, almost universally banned, with some exceptions for the mongrels and niggers; needlessly said, the wretches that appeared had encrusted their arms around their throats, the two men incapable of making do with the strangeness of the lot in which, once cast, this hubris, yet, one could only yearn to call it thus; a groove of the sorts, where they lynched the nigger-things or those that happened to look after them; if one could only keep such track, he'd know that even though the niggers went extinct, they were still mention in the laws as well as the reiterations that would bring one such thing in question, as it happened or does happened with mutations in nature that spread, the nigger, the nigger could yet again re-emerge, and that is something that needs to be avoided at all costs.

'We are not to fall at your hands, wretched tyrant, we shall fight to the brittle lest heed and breed of lessened kindness' dark abode and we shall thrust each spear of our kingly kind in name but praised; as fashioned Lord as there will be and wilt it be from dark disease and peace to be, called under the circumstance; call to me, my wretched angel, such Cherub; I can only bask upon your sight knowingly that I am alone, ran along, during your flight!'

And it emerged, this little perfect thing of purity and awe. Tall dark and mage of small contortions but simply put, he was no angel. A disease entity of Entropy that was benigned by its own growths that had entered the first succulent brow of a boat, a canoe inside which lay, many remains, similar in veins; aristocracy prevailed; for it bore a crown, reedy up-to-brown forlorn with tiny crude tidy-blots attached to the main part of which cast two and four; two great beings attached from the sight, but in the back, two more beings sprouting out of them, conjoined no less, had made the grown of his great head; tall which had succumbed the sprout; water being release from the end of a tap with smaller rock-nigh eagle sharp beaked- multiple heaps of a most structural supporting jambs, most darkly erected, but holding on, four feet beneath it, all spreading, zigzagged but from beneath each of them, large piston chaser cradling long rods would push it past a point where it'd become impossible for any gulp of air to be taken while the gas was being released from beneath it; a large blob beneath and above it. Shaped like the Queens, both of them dead, but swimming within, chasing at one another as their spirits would enter this tall self-prophesied king, to step.

‘I’ve come to bloat a child away and turn it into a lost jewel you shall use from this point on to kill the one nigger in the past that stole from you, and downward I shall cast you if you fail to bring this promise of disgust to an end!’

They ran in circles, surrounded by little splinters that immediately shot from beneath the ceiling, at them and beneath, there, and there, wherever to have been called or lest beseeched for, such aroused!

‘I have to kill this nigger child, I have to do it right! I have to drive it in his thigh and see this nigger cry. All day I lynch but nigger coo, I must follow but all way through, or else the niggers start to squirm and when it happens, I should turn; for monkeys chimp and chimp-aroo; I must kill them or else I’m through.’

IT would be unwise to ascent and ascind a profound surmising of leprous Mortem driven forth a bunch, chucked inside the truck, unwise afterwards, thinking of it as a solace of empty-snaps, fingers being cut and added to the poultry of disease they carried forth inside the little cave they settled no farther-long than fifteen days, a-gong being hit time after time again in this valley-shaped fat-ostrich flat without legs but two blobs instead as romboscous as its trunk, without a neck either, but instead shaped-more so close to a revolver with two giant maggot worms coming out of its mid-and top of its body-in cavern depressions, this being the general outline of the place of dwelling they found themselves going around into as well as through, during the cessation period while the other worming globular regions that had been dug by the unknowns through the mountainous decrepitude of the rows of skin-plod-rotten snapped forth snow of glass, as there was a lot of it found in this new cavernoid foundations, fountains of it, albeit initially identified under the form of some crystalline shape instead; of some fiddling firth and girth that added only to the serependicious, yearned for, adjourned cradle of parasitical Pantheonic-looking figures that appeared to slowly form or reflect in the same very crystals that came out of the bowels of some rotten earth they craved to give their life for, livid forms that eat now. Trapped inside these unnatural formations. The volition of the world fell apart after all, fifteen years ago when the men of the children of the women died.

‘Women died, what an appealing thought. To think that women would die. To see them suffer and wreath in pain as they’re violently killed and driven through the backside of a hand’s front-side pass after into her skull as she would enter the wall and then die- bleeding to death, with your fingers shoved deeply inside her brain-matter at such a level that she would beg to be killed in an instant, right as you unbuckled, preparing or much prepared to rape her violently, with a switchblade coming out of your pocket; imagining she’s that flaccid-dyke Butterfly, whose tits are butter cup moulds you shave the top off as your tongue would connect to her behind. Those things, those things are what a man needs. Are what a man needs right now. I want to kill women, I want to kill them, I have to kill women, for my souls beckons it to happen; otherwise, I could die, of a broken heart during the old world’s aged souls’ respite. I want to kill women, I dream of homicide; my birth-right is the knife, my sign is the bleed. I must kill, I must slaughter, I must appeal the hatred I bear prior to the coming of the gelatine!’

For the gelatine cured all, for the bodies that fell beneath it got contorted and retorted into broken bone-things, effigies of put together fire-burnt pieces of wood and snuff. They sniffed.

‘Sniff, sniff!’

‘O’er there, by the lynch nigger-stand, where they trench one of the little puffs of a smoke and trails and drenched-upon the sight contorted! I, lo’, shall ask as less. Don’t look at them as they contort each leper into one of the smaller stands, they’ll ruin it before your sight!’

‘And who are you, Vice of little proud?’

‘I? Of Yore, am called the Breed; I brought upon you a single wretch, beheaded with respite, and headless as these riders come, and trial and lest beheld, shall call, be called, and call upon command but stilled. Upon my word and a single one will have them all contort and wretch in Silver-spiel, for they can shatter and reform.

Their organs are made of smaller gods that had been taken and have been killed by I, the lord of Much Abhor, Candle-Ark Roger.’

‘I see, I see, but where to forth and what might we seethe upon the longing field that could’ve come?’

‘I brought you a single numb for the road, as it’s quite far from where we stand, and where to, there we go!’

Upon being forced on the stroll, as they followed in, each prior sill, the ones that followed after since and the ones all around, withdrew; what might’ve been had and therearound, was plotted in the ground, then released, therefore the caprice that followed after since; was ill-inclined. A wretch of more or so, much fewer spiels, such was it benigned, then seen.

‘Call our hour, you who holds the spear!’

Out of the hole it drew out like a tendril readily begun and set in the process to disappear whenever claimless woe, and whenever one such thing might’ve come upon the toe, elated. Elated in the sight, benigned; it drooped, drooled but many of the tiny breeds held upon its crown instead of let release and therefore after. A slither of a splinter, shafted through his shoulder, beneath the head, a few meters past his eye, reaching an abrupt spot, this beam of metal that’s been shot but kept away from the release, revealed as it did, his nature, the undying, the painless ponder, as he stood almost broken in half by the artillery shot from beneath the bowels of the ground; as if whisked in to life by a sullen-flaccid angel, vigorous in resurrection; a cotton-made face broken apart, every limb the same, in a sutured-toy apparent to every sighted joy that followed in; that he couldn’t move.

‘You’re stuck!’

‘I’m here to stay for an eternity or more than one, depending on the stance of the council, with which I’ve yet to speak to or about my short-come upon laceration!’

There stands a Gyublii Onomaistor in his friend’s tenderly promiscuous cotton-picking plantation wagon; nigger – unrelated, brown-boy; in his turbo-garage plant compactor of nightmarishly yet to be endowed dreams with a tawny globe that drew away from sight.

His first out of seventy-five horns -horn:

‘We’re not here to stay. You know what happens to most people who do anyway. They’re not going to tell us how to get out of the tube, and it’s growing stale. I can taste the stench of the mercury and from what I can tell, it’s growing ever so much sour than before!’

‘You’d be an expert in it Jygg, if you’d only knew where to search.’

‘Shut up, all four of you, by the side of the wall!’

They listened, every single arm an addagagae of petuls.

Bloody fools and bloody imbeciles, all of them, trapped. A reap had come and left behind a heap of aging dark, a cover that fell apart. They were staring at each other from the distance, every single man in just about the same conceivable situation, trapped. Large bulbic towers; caged, prison bars; staring at each other or at the two cortex-pods inside; each man staring at the formations as they spat, crawled, and leaped around like madmen, trying to figure out a way to escape. But without a chance at being heard, since the distance had barely allowed for either one to take a plunge; since there was no way to be heard or taken out, they stood and stared, the tall red-mad butchered beneath, rooted with growthed leg-shaped bottlish-humanoids that squirmed-worms or eels in shape of, vibrating at strange intervals. This strange bloated fan, an imaginary splattered on the floor heart, of splutter that fluttered and carried them after, showing up with a cup, whereas he could barely help to be wont or a lick inside, drowning them aware. Purple-busy towers, like lanterns or sticks holding them cradled after, with almost facial figuratively distinct head-tops that drew on top or were made carved out of sedimentary rocks that drew in and out in the black curtain from above. An artificial sky of black, a stormy night; whereas they only showed what little entanglement, since their ugly nigh-hid, in the pitch-blade heap allowed for something of the sort to be messed with or allowed, lynch-hangings, drooping-standing, lowered like spine-bone.

‘I am their servant, you know, little man? You haven’t even figured out how to start the legs stored inside the body of the boiled cone!’

A bone protrusion lance-aware; had them stored inside-but held by littler feet that were all slightly pushed in, held by scabies or by rings that would simply shove themselves out. A wretch of many heed-aloud, a snout down there, in the quirk, a slumber after, dirty swamp and muck of girth.

‘What’s keeping them alive?’

As he said it, albeit it shouldn’t have hit the mark just yet, there was this, this alarming thing that could barely be felt or aroused the feet, since the bead of the endangered allowed for such Reagent-kingly set a price to follow, and frown upon soil-lest tilted wretch, had it been shallow, over moment’s solace, green respite. Angered was the human-like; upon being spat upon by its demonical rite. For it spoke of passages of filth:

‘All of these are ripped from the body of the boiled feet and solace green defeat as might be had, I would have you tilted; green and germinate the right that follows. It cannot be prodded, after morrow.

But to say the least, little man, there’s something there, down the lost soul of Whore-erect!’

A maiden, a bitch and cunt; these bulbs, they made him uncomfortable to be thought about, all of the sudden, as if he were an embryonic thing, or fetus called to ask and since, what could be called but shallow birth and to be certain of the dirt. She was wet, but the fluid spilling out of her, the many towers that were at war, and birth.

‘Remnants that had been contorted since; they keep growing like viruses because no one’s put the time to completely wipe them out or ill, the tatter-lust, will I be inclined no less of such simpleton’s a minded right. You are alive because you’re useful! For the time being anyway; but needless to say, as soon as you become less, let us commence the say, incompetent in stance and lay.

You shall be ejected and sent down there, where’d at pine and pimple dyed by cry of lustre, will be held upon fragile down-caster!’

Especially the veiled eleven hundred people that were only present there standing and leering at the strange man. Jonathan Cop started smashing one of the shorter ones, shooting at it with the gun while only being approached by Lancaster and March Manchester who were both open-firing on one of the small reptiles that had crawled along and were only trying to get a good shot of the smaller folk that were forked in the cottage. They were running around; Bob suddenly opened one of the valves, trying to steer the urge in, putting up a single wrangler, while they were impressed by the head light. The second light started flashing. Gathered around it, three of the men, like on top some fire tent, playing it, throwing sticks. A smaller army came from the north, made out of Vulgars, small piston shooters in their arms, carried the sea- seasided both directions. Frangler intercepted them, with the help of the small globe, leading the small folk on his back chained as if they were niggers. Both parties met and opened fire, all at the same time, trying to open up the ruse. Canopies of large, obtuse trees falling over; slowly being moved by the leaping Yolk of the ship once they started converging in the middle of the Sea-fire where the Tartar had begun emerging from the fire pit. One man died shot in the neck, before the flower could surface again, the sky had merged with the land instead. Jonathan put back his gun, drawing back, no longer certain of what was happening around him. An end to the open fire resulted in a sudden change of pace and air and Four am.

Night’s passed.

‘Lady Orlos-UYg, point us and we’ll go!’

‘I’m not listening to you any longer, nor while I’m surrounded by the screaming abominations erupting from beneath the Bowels of the death!’

Fifteen of them sprouted from beneath the ground, surrounding her in an encapsulated bubble made of see-through people that reflected the images of her fallen children. They were screaming at her. The others left, fleeing in terror, incapable of muttering a word while these disturbingly had to look at figures were mocking her, dancing around, spitting inside again, wrenching and coating her with the most unnatural of things there were. Giants of powdery remains they mixed her with in this bubble as they prepared to boil her alive.

Night’s come to a still, sun’s an open fire:

‘Lady, you’re gray, you’re rather pale are you not?’

Her inner voice, her inner voice was something that would not suffice. The sun was falling apart, with a few corpses following in. First, children she had missed, embryonic-filled fluids covering them; thrown into some pit she hardly felt it's come onto the sight. It shot itself around, crawling like some dark eye on the ground, moving forwardly in some thrust, wild surroundings, followed after by many other eyes of similar sized antennae bearing damp-people –all armed; thrusting themselves into a part-a circle run-around before being allowed to finally shoot into the distance in some dark spot they all disappeared into. The maiden barely saw them come out into the light before disappearing. Banging, banging on the door, banging, banging until their arms were tiered and they could do it no more!]

End of the line, stood into the bubble-dome for too long.

Somehow there are eight suns surrounding it, in the middle of the night, the stars trying themselves, affirming, each to their own, whether it'd be dignity or solace in the making, lest be called; or else declined as they wasted a second more, caught in the dump.

‘Open your mouth, I need to see what’s that you’re hiding in!’

‘I knew it, there’s it, another one of those small suns, open fire, crush it to smithereens!’

‘Call, call yee, call ye for more!’

It’s become a forest of so many long rifles and raised from beneath the ground girths, figures that were uncannily but profoundly distorted and forlorn, lost.

Working on one of the smaller platforms allowed them to draw breath for air’s come to an end as well; empty thoughts running in their heads.

God Hooligan emerged victorious with little to no fashioned an exchange having carried over.

‘Are we to call upon reason then?’

Said a voice; uttering for a second’s pass.

‘I’m surprised there’s no one here to make something out of it, now that you’ve so encumbered all with stanced thrust, lest besekt of similar of kin disgust, nonce, there’s a slither of a guillotine down the way. Heed such thrust and seek part way with the one locust in which your kind shall settle!’

‘Draw in the breath and let the tap run its course. It shall devour the shallow reeds and enter one of the broken heads around. I can feel it, bespoken for reeds, twas to enter from the frontline into the feet of the brothel-worm. And it shall tell us what’s good for the goblin-goop pus’s entry from the frontline to the parapet of emptiness into which the draught shall enter from the front and into the lobe of entry’s brothel!’

It-had come out of nowhere, there-to stopped! If it were any sooner come to be, if they had listened, there-to see, none of this might’ve happened!’ Empty rotten, had the gate subside. And the mountainous region pushed from the side, with a broad top-see through livid gutter puff of jelly, like a seagull’s fully extended wing come out of the side of a top of the volcano into which it pushed, hybridized and drew out-and-aside into a chaotic mess of squirming growths. Some railway pushed out of the ground, moving slowly towards one of the wagons.

A step was taken back, abashed by what was going on, throughout the day, and which's passed:

'Open the door for a moment, will you? I need to take a peek inside!'

A fourth and a third and a lower sided one, velveted by a devilishness that's never looked more pristine than it had looked just then, fronted by a large herbivore-stand of little puffs that drew after, many of which bled on command.

'I say, this isn't something I've been brought to be minded of, not that I would yearn for such reason as to have them handled. Yet, I yearn for desperation during a time's never seen abhor.'

'What's the reason behind it?'

'I scorn how protuberant this' house over here's become, if you don't mind me saying this, I wager we've been here long before the falling of the caprice's temple, before we could've had our bodies rubbed around our swollen bent and. I think we could've foreseen a body of no mind if it were pulled and thrown again, aside!'

'What of the Iles then?'

'What of them?'

'Do they not serve as any kind of reminiscence of what happened here before and what's been happening long before we entered the premise?'

'Have you gone mad?'

'I? I? How could I got mad when it is you who's been cast into a brothel that's belonged to death and the aghast, cast into mould-ry and the likes of rotten mast? I can see you already in fifteen thines fold; playing with the corpse around some dug-up ground because you cannot help yourself when time's come thine and tinder's brothel up the up-front, lest besekt of frontier-line's calling.'

And that would've been the end of it, if he were wrong. But as it turned out, his long-time wretch, the dredge, the companion he had only seemed to be of a mind to receive a moment's long-fired for trench, as the trenches would've had them stilled; had contemplated a splinter of a leg, since. In the bosom of the lady's death, in her beg, the pagan's head. Resting on the pale, the damp, trying to get a hold of her now; harder than the thrust abhorred, only to be met by his gaze no more as the fellow rushed out of the room, made it for the stairs, trying during his desperate attempt to hide even the slightest, most uncommon wretch and tender's loin and mourned for after. His mid, his thought of alabaster; that he had carried with him ever since. Next morning had its coming in the making's stirred; suffice to say, enough's been told and bordered an insufficient scream's purloined for-grin, for they were staring at their pudgy soups, like two men of lesser wonder. Of no wont and there-come after:

‘What frightened held and lesser sight, what has come onto you when happened upon trifle’s rite, to’ve been ill-possessed and to have come to the point where you, of all would so impress such a thing onto me; I could think of any less, no more.

You’re not the same man I’ve met before!’

‘For certainty would serve no barrel, but I have slept with a corpse, that’s something that would serve my sightened stare no better. Yet, do you starve the entreaty’s dark abhor?’

‘Am I to be made a fool of?’

‘Only if you choose to spend another night, since, for all safety’s green recline, I could help you with no less than helped with.’

They each left for different rooms. Somewhere lost around the house. Cruel fate had this one ripped in half and openly staring in a long tunnel that diverged into something close to fifteen or seventy open crevices that allowed the squirm. A wormed-down tunnel, eaten-ly fallen apart. With ring-wormed depressions, and some unnatural things that allowed entry from the hinder trifle’s second sight; some dire bloated truck-tire formation at the end, which diverged into the underbelly’s underground dome-bubble depression into the ground, a filthy atom-shaped abyss that was lighted by a trifle lamp’s discerning light. Lead through the tire-bloat, which was a fleshy growth of pulsating pink, with many faces, nigh-humanoid that grew, swallowed Pittek Borjk, allowing him entry through the fifteen meters standing between this sacred gate and the balcony lain on the other-side. This ugly tire-bloated thing had looked like some bubbling egg-sack filled with features devil in the making, thrown in the back, Pittek-s lain, standing almost nigh-erect upon his feet, an ancient door-shaped floor on top of which he found himself standing, looking at what he thought to be a normal light, but instead was an arch-piece drawn into a lob-long needle of flesh, the tip of which that lay at its end being a glowing cylinder with an empty race of see-through niggers that were being punished inside of it as well. A small raised panel, of a bout fifteen centimetres or so lay by his right side; yearned for to be used, as he was promised for, as to extend forth, only for a moment if he wished to. First the sightened wonder.

‘Why did I make love to that corpse only to be made by such fallaciously a beauteous wonder?’

Seconds pass:

‘Alone, finally, alone, in my very own room with no one to bother me as I make my way through the steep incline of darkened thoughts, as I lay on my own, away from that wretch I set aside and threw off board!’

The mirrer was shiny with a piece of sum coyote spread on the rifle fire pincer top, while the gum was chewed across the fingers, being dragged from floor to floor until the intermediary singers approached massive organ growth. Having come from around the dark surroundings, thinking themselves better for the lot, they communicated something with him that he could not understand immediately, since their faces had been ripped apart. Tall and wide, held like solar-panes, absorbing dead-skin from the open crevices between the garden, from the walls, beneath the plates, the carpet and from across his very wide-spreadedly coated vest, with little, but giant in comparison to their initial size, fish-hooks, coming out of his chest, lower than that; but stopping right beneath the knees, perhaps the ankles wore them behind, yet pointedly they flashed with skin-tissue as they wriggled away. They weren't made of iron after all, but were come-out-of-his body, skin-tag like or conjoined to him like twins, appendages shaped that way. Dark and even darker as they amassed even more cherub-like coal-pus inside their disturbingly disgusting fluid-wearing pockets, that they had played with in the surmounting morning. At noon tea is served.

He felt strange for a while, perhaps one of the longest hours had passed just then.

'What if?'

He wondered, roaring off his guts. What if?'

'What if I inserted gravity in my muscles instead of roids?'

Their size could be unfathomably, barely holdable underneath the frail bone mass hidden beneath the mount-filled layers of growths that had started pushing out of him. Large oblongs that started sprawling out of the first of the many tendons that began sprawling from somewhere by the side of his shoulder-blade; shooting pops out of the back of his head; two high-crown made unnatural crows sprouting from somewhere deeper than his spine, forming a semi-angular c that connected to both of his arms by many piston-like spears of pumping bloated organic matter, whose unnatural made-to-be close-of kin to some unnaturally deformed little spectacle of bloat and grins, brown-tawny beasts whose heads were stomped then stitched-put together as they would continue eating this unnatural thing as it would start pushing out its hinder legs, as many as four, forming combs in the back. His already-bent and contorted two legs had become irrerecognisable. A great torn-horn of the unicorn meaty horn that was barely held in place sprouted out of his chest as well, grabbed as soon as it came out by his arms, forming a ring as the angular-tusks began being lodged into it, almost splitting it in half by force but only beneath it, since it only needed to release some of its infant-demonic dregs that it had kept a hold off, sweeping in the back a trail for them to be implanted it. Unnaturally set, a great-top of the collar bone-having absorbed the shoulders as well, the bone and the remaining grim-looking fragments of there ever being any remotely resembling a complete humanoid; there stood a giant half a head, like that of a giant, half a nose perched but resting on nothing, as it was only held by naught else than the two arms lodged inside the tusks. A snake-body-ugly torn apart contortion; John Pekgh; thought he of the rottenness of the room, four blob-ghostly- in appearance spectres holding the lamps inside the room, tens of them, lowering the platform on top of which it stood until the chains began drooping in his very head, feeding him as they were fleshy, talking to him as well.

'Seethe thee longer-still and globe of wretched ill be stilled!'

A missoportune moment had almost thrust the entirety of the entreaty down the drain; they had almost come to shove one past the drainage, and the train of thought submerging after dark, they alone might've had their grubby hands pushed inside, lest besekt to answer the adjourned:

'A reddened bloody carpet, yet I see no butcher's mask on top the wall. Across so many plates of butchering and of turnkey blood, how is it that there's but one head missing, after all, I was the one who brought the disciples of murder onto the brows of your land. I, the very same person whose personage is still kept under scrutiny by the masters of the wretched Crown, who had been stolen from their land and thrown disjointedly forlorn onto the brow of a prison tent where they're to be torture, in a most horrendous fashion, hour after hour as I will it to be so!'

A tall booth- with blobs on every side of it, see-through as to reveal the machinery that was working its way in-and-out while the pistons and the elongated cylinders and the train-steam maker-like engine that could be seen only from some remotely hidden- higher than thou art, put on top some ledge on five floor standing apart, floors above you –angle; that was rounded around the top, akin in appearance to some electric shaving device with small circular trays sticking in and out, that would’ve been taken for completely filled onion rings without the innards; this booth being pointed in the front like some unnaturally deformed beak that was twisted and contorted frontward into a long ledge-bridge-long fat beam- cylindrically flat or some oblong cut on either side, twas connected at its front end to a most peculiar thing; the chin of it, being welded to the end of the ledge; inwardly conical pointing at its own gut –was its mouth, which was facing the sun and the stars and the clouds; an ugly blob face on top of it with a most peculiarly deformed head-shape, nigh-like that of a magician’s pointy hat but worse than what it looked like, its entire head was a giant front-ward, from its side, or pointing at the back of the ‘booth’ shaped body-machine ‘incisor’ with many angular rodded-cords sticking out of it, shooting back at the trays as to submerge into them, as if they were murky pools where children lay dormant in sulking hibernation. A coyote or jackal, or some shark’s tooth whereas this ugly body lain in the back, limbless, and drooping flaccidly below, lay likened to a big-corded tadpole; squirming as if impaled by this wretchedly defect machine; an almost long beaked tree knocker, the ones that keep pumping bark. Hooked into its body, as it prepared it, had it come to the lower end of the gate, where the chains still promised to draw on breath and, siphoned bough to crack and splatter, green alike.

‘What’s this? Have I been brought a friend already? A plaything and companion in disease?’

None shall know any better than what was to happen here, in wretched stillness and in the light of an empty drill that was lowered ever after. He had gathered as much and would only lay arm swollen, and swollenly forlorn if time allowed it so.

‘You are called to attend the lower church and shall do so only if the time is right for your soul to be blessed or taken for the broth of an empty cord still lain in waiting to be connected to one of the intermediary puddles!’

‘On which detrimental authority am I called to attend, little play-thing? I can see no ruse taken from the brothel’s end. Nor would I’ve seen myself uncannily distorted, turned to stray and made forlorn to lose each day thinking about what might happen if I were caught!’

‘Yet you are revealed and you are revealed alone as well. Where is your travel companion? The one that had been dropped during the cast-off, near the bodies wrought in pain and pained? After the cowls of the darkened strays?’

‘I could only piece this together from what’s been had. He’s stolen someone’s heart and I cannot tell where he is now!’

‘Then you shall suffer, consequentially so; the pleasure of suffering for his sin!’

And lead the way it did. He followed with an unremarkably subservient a caprice without which he could not plead, guiltily so to the strange aversion the brothel of snow that had been purloined outside while he was out during the hunt and during the come onto the shroud of cemeteries that were brought to his awareness after. IT’s been so long since he had seen the garden, which was remotely anything twas had been fifteen years ago, during the age of desecration where the illamentable beasts had devoured the great morsel whose flight's mark was still up there, in a place where darkness had lain it, with great succumb to great despair to have come after. Its outline was black. A black blob on a cloud that was white, as flashy and chiselled as marble, king of kings of Alabaster; yet yearned for to be reminded of the suffering and the dead, while the ones that were more loyal did forget their place, it shouldn't count for reasoned' grimness' stark-for starch. A bloody pulp was had, alas.

'To the gallows we go with a gun in our arms, trying to see where the Russians are, where they're prepared to land, bomb after bomb and green disciple, and the Germans coming after, and the Poles, the swarthy Swedes and the painting of the streets.

A gorge that's never listened to, to the gallows there we head. You, my friend who stands erect; for the church desires empty bed, bread and wind and therefore dread, as you are taken to the gallows.'

Many hours passed since then, day after day, night and hourless refrain from asking what would happen if they got there too soon. If the gallows only took a bite off his head and hit the mark. Empty-craned oranges that rolled off the corrugated roof as well as the raising of a single brothel around the curve of a single walk; where all the souls went and attended the pass; they were gathered around the spot. Stopped by the sight of a few corpse-dry people, wearing their skin but not their heads; a cemetery brought to life. First the mourning had to be carried on with. It would not do too well to offend. Something worse than death would follow after, and when it did, the empty beds.

Pittek drew on his glasses, sordidly tiring himself in ruin. For some reason or another they were dead, trying to move around and grin while the past lay dead. A few paces from the perilous descent, to fall in that shakiness to which the rod was but subservient and sprouted out of, was meant to serve as a simple return to the bet he lost.

'Ayiee, good for nothing friend I yearned for to be come and hardly there come approach when finally descent into the desert below. I wish I had but a little mind to be had and strapped to a bomb, on top of which I might be had abruptly ripped apart, and sutured to the Moon then fall.

My death will mean nothing to you if I am lost to a mind that doesn't even know what for, and reasons that I'm not alive by the time it returns to him.'

'Wretch, a scourge of upheavel-drought, who thou art has little to be had wilt to thine kin and kin of lasting heart!'

A waste, a waste and a waste, avast for that which had been taken away from them, yet they could not help the treaty as twas come to an end. Star-board for the ones in trance, the ones that had been brought onto them to look alike;

'Land-a-hoe!'

Twas a wretch if there's ever been known to be one, at least close to, in the dozen lobe's cradled time, when they started at the one that desired their delirious hares, the ones that had been taken from Sicily, imported during the hour's come upon the unaware. A wronged-there-standing, little peg-of a wretch; no taller than some five feet or so, perhaps worse than that, away and away; it moved with little steps such as none ought to, but they would, see a difference, seething in their marks, their spots and their wills be had!

Globe of wretched pillar

Second of the ones standing below him; his wretched arms almost fell apart from the entirety of the pressure that was being forced onto the lower sides of his brow, the grimy shoulders being almost toppled down by a pressure not even he could stand the likes off.

‘My bloated brother, sitting among a pile of skeletons made out of hardened dust, crystal, diamonds and the one wretched skeleton of dirt-be-had. Why have you forsaken me this hour of most need?’

I beckon thee to release me from this dream of main, laceration and be-had-to; that I may will myself back to life, that I may fathom walking upon feet that are made to waggle in what little there is left of my legs before they start falling apart. Yet all true of spoken evil as’s been said, you do not falter to be evil and to wreck havoc upon my faultiness and faultry be had instead. We could’ve ruled together, through evil and through dust. Though our eternities are something not even I can help to fathom from where you stand, so soft, yet so tall!

Where you stand, where you stand my dear brother; this spot is but a little speck of my empire. Their bones shall serve you naught and shall be grinded in your blood by the time you become a blob, a wretch that cannot be held, yet shall yearn to succumb to bolt. As you shall suffer no brothel to come, and you shall hope no less bequest and run! I wager. That much I can wage my petty soul on top of. That you shall seek me such when the time comes!’

‘Nay, for thine grave shall be empty from this point of, suffer as thus, you shall continue and it shall be beckoned to become a must, that I shall find you still buried in thine grave. A wreckage of disorder, disordained!’

A cat squats by him.

A bloody fall, onto the pyramid that fell through the earth’s bowl rotted head, the one that had still remained there since ancient days still, to’ve been certain, befuddled even the most certain of what happened to them.

‘Why is my dog nibbling down its chainmail armor when she knows she cannot penetrate through my rape goggles?’

‘Wretch, allure, come onto the prowl Moon and fill thine stench with cowed for fur’s come and carpet wrung, must thine elephant benumbed by illness-called for still, need it suffer for what has been naught but your own mistake?’

But the wretch didn’t respond immediately, yet in place remained.

‘Adjourned by evil’s stay and damp remains, stay coddled by absinthe’s alabaster calling. Niggardly, killer of niggers, lynching man of low-regard, I call upon thee to be armed and feel of slither’s woe, allure to merriment and bitter snow; lest be reddened come to blows, I seek beseech of leech’s trench and birch’s peace that you may not move from the spot. Be executed by one of the Gorgon bearers as I will have you whipped from every side!’

Such’s n’ trance there be emerging from a point whose loathsomeness awaited no reproach but swerving was he there in stance.

The bloody pillar was awakened by the trance of eight faced torsos with long reed-tubes sticking from beneath them, and their arms, like angels bathed in rum and tar, which spoke to the demons of Mars during their most inward-ly deranged dreams. Agony was felt on a whim but the cat followed. It was forced to grow, and out of its back a man emerged, filled and covered with a snow that allowed for a few appendages to emerge from his back, all equipped with backs of their own and the strange bones that held their arms, albeit they had no hands, the bones of the arms might’ve been lodged deeper inside at their farther ends; but legs were normal, and his face, amiably maimed, as if by a gaily at his work set on to parade with a pariah of scissors’ touches, from up-side down, across his face, across this maze of unnaturalness’ allure, cut-in-between the brows and his two colossal, colloquially-asymmetrical moons, cat-globes green with puffy balloon-raised bumpage-come through from the backward-bone and deeper inside, they reeled back and drew forth, snakes out of some large, downward-pointing deep-trenched and even deeper, pointing down its hatchet.

‘I think the thermometer is falling apart. You must, I yearned for your call-to therefore trench of low, less, come-to as you may, lesser-egged by yolk of mindless prattle come and snap a throng of faces that may be put on my fancied-for lacklustre!’

‘But, I, I am a man of class, I’ve come at last, from a family of bottle-tapestry adorners of trinket-past, crack the hour, will’en had. The man standing before you, rust might’ve corrugated each skin; the slither within being bargained for on a whim. But I would seek no solace yet endear, endure as I may, out of cone and out of fear for what might happen if I were to spend a second more, in this little pratt of nomenclature dysentery porcelain a yolk-shaped ball.’

For he was trapped in a sphere that only now appeared in sight!

Merrypscoemce

‘Thine feet are yonder set yet do not yearn to move from where they’re set, dear slither-cob.’

He spoke with the water-bulb during some age whose trifle was hardly felt at all. Twas the zit’s hardness plub-gaster bubble cast, the assorted little pumps that adorned his body being become part of its gulley-rancid prancing rust, which corrugates its leprous skin, the one that drew out of him, out of it there being many leaping around, wretchedly round and abhorred for reasons uncalled for-during its stay inside the pools, where it started growing the arm-casts it threw forth in a iota, like that of bumbling baboonbuffoons, with their faces starting to leap around, with the crudeness of a wild regard, and the mould, which propelled itself forth being of a reasonless discerned for cold, with which they froze them into place.

His face was yet benighted-curved forward, and all his limbs 'ere stored in the inner-pockets of his wrong-done after; where he made the cuts and where the coffins lay in plunder, there he was found, large feet-pulled out and curved, turned into his vans, so he could move around. A fish out of water, found there on the spot, partly eaten. Elevated to the rank of being respectably kempt by history's end, a trifle to no bed, for making the maker's bakery'prod eternally erect where to be, there standing, a little crude boil of a snail-formed piece of rabid-extended girthy skin, a flesh erected from some unnatural end which adorned now every composition of evil tattle!'

It drew forth, jumping with a leap as if there had been clouds beneath it, followed by visible guts of red booms and glooms and jump-around 'monsoon's' made out of the most perilous of grinded meat it had released from beneath it, corpses, boils, ugly heads and similar cones, broth of leper's teddy bears that had been devoured somewhere along the way with the cradle of the very same children whose skulls and bones were released beneath them, on the throng of a most uncanny field made now-turned into a patch of red, a crimson thing of supreme boil-toil clot, inside of which, since it rose like a bump, there standing a lawyer with a hammer-lodged behind his head, around and there-around erect, he stooped lower-than-before, he could breath no more, but the boil-leprous slug up there, looked like some cysted crystal of fluids-frozenly made, which became nigh-invisible when exposed to the sun, which laughed because he could speak a trifle less than before, ever since numbed by the shots it had taken from the giant needle-racks of puffy hive-growths that ate from inside of it, numb-fold thrice-after, call to arms and call to wonder; for this cheered the man up, as he gave up on his fine-position he had been passed on by his boss in favor of a young- inexperienced man he had come to see as a son of the sorts despite not working with the firm any more; which reminded him, since they had passed lunch at eight am, or so, in the morning, two-fold thrice the matter, fifteen days ago or so, perhaps even farther than that, as no one could forget what that meant, alas, he considered his bastardly endowed worship towards this ugly figure that had absorbed some of the solar sun radiation by means of some-kindred unfold felt retardation caused by means of gun, erected to-be-numbed, to be-numbed, buns in the oven, here I come, mum, my darling singing as she'd come forth out of the van, with a face, the face that I remembered, a face unbelonged to her, as I can recognize her no more, how awful, how awful a trifle will I live to see towards the ceiling's end, forlorn, to my wife, the cabbage, I ate, and ate, no peach cleaned by some unclean switchblade taken from the hands of someone undeserving but which shall only belong to me, for I am the cruel king of Mars, the speaking of Neptune, glory to Zeus, kill-kikes, I am a nigger; thrice fold there-gone, pump-pump, the beast has been awakened but it doesn't know what to do now, not so quickly, as you'd see, there's, there's, it's coming, you see? The promise of pussy that I can only hope to approach on my way to paradise, parading with forlorn devices, the gun-moister, ever-known as a trifle, made-the lot, the master, master of Berlin, the kike, a hammer beating his head, blood-blood-blood-blood, everywhere, as Crane was only bathed by this beast that felt as if it had been its sole duty to do so before continuing its flight towards a most obscure to itself, long-lost, sublimely so, paradise, of parasites, mum's dad has a rifle stored in one of his turnkey-tabernacle-behind the glass, locked in tight, by a key-ciphered, albeit chipped, numb-padded lock, I cannot hope to crack open because I'm terrible at numbers, but this sublime beast is trapped, absinthe-pus coddle-cock, in its own-forlorn prison, the paradise, where and inside of which dark dreams emerge, where to now? For I feel as if I'm cold, I feel but trapped, in my solace of desperation; I the man, the dark creation! Neptune's Lord blaspheme me as I make my way, towards, today, tomorrow, no more gays. For I shall kill the homos during my wake and I shall spread my seed in many women for I have been blessed; my mind, oh tumor-genius, I must be called, a man of supreme integrity, THE SECOND SUPREME GENTLEMEN, the killer, the magi of the Nigger-kill element, the hunter, I hunt, I cannot be stopped, I run around in circles, unaround; unbound by mortal rules that would stop me from my tracks, prevent me from furthering on, with my evil plan, for twas twice told that I'd be, on my way, for all to see, for my god, my leprous thing shall be revived again, and during birth-return, all would suffer along the way. For I shall kill in its name and bring tribute-felt, by death by death and I shall be helped along the way by none other than the kikes, ha-ha, for they are become self-destructive and weak, hooked on their poison, blinded by piston and by nasty feel. And while all are distracted I shall rule-forth and bring a hundred years fold of pain, I shall whip, slither, lynch and kill away, and drown children in blood and bloody madness. The killer, blinded by power and by crude-felt sadness. A leprous wretch, whose piety shall yet prevail; it truly looked like Crane was but nearing the day where he would look by his side, his right side where he was waited by someone, someone who really had his rifle pointed at his temple now.

'Horko, you are a traitor, brother, come-out-of-death!'

The Iles were wretched and the mansion was fell upon the ground and wretched, almost ruined by destruction. God's tongue was rabid in its filth and stay, the slither come and the rancid pray!'

While and during the attempt of having haltered at the stop to think, and thinking got me kind of drunk, I winked a little, having taken a gulp, my mother sent me towards in order to get her fancy pastry needed for Sunday Church's evening come between from the time of ancient days when monks have put citadels of ink and wax, the top of the fry-tower being elapsed in oil, towards the rudimentary having been gone through this road which tinged with electrifying canker-bolts of rabid animals that were slowly being, consecutively, one by one, then in pairs of two, three, and four like sets of cards being rummaged through your purse mom's what's happening when you're not paying attention on the road but this time I was alone, on the errand, on my own, the killer of dreams with the nigger-beams bearing wretchedness allure; the dear friends that decided, to've come, prior to the errandry being discerned by empty rims of purloin numb shot through a device that caused external bleeding, laceration- maim by God's gobbling down the gulley's dark creation; by noon, tagging along; to play a farce of most obtrusive soliquity of upheaval in terms of bled; having waited by the corner we'd usually met, they jumped me, stabbed my liver-dry, pools of rivers blood, sounds of saw becoming embers of the most corrugated junk I never knew I had or bore in me, or in my tummy-tum, a most intrusively abhorrent; pain would abhor, and therefore gore was bottled by pastrami torn apart, the kings of tapestry that followed out of the store sutured the poor kid who immediately alarmed them by, let alone the sight that caused them to think of what was happening to him, intermediary delight of empty vows, like Church-bells or the Columbine shooter, well enough, he decided to walk along these Demigods who avowed themselves as if he were their liege and culprit in crime and Bonny and Clyde and Rasputin and the Mad Mongs of Notre Dame and the master and the slaver and the nigger and the wager, well upon thereafter, albeit by it's come back alerted of something that he had refuted multiple times, so much so that he would not endure another loss if he had been very much so provoked to do it by arms, pained by lust's cast away stance, he could not feel anymore of a brute than he did then, waking up from solace's den, with a loaded gun in his hand, pow-pow, killed one of the benumbed by led or lead, whichever it were, a cascade of rumination hindered by their loyalty be-damned, as they watched him pile-riled by a slough of cylindrical carcasses that bounced upon a rubbery asphalt inside of which children slept, beneath the cement, beneath the sink of stone-peep, lay the great giant eye, then, alarmed by the realization that upon such occasions as Sunday's march, on various Parliamentary Seneca's introductory entry into the House of Commons that allowed him to continue on this path of misscreation, to've been banned, in such case might've meant death, entry to the wretched Cowl of a portal where disembowel was but merit's to the pledge, to be cut and beheaded meant a USS Liberty incident but being on the Israeli's side instead, in terms of the pragmatic rhetorical aspect of the most innocuously incumbent plight, such delight and therefore fright of having shown a reason that you were or are alive, for reasons never spoken off; then he reached the spot where he was sent by her to buy a loaf of bread but he found out the children that were turned into cars, sutured together like corpses, were dead, by means of violent castration and death-filled with gas shoot-ahead, suture; which, also endowed by the stank-miasma that was shoved in front of them allowed for none other and no other reason than rape, murder.

'The Fur-lion has me in trance, surependity of wilds and chimes!'

For he was the king thereafter, after having killed the others, blessed ones survive, and all that had remained, other than the sutured into car-outlines dead children were the anchors of guts and empty-wrought in pain allure.

'Emissary of Mongol.'

Came the crier as soon as the podium floor was succumbed to the roughness of a floor turned to shrapnel in the grinding. He had run out of reloaded, put-ins, out of his pocket, backpack and the extra-carry weighty bag borrowed from some man caressed by the aloe-thorns, entered him by means of fore-front.

But where from had he come?

Fifteen hundred million miles, there-to and long-below:

Hours unspoken during faultry:

'I bestow upon thee, maiden of miasma taken, the title of Dredge of Train.'

Upon the maiden named, Genevie or loft-bespoken, what of her mind had remained; the poor wretch of a whorish bore, a single wheel her back purloined to carry on, while rattles-rattled. A cruel upheavel only carried after in her tracks.

'Despot of ill and mad, must I continue on this track, at last?'

'Lease of ilch-tainted enduring, you shall carry on and falter booing! Else there shall be a drop of the mind, a rotten grovel in which you shall rest from this point on, upon the appointed pit that is.'

He had directed her to the only place she didn't feel ill at ease.'

Both the Horned and the One burnt alive, devoid of eyes, but aware of her smell and of her smile, which was parley pointed, cutlass of demure. Taken for a sign that they stood a chance with her if she failed in toil and bitter Moon; which was flatter, tinier and in the sky, instead of it being beyond earth, the girth of many rabbles, diamond stones of raised mounds-after, calling for her stomp, with little raised flags that were made out of rib-caged oil, from slime-like beings, muttens of some giant morsels that were well thawed, coaled by prison-bars, serpentine in thorns, out of which heads bloated around, disjointedly as they moved along, beckoning her to stop, and large, in mass, past-death standers, watchers, observes, most of whom were incapable of properly breathing by themselves, therefore, she noticed, as long as the road was, behind each mount, each perilous pitch of sand and even behind the hills to-where and to-hinder titter towards which, the bloated moot-point to where they extended, many coils which fed them still, from the dawn-put down, a single being. Wretchedly squirming at the end of the road; making a fuss of the unconscious scolding as they dreaded each fold, flop and bump twas made by her raised on step.

‘You must know by now that the ointment you’ve been rubbed with, rub of darkened poultry, stricken by faulty club. Ye were spat upon with faulty powder, made of brother, made of mother!’

‘Those which I’ve never had the displeasure of meeting in the first place since I had been abandoned early on!’

It was that pain-felt struck down her back, upon the rolling of the wheel that revealed her behind, her, behind-hinder and around, in the wheel, where she were, all of them, like empty-squared, trapped in windows, the roll of flimsily-kempt and embalmed long after their quasi destruction had allowed for any preservation, lest archival had been known to crumb, rugged dolls of her-herself, fried alive, desperate to get out, filled with boils, as the engine had once sprouted during one of her last attempt to carry on!

His head, the one following in the back, exploded, in a guttural viscera kind of way, startling his companion as they parted ways:

‘What the fuck was that?’

‘You should be careful with your stepping!’

‘Crane-Disciple!’

Of a margin, leaped above a stone, thereafter. The many statues only nodded, their bodies shook and mystery foreboding, starved and drenched with trodden.

‘The madman has claimed his ruse, he claimed her as his wife and would obtuse all who’d stand against him, but why, why would someone grind the fringes of the finger’s taken dark abode?’

But before he could speak again, and before the other leaping around dredges could jump and leap, fore-told, be-knotted by empty frown, and ponder-snow; their heads just blew in an instant, flames fuming, rising, spreading like black clouds that only allowed for a momentary alteration to be rotten-cast and taken apart, their mild autopilots of pain joining in each dance as they had raised the lances, and the dark remains. All cast away and down yonder. What was felt by them was but disease in its inner most, strongest form. A body-cast; made in thrice, cut and spread below, had become four great worms, two conjoined and two of normal kin; they drew forth towards where she had lain on top of some milder mount, and spoke to poor Genevie as she was extremely confused.

‘It’s rather reassuring that there’s still a woman with perfectly rounded a womb. I see there’s something in there; but you’re armless. Soon to be removed from legs.’

‘And if I want to keep a hold of them?’

A wagon-of many perilous; rancidly put-together cemeteries joined aloof.’

There is that man again, running around in circles despite everything they, he’s still running at it, incapable of fully stopping from his track. He’s most likely insane, legless by chance, cut by a faulty wire that disallowed his growth, pacing as he is, there’s no way he’ll survive the century. All that’s been said about him so far turned out to be true. He is to die like a dog without redemption, cruel as it may seem, we shall dine upon him and ensure there shall be no redemption from either one of us for as long as we live; for this dying beast had done it onto itself by its own two hands; a thing worth of no pity whatsoever and of no worthy mind. Even in that position he still squirmed himself into served as a reflection of what’s he become and what it came down to. Breathing heavily, they stared, their maws and teeth widened as they began pacing around the oaf.

‘If you’re in any need of meat, there’s enough of it in the back. There’s no need to start mawing your way through this one. He’s thin, starved and shall not allowed for hunger’s perish, disallow your tasted shallows, or shall bring but what foil there is to your standing shimmering little puffs flying around your flying hearts, nor will your guts start flying out of their hidings for the reason I am aware of, stolen of no vest, wretches, corpses that walk but cannot heed the ones behind you, or the stench that you yourselves are guilty of delivering onto the plains, I can see reason when there is none and for that alone I shall ensure that not a single one of you will breathing any ounce more than needed if it is within my power to do so.’

And that wasn’t even the start of it. They were onto him since the very start. Two at a time approaching:

‘Hold, you’re standing within our iron sights, don’t mind yourself more than needed. Ear for a gut and we shall have your life, wretchedly abhorred as no disciple of the Moon’s cowl brought onto the old and the new forgotten that live only for the sole reason of abhorring the living such as yourself, be it as it may, worsened by age or worsened by power in-maligned by ray or torsion, that may have been cast away by lust’s eve, while we, aware of your traitorous benigned approach have had our time be-spoken for to prepare, you have been doing nothing short of merely standing here, hiding in this little, unnatural damp cave. There’s absolutely no reason to stay. Where they stood, from far and else one should ignore the noble feeling that might come onto your say.’

But it was a trifle too late for him to speak.

‘It’s far too irritating for me to approach you from where you’re sitting, dear friend.’

Yet neither of them;

‘I should hope you would, at the very least consider not turning this into more of an annoyance than it has to be.

At the very least, I would not hope to.’

They stood there for a moment, in silence. There didn’t seem to be a way around it, at the very least:

No one.

No one wants to make a serene cow out of the puddle of blood that's on the floor. Absolutely wretched. Pieff!

‘Ah, I cannot see past this sign!’

It should make no sense but it does, everyone's acting to their own accord. Dancing madly without legs, flopping around when they're dead, only to make less noise when their ankles are removed. If one knew better, he'd put them down. But there's, there's no way for either one of them to know what's going on around them, since eve's song, a few meters off there, here and off the.

The great mollusk approached them. Before either one, spry as he were.

They were moving while trying to get a word in, the little pucker being open, an eye-bump rounded see-through bulb that drew from inside a fall-down depression a slowly lifting upward by means of crawl with many little legs and tiny puffers that drew girthy honey-suckle liquid-liquefied pouches out of left-over men eaten by termites remains, it feasted upon in order to lift itself and cast itself upward, forward, after, following through with its flat-monitor that had been flat-ironed in order to implant this device that would allow its function to begin, since the wiring was already inserted in by surgery, signals being sent to the lower-lowered by fifteen miles below, but couldn't get a word in because of the static noise being produced at an exhilarant level unmet before; that had reached their ears for the first time in the, perhaps, longest a human-humanoid being had ever come into contact with.

‘That's what I was counting on. Now I can commence theft!’

‘Have you banked in the virus, yet? If so, praise do be for divulging our secrets to our adversaries when they're not looking for us, but gainsaid wretch, thou be alarmed, for the disfigured men are still trying to rip out their fingernails while on the street during their walk!’

Discs were implanted in their backs, -connected to riddling pistons on the ground that constantly drew dirges of blotted trays with painted suns on them out of their strangely compact empty backs. They were empty, devoid of organs, walking automatons made of men, and the discs but flew in and out of them as if they were their children. It was a disease they had contracted in Bangladesh, during one of their jovial conjugal visits, where it had been implanted on them. Below the earth the pistons connected to a world-afar of power-line-holes, with the poles being giant worms that had their encrusted crowned leeches wriggling about the pipes, trying to deliver the intelligence that was being picked up from the States. Gold-fangs glittered in the dark as he approached.

Paranoid about these two men that were being followed by in the cement crawling on top of, hole makers, by means of poke. Implanting needled syringes beneath them, as they dug up a valley:

‘Say, good men, do you reckon there's a notice to be had about what's happening behind the two of you?’

‘Not that we would happen to know or be reckoned to encapsulate a wretch, but what do you suppose we might do about what's happening to us, instead?’

‘Anything but freely giving them what's being stolen from you.’

To which, admittedly, he bore neither any responsibility towards, not had he a care as to absorb a wretched need of asking. Instead, of bother and of tasking; the disc had become a sea-ray as soon as it was approached, fleshy and inwardly reaching, it seht warmth inside one of the men:

‘These are no sun-discs as I was lead to believe.’

‘Pets, companions, whatever you’ll have us seek after, dark sinew!’

Odin is in Belgium, the Jomon saddling rafts made of steel, trying to ride them back to Japan after being captured during one of the advances. Peril meant being drafted early and being drawn into the war without their permission, to which they felt not a single desire to be forcedly made to be a part of. So they said to him:

‘Go away!’

‘Unfortunately you are drawing far too much attention for us to allow you to simply step on us and our behinds, this is rather quaintly, unacceptable and is not to continue going on without an immediate cessation!’

‘Seriously, go away! Hey! Get lost, do not come any close or see what happens!’

Treacherously had he galloped towards their moonlight’s sill, a most venerably worthy assailant that had refused to step down once prayed away by their incessant gowels. Asunder was the street split, Buenos Aires was the first country to feel the felt of the strength as it was landed, onto the earth, around the trimmed Stratosphere’s gill, inside of it, and around, then below the rim and the edge, where it felt on the poor Spics, as one by one they fell, dead, as a result of the rippling echo of a quake, that was responsible, also, for the splitting of hairs, jaded by this morose conundrum yet worn, fallen, drafted, apart, incapable of understanding how was it that they still stood.

‘Baggy tits!’

‘He-he.’

‘I work out, shut up!’

Wings of steel dropped below one of them, as he pulled out a pistol, handling it barely, shaky-hands and all, pointed at the poor man’s head.’

‘If you kill me here, there’ll be trouble and that I cannot handle the likes of, if left unattoned!’

What rummaged through the street was a felt-by them cone of rotten meat, given away by flies and thrown around women’s feet, serving as the dead-giveaway.’

‘My grief and anger against this world that is responsible for my betrayal, my casting into the bowels of darkness out of which I may never be capable of returning or coming back from, since my sins are but worthy of the most incessant acts of un-forgiveness abhor, testimony to the testimony of never being capable of letting myself forget what’s been done; will never leave this mind of mind that is forever-cursed, in a curved manner, trapped inside this trap of irrationality I cannot escape from, latching onto whatever is left of my broken memories that are spread inside this wild-reflection of shattered tributaries of alcohol, cognac, a scented rum giving birth to a scenery I may not ever admit myself as being careful of forgetting. I was made this way by these talons that are wrapped around me, come out of a great serpentine figure that is connected to a rocket-shaped fetus, armies are born out of me. Amnesties are broken by my incarceration, my advancement, my dark advancement comes as a result of my rifles, they are made of bone, excruciating pain is felt by this self-inflicted torture I beckon to be stopped, forgetful as I am that for a moment, there, I was alive, but alive only in the context of a timeless gaze past-felt, a stupor of vileness that inflicts bowels of anger's come aghast, growths onto me to grow, but hinder, my mind is in a hibernatory manner of asking, naiveté, where have thou gone against all common sense?

They had laughed and danced and shot rockets at him, which exploded his head, which exploded his lower body that became split in eighteen crawling figures, centipedes of plates all bearing his shield-shaped face, with crawling peculiar pistols all now beginning to shoot in every direction, killing everyone in sight. They all suffered and died painful deaths; but only because they survived the initial shootout, by paralysis, bullets lodges in each of their spines. He tended them for years, feeding them, forcing them to suffer, the maniac, what was wrong with him? How cruel, nasty, cruel, a killer, he fed them a crematorium. Metal by metal, ash to ashes, no gas-chambers in Auschwitz, but into the oven it goes, little pecker, evil nose.

'Blood is spilled on my hands by constant-kill, murder, thou art holy and only now can I see the appeal!'

After having witnesses hundreds of hours of murder, he had become pure. No longer precious to himself or to others, no longer will there be a cure to this.

Highly irreverent yet without a chance at the sublime's there-after, without a doubt had she not a say in whether or not she was to be allowed a meddlesome entry through this unnatural door that had been munching on her spined-face, a farcical-blot of skin having stepped out one of the more robust moving chambers that, upon opening had grabbed a hold of her, trying to spit a few finer hairs, rightly so, before forcing her to step in, by force, now turned into a pesky-prisoner that was without lawfully- worthy of decency- rights, that helped with her settle-in, since, she could die at any moment or be raped by this cacical figure that had entrapped her.

'We are engaged from this point on, and I shall not try to make it any easier on you than I have to be, because from this point on, I shall be your master, and you, my obedient slave!'

With which, the woman, Diel-Anne Killer-of-bothersome-little-stench Senior-Department Store. Depot Anne, Depot Anne shoved her hand inside the side of her belly, and his her organs in the floor, while her master was preoccupied with reading the Daily Gazette. She had hid them underneath the carpet in a stone that was part of the garnished petal shaped wooden-planks placed around it. And it only came to reason that she lost a leg while doing so. Then, with that in mind, she carried her daily hear-after as to the usual, cooking, cleaning, making supper, kissing the blessed icons around the house while praying for the stagnation of the rabidly inclined unnaturally fallen apart, yet darkly-set in place, forgetfulness, foggy, by means of laceration, the uddersome frightful lain in heart, blissful solace severed from her by each ticking of a tongue, jolted, misbehaved, this inherited life a frightful globe of blot she could not help to see an end to, or off. Since it's been an hour, powerlessly plowed by needles, of a most somber entreaty was there, spread-around, repel, of many, lesser, fewer then-in-between figures that came in and out, out-ta-ta-ta-ta the house, that were lost to mind's uneven.

‘Supper’s ready, may I take a break and join you for I’m parched, in need of sustenance, starving, I’m not fed, I may be your most loyal pet, but even those that aren’t fed, have to suffer, have you yet?’

‘Wait until I’m done and then we’ll talk, but no sooner and no later, understood?’

Breathing is a thing of the past. It must be done while munching on blood, and trying your arms on someone who won’t take you back once you’ve broken up with them over some insignificant squabble, because women are incapable of showing any compassion towards someone who feels any kind of unsolicited attention towards them, therefore need be scolded.

A knock on the door:

It was a rounded bucket-like sauna shaped, with a round fleshy un-sharpened beak of a giant thumb formation of interconnected pseudo-appendages, whose head was flat and depressed in, as-in the bucket-hole, had a crown of long-curving inwardly dirty-covered in murky eels incisors, eyes on either side but human-like, a body of a slug, whereas it was held a few meters above the ground by two elephant-ears aligned but only for eight or eight seven or so centimeters if someone people who climbed two ladders on either side of its head held it up-high for display – of some fleshy pseudo-thin palm-leaves, that slowly diverged inwardly into pseudo-airplane wings of hardened nigh-chiseled carapace-chitinous frames of elongated limbs, that were cricket-set backwardly, or if the plane had a giant come and curve the wings backwardly, on the side of the said plane, whereas at their ends, these ‘legs’ bore upward-thrust cane-heads, solid, bony in appearance. And the slug-tail never touched the ground, nor did it reel back and forth despite the crude way in which it had been forced to crane its head, without a doubt.

‘Anne, mind me passing over the tray? I promise it won’t lower itself on your lap unless you ask for it, I say, don’t mind me for what’s been called, dull, thou might be over it by noon, but, would you mind passing it nonetheless?’

‘This prick of a used-to be is no longer within my reach. Pray that I may be given the strength needed to find it somewhere in these fields of snow; for it’s a sea of white-haired hay, endlessly stuck in avalanche, and that is but an unnatural thing I cannot for the likes of me get myself to be made take a hold of, even if I were bewitched to do so as you please of me.’

‘You will not disappoint me at all if you but try, trust me on this, my good girl, there’s something of a glimmer in your eye. I can see it plenty well. And against that deeply cast- refrained mirror of a simpleton’s reflection there shall be but a single indentation stumbled poorly upon your sight. If you will it so, it will be found.’

‘What’s it of importance to you, to have it that is?’

‘Perhaps you should know what it means to my heart’s swollen vow, taken-ly aware that I may lose my very soul upon the very night I undertook the guarding of the brooch, which I’ve taken in my possession for no short of blind-entanglement endure. Spoken with the moon, while doing so, and he held me, to my contempt, for a moment not to fall. For it was shone upon my eyes, ever-so bright. A delightful thing I could not, for the likes of me understand why, or what the reason behind it was.

But I wanted it, with all the arduous desire of my fiery-swollen soul that's ever been lain upon the claim of a single, most wretched to's-been mine, and mine alone. Lo, that's settled.

Now, it's gone, and my heart will be content with waiting, for the blind that roam the street benign, all that is wretched and the symbol of my eve.'

'Then you knew I would not find it if I were sent by thee?'

'Quite so, was I made aware of your coming-to the sight, death, I knew there was a chance for you not to make it after all if I were to send you there, all by yourself. Without it and its companion, the wretched brooch shall cast this world in flashy-flesh, which shall grow, glow, blinding us all, because of you.

The other piece!'

'I'm not human, then?'

'No such thing can be said about you or what's become of you from that errantry of a poultry I picked you up and out of. I could not for the likes of me ever be-think or bemuse myself, so sullen as I would be. I could never dream a proper funeral for thee!'

And beneath the bowel of his shirt, he revealed, an undertaking of a void, emptiness that would repel even the bravest that did stare and look. A good chunk of it was missing, beneath the rib, above his leg, but a great clavicle, that only kept, a few meters in solid. Iron frames darting back and forth, raised and lowered constantly. They kept him alive, but they kept him in place as well. One could not do without the other, brothers of the macabre, meager, fools, of emptiness dishelved, the hour.

'Our gracious pleasantries, as are withhold from your, don't bemuse a tender coming to the sight and swerve!'

'Goodness gracious, but what's been done to your maimed daughter that has only lived in this house-ever since the coming of the end's light fallen over?'

'I cannot tell for the likes of me what you could be talking about, my dear sir.'

Tall and tenebrously embraced by large sticks that curved around his neck, beneath the grown he worn, a disciplinary tender- barely sublime, well kept a suit that was rather erogenous in terms of where it drew the line, large bovine-colors, patched by buttons thrown-nearer his outer-push-outs, the long-extensions that held him in place, almost almond, almost chained, to a pair of shoes that were not shoes, instead, indeed, a circle that was part of his feet, or they had been melted and were part of it, a tree-of a man that was carried by another one, conjoined and out of his back, drawing sea- and land apart, dressed and hidden by a tiny house he had nailed to his body, painfully alluding to the hiding of a most wretched creature, he called, nobody. Twas his brother, his shame, his curse; yet the only one capable of propelling them forth so they would not starve; since, with eighteen arms as he was born with as well, on both sides that were born-united and were inter-connected as to give the impression of a rib-cage that wasn't helped by the extra-bone cartilage that was grown in and out of his body, this putrid beast. A fatuous fallen-apart rotten crudity that was hard to look at, but he was no beast. These bones that grew from everywhere sealed the deal, since his arms were become fully lodged into one another, forming these whale-inner thigh of a bulldozer that made him the man he was now. Covered in a black peeling away plate of tar-carpet, as well; rounding up to ten feet tall. His neighbors once revealed the truth about it, there was no brother behind him, and the front was just the carving of a deformed human trying to trick people into looking up at him, and him down at them, whereas his real self was hidden inside that tiny wooden house he built around himself, for naught else but greed, protection. For when they spake, and cruelly they did, and threw so many empty coins, laughing at him, sometimes cheering, were these dark remarks always met by something to be got. Something to be made, shillings of little value but he had to eat after all. It was a most disgraceful thing, and perhaps, it was that which turned him into the deformation he had become.

Upon entering their household, he bore a giant street-lamp with him, against which, eight people were tied to, by force.

‘I shall sell you to him, my dear daughter.’

‘Why?’

‘He needs to eat, and I’m a butcher!’

There was no way around, these stout fellows made sure there was a tinder-felt by knock aloud, bump in the ground, the boot was down.

‘I mean to them, I shall sell you to them. They are in need of eating and of being clothed. And they shall use your outer-husk to dress.

But only after being brought to their home.’

‘Where?’

She asked with a most moth. Her eyes were the size of two giant melons, and were black-ish tar and were out of her head, two floating tumors connected by two tendon-beamed fleshy cylinders. Bloody-red and ugly clot; who was her mother? He was drunk. IS, still;

Like a flame adorning her desire to be drawn to the side and raped in some ugly-shed out of which no one would hear her anger driven screams, nor would they have a say against it if they knew who was finely performing the act.

With certainty she asked:

‘Where are you taking me, good sir?’

‘To my home, a shared apartment, in Columbine.’

Prior to the Massacre:

A few things ever go as they’re initially driven past their conception-stage, during the initiation of blood, when your head is turned down, realizing that a woman released her period on the ground at the thought of, carried by the side of him, a bloody mop that painted the snow red, constantly dripping but never capable of understanding what her father had done to her, or the reason behind this dark-betrayal.

Columbine is the dark seat of this world. The throne-room of limbo, endless-child murder; for was it there not where the rope responsible for lynching over a thousand hundred niggers had been melted then forged anew? They say that if you're brown-skinned and or a nigger, a single cut of this sword can suffocate you in an instant once made contact with the skin; a ringed at its end, almost lassoing endlessly, a vortex of leathery iron, almost forever stuck in deep rotation, constantly searching for nigger-lynching crudities to murder, in its supreme indentation of desire, to spread away, closer, nearer, like some swollenly dark and eely-flesh of nigger-kill desire!@

Noon, they walked the ungodly, deep-forsaken ground. Having traversed a most unnaturally a forest ran-through houses that were destroyed, since but fifty years ago when they had erupted, in an upwardly towards the sky, gravity-defying, an avalanche of trees that were grown as if they had been naturally allowed growth, but out of a tectonic-large valley-near the edge of stone plate that was then tilted on an incline, at a raise of about fifteen or thirty degrees more, or so, than you'd expect of them, now hanging in the air, part of these greater plates made completely out of entangled into one another- roots. A great sea.

What rabidness alone told of what happened there, none could add no more than it would be allowed:

'An old man walking with a gait? How come and who is responsible for it?'

'None other than old age, my dear friend, I cannot stress it long enough, you walk backwardly and set-behind a lighter stove, alas and much to your incongruity there shall be but little such's spool to cast, of rabidness and therefore lust, of what's to see carried away.

Yonder where you look, I say, there's the fire, spread and side, with it, with your delight, and deepened fright, drowning in your simple disillusion, whatever thine, your wretch' allure, and bastardly contorted Constitution shall withdraw from saying.'

'Where to now then?'

'Forth, and swaying.'

A feet-of an enclosure, where they're met by bastardly, a few beggarly star-gazers that had their eyes taken from them:

'Where are you, vile wretch? I can feel you, I know you're here, you've been taken from me for the last time and now, I can feel you, I can sense you, tender, brave but worthless stranger!'

'He was here a minute ago!'

And their hands, their arms and even the empty stumps of their eyes, psychedelic snail-eyed but thicker, broader, made out of ten, exactly ten tenebrously shallow tape-worm beings with spikes that drew, withdrew, constantly impaling one another. Within a moment's pass, the entirety of the street was covered in their bloody-pints, unclean, scented, filled with a most disgraceful smell, a scented mass made out of all of them, before properly blocking the street by means of dark elongation; they formed a few barracks out of their bodies, voicing their hatred so much more wildly than before. Broodingly had the sea-shallow where the light didn't emerge out of, falling behind the hours, calloused by the extension of no brighter plight twas missing from the sight; wretched by them, drawn so much closer to them, bothersome repel they sang:

‘Where to be, where to be, show yourself and we eat thee!’

Was chanted upon a temporary reproach, the soil of contemplation at their temples, openly a garage door behind them, at the dead end, welcomed them in, and the building they entered slowly moved, with legs that were akin to crickets, bloodied everywhere, let known after:

‘The children and their mothers, most of whom lived in here, all died, a-gone, I say.’

‘Pin-Tork Torchnun, our savior that savors the bleeding dry, worshipper of the tongue, why have you engraved its symbol on this table?’

‘None the matter if you can stomach everything, stranger!’

‘But we’ve been acquainted, have we not?’

‘By now I thought you’d known me better than to savor killing and the butchering of me, a stranger!’

With which he started performing a few laps before settling down with eating from a basket made out of the most unnaturally dark, hardly lookers-made to be wretched, allure of empty beds, a trifle. There was no come nearer, not so far, or after.!

‘Still, I believe this exquisite masonry to be but the pin-up of an era of most lugubriously flung yet torn apart, a whore-after-whore, turned into, world that’s inhibited by only the worst descendants that somehow made it through without survival’s guidance having robbed them of all they were once made carry on their backs, not to alarm you any further, but there’s a single blot of an engraving that’s still a part of your hand’s turnkey lodged into your very fourth vein.’

He had dissected a momentary stopped, a blasphemous surgeon with no eyes to see anyway.

Nigger-women are nasty – Eighty forty seven

Finally the paved road is welded to the great lowered stratum. Lowered are the lesser rotten first astronauts whose bodies reeked with solemn decay. Their service finally ended, now allowed, in rancid stay, to walk humbly while the arduous remains allowed for them to creep onto the soil made by their such-hard felt descendants:

‘Even now, there’s little left for us to come onto the bravery’s end and cowl’s end devour. They shall not listen to us, nor seek entreaty, hardly as there ever has been felt upon their skinless bows. Huns they’re made out. But cannot walk by themselves!’

One pointed some eight firth of a long-finger, fibrously made to breathe, in candor wretched, deeply heaved. Albeit he wasn't trusted, nor would it last any longer than this disturbingly hard to stare at cast of a fist. Turn to rot.

A gate opened before them, sullen in appearance was the figure bent, holding on a leash of smoke, formed out of the hive-pushed-throttle crest that made the eight united bodies on which it crawled. Each bearing the tomb of their lost gods inside of; many in just as if not worse of an appearance than they've ever been:

'Good man, are thou possessed?'

'We're here, at last.'

'How long did it take?'

'Eight hours or so; can't remember the last time I checked.'

There was no sound in any of the cabins. Two men present around each of them. Mourning glass figures imprinted on the foils. Most of which were stapled to the walls. It was time. Eight of clock struck a tongue out. Wan-Chinese murals started appearing on each flat. Some of the doors started shaking eerily against the lighted-lamps, some of which stood there for a moment in the static plough, right before they started drawing each spade out, many were known. Carcasses made out of each and every single one of them. Forgetful glances followed around, a trifle passing hour cleared the way. Ugly tall men brought a plate, carrying the men through phosphorous remains. Dream-like vivid images started appearing.

In one of the chambers, rows of disappearing figures only now came to show, large fingers curled around each bathrobe. Barrels sticking on top of one another.

Strangely enough there was no one looking for the sole-reason behind the man sitting in front of the mirror, or rather who has been standing there for God knows how long's further approach, as it gained in stride; wallowing in wreathe and pain, his sole-step; him being rather one-footed or something of the sorts managed to give him, Bier Straughn, a furtive look of the sorts. It was an awful day to be in, welcome as he were, for reasonless stares often brought him a state of anxious depravity, often enough lead him to consciously pick a pocket off a lone trouser down the street. A valley of hills. Sincerely broken houses. Firemen doing what they should. And looking-glasses broken down.

'I am of the second lot.'

Both men approached a still-lot. It was unnecessary to talk.'

There was a floor beneath them that moved along as if on a straight then downward, beneath them, trampoline of the sorts, adding on to the rustic sound of jaggedness and tertiary fore-front back-turns they only lived through partially, this chaos leading to a stray fisherman's abode. It was awful to the touch, at first. But they endured being flattened, yet avid vices started coming back to them as if the freckles of a dying god just appeared once again, now, bloated to a point where they couldn't have been more distinguishable from the general hump-bearing pivoting area if they tried to. An unnecessary repast drew onward. Fewer than expected dead-coiled men started running amok in circles. Death had its say. Flickering in black bolted hooves attached to rounded umbrella-like tiny spics of screws, around the ladder-areas, which came as gentiles holy nearer to Christ's cross, the day they met, all five, in the Basin runt, in Nevada, Haltior nods.

The condition under which they were held in, to think in some way through which it may serve one as some kind of thought experiment, in which case, one may as well refer to it, unlike anything else bemused as some kind of basket-thought, as an utterly, beyond inconvenient, prison of thoughts and beyond it, a bothersome exploit of man's full autonomy in regards to his long-lived, well fed, well endowed will to survive. It should come to no surprise:

Twenty or so barrels held by chain to the ceiling, lifted then allowed to recede back into their initial position. Upwards and downwards like pumps. Inside a building, top floor: single window casting light here and there at weird intervals; purple-violet, weird magentas; with little panes sutured to the floor. Something's stuffed in each barrel. Man-vaults, shaped like fizzy drinks. Embalmed in yellow stuffing; readily set to erupt whenever someone approaches. They're legless, ugly and puffy. Their faces come in fours, military outfits became part of their skin and bodies as if welded to them. Surrogate twins of eyes for each face, all drawing near tinier plots in front of them, where they leap, holes are made. Ugly, reciprocal cries or shoutings reveal tiny pup-shaped metal shards dragging them down. As soon as they're released there's no foreseeable change inside the barrel, either one of them.

A glass door that's five by eight with a pseudo-pentagram of glassy-colored stitches worming their way in and out the frame as if they were real worms. Glowing, with little spaces in-between them where fingers come and go, in attempts to open the door in order to pass through. Some incendiary units of bolts, on the floor. Two diagonal towers, fifteen meters from one another, depictions of savage creatures fighting one another, whereas, between them a man can be found going back and forth, back and forth, touching them only once, eerily shaky hands making contact with fleshy watery things that come out the pillars. Shaking hands or implanting something in him as if stung. An ugly face appears on the ground, as if slowly, descending from beneath the most unbearable grotto that lay underneath the sandy shore the two pillars are in. And there are plenty of structures in the distance wriggling as if eely in nature or oozing about. Worse than that, the ruins are wide-spread, millions of people living in cottages that are welded to each structure, yet, a large probe follows. Unnatural in looks, it seems. In one of those houses, a pair lives. It's rounded like a tower inside, with many halls being dug down, by shovel twisted, leading to deeper chambers.

A lumpy appendage rests on the floor. A groove of pigeons surround it. There's no roof visible, but the four walls are wide enough for a few children to look down at what's happening down there. A chaos that cannot be explained, the room is shook by an earthquake; dispersing little blue angels now fly, almost knocking down a child in the meantime.

Large spherical tiny shades arose from the ground, splashing like gulps of water being swollen full by the crate around which they began wrapping themselves around.

Man enters through the roof, explains to the second one:

'This permit expired six years ago, and you're still here from what I see, still working on your old shenanigans with little shame or understanding of where we are or why we do this.'

'We?'

'Six other men joined your initiative.'

A day passed. And there was nothing in-so far as a single beat of a lamp, prodding down from where they stood. Large antennas that don't work as they should lain here and there, without even a convenience's mark letting one know of anything less rigid than the limbs that were adorning every single tomb of a rock, against which they were leaning against. A bathroom to the right, inside of which they hid plenty of picks; some made of iron, some made of inappropriate to talk about organs, oozing slowly, dripping on the floor. An unnatural flood emerging from some direction or another, unrelated to the blood holes of clot, the hyena-like figures coming out of them, in search of luster, most austere hunger-ending. Expressionless statues, statutory rape being filed slowly, archived even by some deranged people who gathered outside the "dorms", allowing for the growth of smaller sinners to amass, mostly heathens, outcasts, wearing strange arrangements that cannot even be fashioned for a change, made-turned into something recognizable anyway. There's a man in the distance shaking, processing is slower with him, there comes the realization that everything's about to come down crashing, burning, he's going to suffer:

'I'm afraid, I cannot explain why but I'm afraid.'

A stander joins in, barely moving towards him, slowly, eerily, deformed around the head area where two extra ugly contorted limbs appeared to have already sprouted, connecting to the ceiling, as well as one of the fancier, uglier shaped tables down right by him. An ugly conveyer's belt cuts the room they're in; in half. Twenty or so poles move around them; seemingly having come out of nowhere.

A lamp here and a lamp there, all wrapped, kempt, swollen.

Blue lamp

Its light starts prodding in the more it's being started at.

An image as if printed on a canvas, riddled with some sleeping pills, guns pointing downward at the single pair of cronies that were there. '

The summer's come in errand tray. A single man survived the day, with his feet embalmed, part of the rancid ground, a carpentry made out of disembowl, there he stood emerging:

'Who's there?'

'Shut your god damn mouth and open the fucking door!'

Soon enough came the reply, a musky scent that wretched the hound, for it stood no closer to him than it had stood by its master during the latter hours.

Twenty feet away a single hump, a whale's back copulated by a cut in, courteously so, many pieces of sofa, allowed for the growth of a tomb to emerge. A rancid falchion ripped away what could be led by fifty arms or so, in armistice. A priest without legs but a rounded hip, drew from beneath its back a head. Ugly, nasty, lest tormented; for what was seen, had never ended. A pile erupted from below, without a terminal to shine again, it walked towards him from the back instead.

'Let them come in.'

'But I thought it was only one.'

'You were wrong to think without advice, now you must do it, without reasoned crown. Either way, they'll get in through each humped-rip.'

'A swollen idea, then we shall cut their feet. Since you're prepared, in needs likened!'

'Lest be told, a toddler.'

'I shall do little to ingest a crown; your mission to so-falter shall only put my leash be-thronged and down!'

They didn't separate nor waited heedlessly arraigned.

Lots of buttons standing out; many held by tinkle-toyish rectangular devices, akin to typewriters. Some low-hanging wires standing out like bubbling sun pivoted outwardly –lines of them, strapped against, entering, wriggling, then shaking off the dust accumulated on top of them. Forming bumps, humps, and raised lumps outside the finery that is the tapestry that holds them under control. Iron tapestry of iron-screwed in bolts.

'Hallo again; sleeping on your post?'

He shook himself like he used to do, unlike suing someone in the court of law, this man was being no prudent that a janitor who forgot to clean his 'utensils', whereas, upon returning back into the place he had been fifteen minutes ago, mentally ambiguous arrays of flashings, elevated by the light allowed him to finally come to the realization that there was no way out any longer, for him or for the others. This unnatural sedentary life altered him completely to an undesirable, shameful, little shook- in the head, form, that was vastly unrecognizable to the very voice he heard and granted, listened for close advice, in his head also, where they reside for the time being, advice being grated into their very chests, these vaguely abstract representations of human figures, providing him the only, almost conspiratorial, much needed, poultry. Sitting alone a girl with a butcher's knife; dangling between her legs. Incapable of wielding it she plays. A game of staring ensues between the two of them.

'I was told I was alone.'

'Let them in!'

The girl encourages him to do it. Just like him. Either way, there's no fault in listening to your betters. 'Specially since no one asked.

It's in-contestable. Guilty as charged, knowing the outcome isn't enough to be known as a factor as much as one very much hates being presented with having to wait for a clear answer, which in turn dooms one ruminate on his stay, guiltily elected, procrastinating hourly upon his stay in prison; whereas each day will serve only as a means to an end, filling his mind with rot and decay, trapped inside a little cage, from which, whereas he knows no escape.

‘A mock trial, I see, but I’ve yet to hear from you again.’

One of the many telephones inside the house lugubriously began, but with a tubular-shone out of glass spike, come out of its lower side; ringing.

Stan picks it up in one lugubrious swipe, tenderly holding onto it while everything else unfolds before his cherry-picked, devoid of irises or the whites, swollen in and out, almost parasitically snail-like, eyes.

‘Who’s there?’

It broke off. Quietly mundane; half-a-day wasted tried to redial the number that just as quickly went away. Bound to grasp; huts around, moving Injuns past the door forming a mound. A niggardly epoch begins, galloping kings with their knights; opening the cage on a whim. But not a single man out there can enter. No matter how thoroughly they unlock each bar. Hundreds of them forming the rectangle, as they box each little tentative; of course:

‘I am not alone in this house.’ Stan declares, all mightily prepared to take each down, without a fear of what might be said.

‘This door’s a must for every key.’

‘Still can’t see you past it.’

‘A forest of mercy, unless wilt-cast’

There’s Arthur as well; the only solid one that joins him; a neighbor, or some image of him comes through. No wall is there to stop him, no brick forelain, nor stoppage.

‘If you don’t intend on shutting this door close, then I shall be the one to do it!’

The scent of sulfur is strongest than it’s ever been. Now, down the cargo-bay, a spire down the hole appears, leading a small two by two mine-cart with it.

‘Down there, lest afraid; do forget who’s being bothered, Arthur.’ So said the voice before pulling him in by a single needle-rack, chained by thin wires, tiresomely be-hanged in place, slowly did he see the membrane coming off the walls beneath and around him. Some finely placed rails leading to a simpleton’s door, frolicking in the distance like some wild red-glowing bat, almost taunting him as he went along. Beneath the cart, an on-lay of stone-chunks of pepper-shaped dolls, some little cracks of serpentine thorns, with a throne here and there, fire sprouting out of silver, cans of cabbage boars.

Caves interconnected by tunnels that had been usurped; little Anglican marks left over from previous excavations. In what could only seem a matter of seconds, as if long-ranged, remote-controlled. In mortem-linguae they sang, the choirs. Many pompous racks of bats, of little snapped in halves.

'Off and away with all of you, off and away I say!'

Seething little nests of webs, with spears thrown along the way; iron-tin, ocean whims, frozen fuselages drowned within.

In a little, tiny cracked by arm, a little vociferous frozen globe is born at last. Inside this jewel, there's naught to be, and whom approaches it, deeply so, withdrew, before his very own eyes. As if this little hinging thing; worsened by the blood that erupted within.

A bubbling cobble of clot stood so. Ten rotten kings readying themselves to be chasing it away.

Standing along the sealess shore, one of them begins chanting:

'The Iron forests are marching in the North; we can catch them during their advance and shall!'

'Then we shall make it before sundown if we've come upon a general agreement!'

A staunchly pair of legs emerged underneath them, rings of sand turning into galloped on top of hardened dirt, barely holding them together as they were drawn towards the forests.

Kafka awaiting his trial; inside a convert-Cadillac; a champagne glass filled with cockroaches, almost as tiny as pebbles, some leaping in and out of his car. The car is moving slowly. Far too slowly for the road-bumps to be ignored, the parishes; lead by Judas, a big boulder, cannot be avoided, there comes the crash. Fear's driven before his eyes.

Ten rotten kings obsessed with him, ever since they've been exposed to it, a tyrant's bode made them ever so much obsessed that their rot-filled minds could think of naught else but to stalk the author.

'Is there a better lot to stop by?'

Asked the one repellant foe, arbitrarily shot down, with a myriad of holes, backed against a cliff they ran to.

'Fall today and live much longer.'

'But I must follow just as soon as yonder. Else he'll fall off track.'

'Seek no justice among us if that's the case.'

'We shall offer you no council unless despair cypress.'

And it was over within a moment. Yet a simple thing occurred to them, the sound that was being made. In glory of being told as well, they ran in circles again. Finally a foot-print made in floor allowed. Each and every single one of them to follow at a march; it was sickening just how wild was the approach become. He followed as simply as he could, without the fear of being followed or beckoned down. A mill was in the way, alongside tracked a pair of tree-bark horses. Many disturbed as they played in mounts of gelatin; anger managed as they settled in. Each but unimportant, hooded, figures, flight within. They had abandoned their circles and were welcomed in by the man behind the counter. Above them, many such appliances as one would expect. A sea of iron-coveted wires, worrisome for the eye; even worse when you realize how rancid it all was, what it truly smelled like as there had been people right up there, climbing but failing to rope themselves past the breathing hole and into the caveat between the window and the crane. It ate itself out, the place did. Windmill blades spinning, cutting to wires that only appeared to reattach themselves. It smelt like rancid coils and coils of snakes, tendrils without ends, swamps, flaccid muck, snot, rapid rapid smokes pulverizing them visibly gaseous. Greenish powder confiscated by dead cadavers. Their lots were granted, simple skulking cobras put in jars. Drunkenness from far a-far.

‘Another cup, grand General and let this one be fit for a kingdom, for thine servants had just emerged!’

It was met with a bar of applause. Single pain-stalkers only drew night when they started bouldering the gates behind. Trapped like rats, they begged for release. Conditioned to seek fortitude by each cup they pleased themselves with. But that was not all, not even once, granted, there was little reason to seek them past the boil. A large thing in the middle of the joint; that granted them disgust, a probing temper now granted to each man that sekt the lust.

‘God is not permitted to be searched or looked after in a place such as which likened to thine come into. If you seek despair, seek no further. Granted, you shall only serve yourselves and lay each rot, and though shall only seek to hide away, when riot’s gone.’

As it happened, hundreds of them, in the same place, in the same hole, dug up and dug in, they had lain in hiding for hundreds of hours. Carrying their lone remorseful seals, in the wolfish skin they had gotten themselves in, disappearing from sight, reappearing at night, when the candles were rot inside.

‘Another round for the kings, not a single troubadour nor jester!’

Only a bothersome to look at fool, the deranged Pole, whom had blessed himself in hiding, stirred nothing as much as a rat’s simple tender bowl that rolled around. It was looming with perfection, the crane was.

‘I’m having a baby for dinner; going to, intending on eating its entrails.’

T’was brought to him to eat in ponder. Bothersome as it has been, during his youthful prince-like larval state at the University of Princeton. It hanged on what little memories it had, the child. Being consumed atop the pallid pyramid on top the ash-tray. Somehow it didn’t bother none.

There’s Henry Jack between them with a smile as wide as a cement-block near which he found himself every other way, pressing down tiny pearls he now sees in front of his eyes because of some hallucinatory benchmark he himself agreed to be a lab-rat for. I see him in my dreams some day; he’s much worse than what he’s made out to be, in person. In his cup there’s a dog. No barking in Nagasaki. Somewhere in Antarctica a new shelter’s being dug in, authorities on the subject come in, adjusting for pre-mature deaths, the dead man, fifteen hundred AD, back into the pit they chuck him in where he was found, where he may lay, when else but today? Large lard bubbles dropping with boils, strapped on living skin melting out of coy fresh corpses' how they prepare the embalming ritual with which they puff him up. It's impossible for anyone to get a word in; in regards to the exact and proper measurements; they eye-ball it one last time before the verdict's given in.

'At first-sight, I'd say, the poor numb-fellow is nothing but a victim of suicide, naught else, and improper. Understood?'

'Nay, there's something still bothersome about the kid, he's died too young, youthfully disgraced, in the epicurean flower, for it to be simply dismissed that way. I'd rather hold him under the scrutiny of some watchful eyes, two, three or eight more months, that's how long we need to get a proper reading on the kid.'

'He's died the way they say he did. You heard the communication prior to it, we've received intelligence on the state of the boy. The picters got there without being soiled.'

'Damn it Hendrickson. I'm telling you this situation is too fresh to be simply backhanded by a pair of lousy know it all.'

Henry feels uncomfortable around people. Giacomo is slipping past the door, heading in unannounced.

It was a reminder of the massacre, standing alone on a flattened floor; waiting for the next schmuck in charge to pull it off, without a benchmark, this being only an onanistic stance he was pushed into making.

'Care to share what yer doing with the rest of the class?'

Time can only pass ever so slowly while trapped inside.'

'Not yet, my dear, not as long as there are those expungent ears spread across the walls.'

A sun shone past the hill, it shone then came back inside the mill.

A little over a day or so, the run-of-the mill started falling apart. He was bastardly aware that they were waiting for him, but refused to step out of his convertible as dawn had already hit December and there was nothing they could reproach him for, him being hardly aware of what was going on around, with little success already on its way, anger stilling his mind for a moment, where, in that precise second he thought of cutting in, slapping them around since it was the birds of prey who decided whose and what's, when's and how when it came to it. Pistachio girl, grimacing at the crowd, for when push came to shove, there was little she could do but cheer, following them around, whenever pleased and cruel was the tide she felt, they threw fourteen empty baskets at her before fleeing towards the hills. Many such hills emerged out of nowhere during the long months. Most importantly, they were tactile in terms of how eerily they shook off those that didn't belong. Unnatural things they were, but they moved whenever pleased of the company residing in them.

'Spare me a drink, colonel, and I'll be your friend for life.'

Insane man, with multiple strokes having occurred throughout his lifespan; knives, bats, blasted ice-bags bouncing against car engines, leaping off eight' floors, only to survive, self-immolation, leaving him with too many scars to count wide-spread across his body. Interesting case; shows signs of improvement. God alone may judge him and the path he goes on; none other. Henry remembered him will. They walk in strides, they consume a lot, reeling back and forth off swings. Can't make out the writings on the walls; he says something the other one doesn't get.

'Ah, I knew it all too soon after I laid my eyes on it!'

Room's too small for any affordable movement to be had. It was as if the entirety of the sky had been barraged down into nonexistence before being replaced entirely by debris. Old memories still intact; saved in a little iron chip planted in Henry's rotten brain. His wife was mid-thirties strapped by iron, held in a small cell-barrel, unable to speak properly. Her jaw was missing, talking with iron-kegs.

'Shut your mouth already. I told you that I'm trying to get a shut eye.'

Down to four feet under the damp, a water facet had just began pursing in a bucket full of tadpoles.

Some dandelions start fluttering shyly as their role in nature ends, with an abrupt stop and little to be minded of their own finality, shrouded, cast. Fiery little pitches of salt scented with resin, come along. They marginally cast the ending forth and stray as the mountains of gelatin cast away the past within, their grasp now folding, a flowery ending wholesome unworldly, whose melancholy cannot be shrouded any longer, nor recede back into the hole they had been cast in. A smell unlike no other, coal, sooth, primordial candor; they walk in circles never intersecting one another, yet ready themselves to grasp. A mountainous nigger is alongside them, dead at arrival, but not on sight. The site now looks ruined, the mill gloriously blundered past the casting iron nettle cooed in. Refreshment, one of many yet brought dead on sight arrival; they march towards a break, drinking from a giant skeleton, a titan-of a figure that had been regurgitated by its people, twenty times over, beyond it and yonder. Yet the dead yearn release, as they reapprove every mismatch of soul to fluid-filled metal automaton that creeps behind them, bereaving gut while prodding back and forth, like soulless bodies.

'I am God!' One of them says, at which the others bow with much contempt. What little is left of their ears now lay even more rotten than they had ever been before. And only a few such dare to pick them up again, from where they've been left. As the ground, the soil, the fervent toil turn into utmost unnatural patches, they lift themselves while standing still as men provoked to combat.

A ship had sailed in the distance. Two Icelanders were seen abroad it. Neither one spoke to the other during their time abroad. They seem to be forgetting themselves at time, nodding only in agreement when the stakes are high, both on the table, mocking cigarettes in a jar. The table was round, the chairs un-comfy, walls bleak, tapestry ruminating itself into non-existence; stakes are low, now enters the barrel. Maladaptive skin torpedoes started gathering up one of their arms. Shared together pain withdrew within a puff as some heads began cutting their way out. It couldn't have been farther than the city, a large plot. Cement covered trees made the asphalt look like amateurish ceramics. A result of the cave in that happened above them, dripping from the cracking-falling apart clouds that could not be furthermore kept together as well as they had been prior to the falling pest that encroached itself around the buildings.

Hundreds upon hundreds of fens; Zickel looked youthful this morning.

He opens a strange door, exiting the hut by withdrawal symptoms emerging right away, under the sordid sun when everyone in the crowd was watching, carefully not to stir the baboon, this nigger-skinned fellow. How queer he is, one thought. I can't shake this odd feeling about him. What a strange figure he is, trying to encapsulate even the most miniscule movements inside his urine-bottle. That is what he carried with him. A nasty object; with many straws and tubes and other similar receptors that entered his under-gut, probing the least sever-joyful, Christian-like approach one might have to what was going on down there. Regardless of which, there was no telling just what other part of his body would fall next. Him, the Leper, mentally divine; the peaceful Cockatrice, a legend in his own right; a count, a duke, a guitar-playing no longer able to feel the succor of ashes that surrounded him, the man of no crowd, the lonesome one. Again, the radio started shuffling displays of some vapid operas that appeared to have been lost somewhere in the last century or so. It was a cruel crudity that could serve no means of accommodation. It was a cruel bastion that ripped away skin, tarnishing at itself, engulfing him with no more and no less than what the man begged for, a clean cut, a fine shot, death following him around.

'Set him upstairs, we'll carry him if he makes too much noise. Don't worry your fine-throat Jackal, you Panther, you Cock, I shall lead my men while taking him for his weight bedraggled, left behind!'

So they did, after five fine kilometers, they suddenly dropped him down, wheels cajoling left and right.

'Think he'll survive for long if we leave him sitting over there?'

'Couldn't care less, plus it's neither yours nor mine, to have a say in, this decision couldn't have been more blessed.'

'If so, tell me, advocate, for what reason is he still tied down?'

'For pity's sake and no less, no wont for ardor.'

'Hence I suppose we'll have him starved by noon.'

'Naught else will satisfy the wild life as they mourn for their loss.'

Plenty and plenty more of such dearly bribed with gut and meat beasts to forget who pulled the strings. But he was a rotten king after all, one of them, albeit missing from the picture. A few carcasses of some stray shackled rhinoceros, lions, manes. To kill them on sight. What travesty surrounding every footstep, playing songs from each print. Tunes from old magazines. Alarming sightings communicating to them. Unnerving, watching a man eaten alive. Cannibalism under the guise of nature. This was done for the might of Great Athena, the amazons, clans of females, rock-pigeons, doves, flight from war, release.

Invading from the East, among other troops that never even in-as much put a word in for the relentless pain that was caused during the absence of the first Patriarch:

'Here, prisoner, have some water.'

It was poured on top his head. As a reflexive instinct kicked in, he twisted his head in a snap, pointing upwards.

Ultramarine poured down from a specially coated cloud that moved, first one seen in a while.

'You're dead child. By noon, they shall be picking up another carcass, that shall be yours. Didn't think it would turn up this way, but it will.'

And another drink was taken by another one of the kings.

Sadistic missiles; all the way from other side of the continent had been quickly launched. Unutterable violence had begun once the people whom had been outside for this long realized that tiny planets were to them attached, by chains that wriggled. Other sides of the moons; hundreds of battalions started spreading from around the swoon; rape-whistles:

It was one thing to be there, sitting alongside the man and another to see him suffer this inconvenience. Strapped on a wooden pole; his arms broken, buried beneath the ground while still attached to him. A pitiful sight to behold; worse than that.

A four by four room with a pyramid of barrels in one corner, standing next to a sofa and a barely raised from the ground flat-king sized bed; with an eight ft. canon pointing at the ceiling. No sound coming from the boxes, beneath the ladder, leading downward on a spiral to a filled with eight people basement. All wide eyed, with legs crossed, attached to one another's inner beneath them, leading to, as in holes, petty-pecker hiding coves. Watery, mucky, like giant maggots connected to the men. States of affairs, getting worse. In some hole beneath the ground, some suspicion would arise, if one would only know what the likes of them breed:

Case study on a peculiar female of another species, beaked-type: What was only seen a few days ago would deeply disgust, let alone disturb a man to set an eye on this strange, yet peculiarly angular creature that appeared out of nowhere; just in time for a confluent expertise as well as a deeply-perceived observation to be taken of it. Away as she might be from her natural habitat, the size of a tiny forehead, bubbly even as if spat out of a windy tool, soap-bubble like, followed by a beak that could only poke one's eye out if he dared approached this malevolent beast.

Let alone would it thrive outside its habitual yet prototypically-primordial esophagus shaped tiny area of a plot of land where similar-to it creatures appear to live in relative peacefulness; that is to say, only as long as they are completely contained in no other area than it.

A garage-thing of a box, turned inside out. A pair of serpentine towers sprouting from it, interconnected with stairs as well as a single demonical figure uniting them, holding the structure together.

‘Open the door, now.’ Came in a voice, as soon folded back in sheath, they be coming:

‘Fine, the door shall be opened, if sort n’ sort though so desires.’

And there were finer grains spread across the floor. Some ugly, puckish, nastier than others; a single coffin was brought in, missing the hinges from the looks of it.’

‘That’ll be a fifty and forty.’

‘Don’t think that’ll do, chief.’

‘Payment is up-front, no negotiation, no refund either. It’ll hold you to scrutiny if you decline.’

Here, at this point in time there was no movement to be had. Not enough space for the momentum to occur while charging, as charging the old-man sitting in front of him was out of question. What an awfully wholesome state of affairs had come to haunt the rotten king. Presented with a small letter he had no other option but to rip to shreds, across the pail, revealing a tiny envelope he simply passed onto the man sitting in front of him.

‘A-pay do, without withholding any little thing of less regard, my dear friend.

You shall do as you please, come forth now.’

With which the man disappeared on a short notice, leaving him with-drawn from where he stood.

Upon closer circumspection, it had been revealed that the man inside the coffin had suffered nothing less than one hundred whips, the nigger had. From the dead-bolt, the nigger rose, standing up-front, waiting for another succession.

‘Have you listened to Vivaldi as of lately?’

‘I’m sorry, my good man, but I have not the vaguest idea whom that might be.’

‘Then you have little concern to the life of others, than they have with regards to yourself.’

‘What will you tell them about me?’

‘Neither is that your concern, nor will I allow you a peek on the whole account I’m to bestow upon the commission. Unfortunately for you, I think you shall be separated from the common lot for a long-long while now.

Do not interfere with the judgment, do not attempt, have no lucid say in it or you shall be beaten down and slammed against the ground ten times, relentlessly beaten time after time again; without appeal, escape or a shot given for pain, since morphine is the taste of gods.’

And gods are cruel, they feel little or show just as much remorse as one would have us all punished for daring to pitch a fork in, to rub one the wrong way, to hang them with the dancing devil in plain sight. Regardless of which, the rotten one was prone to attack. He had taken his position, was set entirely upon the brow of the chair; various buildings hanging there, which included the high chancellor's giant kidney which was chained, this colossal tender piece being held by a fallen apart building that had been barely pieced together as they spoke.

A murder in the house:

It is a deplorable state man has fallen in, to say the least, there is no possible excuse as to what made him fall into that state, let alone would one consider encouraging his pitiful demise's end as soon as one possibly could.

A wild fiery row drew in from the street, landing onto the porch, where, no more than one hundred people lay at the stake of an intersection of some five to six degree burns in which their bodies suffocated in the smoke that had resided in. Inside their odorous bodies, the smoke became fleshy, entities of the sort trying to get out, only to be struck by a constant push-in and push-out they could never escape the entrapment of.

Blood is gushing as from a sprinkler or a fountain from two adjacent to one another – walls.

'Hush it up before it spreads, you hear?'

'I've been to Tunisia before, mind you asking no less than needed, where to?'

'To the bottom, twice under, long-beheld the flight stars have I. Made for your company alone to stride upon.'

'Is there a point on threading along uninvited?'

'Not unless you want to go ahead and face the punishment the great Star-struck people have put in mind for your travail.'

'My travel shall go as planned. I have ilk-a-kin a mind not to be put down. Neither by you, nor by anyone else.'

'Then cut the talk.'

Before another rotten climbs along; so far so good. Not a single one of them was put down, of stretched, tortured, made relive through the pains of having planned no longer to survive.'

'I'll never leave this place, I hope not.

We'll jump and climb and jump and climb forever! No one shall stop us! No one to force us run amok or chain us either, no one to stop us, I say!'

Many conical with their tips cut spruce lay wetted by the back of the great gorilla body chained by the four great mountain. Its bloated-blood fed them as if ashtrays pouncing above chimney necks by soothing-boys drowned in tar. Clot that made them squirm as if they were very much alive;

‘Leave today, come tomorrow, outta ye hut’

There was no response, nor reprieve, a tough accent, Grand Prix-lanes basically a rascal in the making out of the tundra by many printed cuts, leaving cars planted in asphalt, forming two faces, biting each other after dusk. From the Moon one could see them fighting one another in pain, the terror of lanes, the starting of the race, pain-pointing in different directions, singing rightly, right away. Karate chops and baby ribs in one so-somber a triangle. Doves of crack-wires rampaged the massacre that happened downtown, leaving no chance for any survivor that could be seen to emerge from the eight-frontal region of the lower-sided entry into the greater lot. An infinite amount of leeches started spreading from beneath the earth, most completely broken and torn apart.

Sprouting from beneath the deluge:

‘I ain’t coming out, not at all. Better luck next time you slime of a calf!’

‘This is your last warning, man of good faith. For I shall burn down your cottage and your hut, ensuring your survival comes last between each knot!’

‘A trifle more than needed, I’d say. Turn around and leave today.’

‘That ain’t going to do it. But unfortunately for you, I’m afraid I’m being called.’

It shall be burn down by evening, when the sun-god dies, when the flowers go benign, and only after will my rage subside!’

The waiting commences.

A finger’s missing from the ashtray. It was a monpeasant moment, when the realization kicked in. Large ovals swimming across the room, slowly descending from a tiny hole in the floor; wooden legs connected making the walking area that lead to the spirals. Eight spirals in total, for every corner of the house. No one in their right minds, no one to have a wont to live there, unsupervised. Ugly, ugly, nastily mischievous things, following them around; beaked by nose-harpoons, their malady but twisted nastily, back to peace when they’re not around, but at such times disturb the sound. For their ugly sides were nasty-rounded, producing tiny auditory repelling sound-drivel as one would find himself flinching, and mishandled by their nose-makers, their noise-makers, scented as if by dysentery, faced by ugly deprecatory, do they roll around, following into darted camel-runt. Legged by tripping upon their fat-tails, armless but empty-shrouds nearly hold them together, shielding them from falling apart. It was not by mere chance that they found themselves following in the footsteps of the rotten kings, nor should one dismiss the eeriness of fate that had them come throughout the things that lay there, between them and the spot from which the Ruscoess family used to plant their dinners in. Plants of Flower-Great-All-Father. Tensions coming from the East; marks of the beasts, beats from New Orleans. Gangster rapping, corruption Platinum. Filthy music that decays, and yet to fall. In the Immoral garden where they don’t pitch to neon signs. Niggers. And they try distancing themselves from what’s seen, gathering around like tribes of gelatin, during the night fallen-end of Judea. Fifty degrees out-side of Fahrenheit. A gun is pointed at their lord. Inside the house. A mess for every apparel, the clothes are spread across the walls. There's a thermometer detecting light, how it used to be, now broken, spreading Mercury discs across the ground. Shattered plates, bones, images from some camera, not working out how's it been planned. Now relaxing in the pin-point laser scoped Paradise, wanted, buy no bounty lain on head. But they don't know any better, for no reason stallion leather. Instead, initiatory-glue makes every silhouette globular-as is, withdrew, did the one king of Rot, even going as far as tying his own legs together, in an attempt to ruin the lot.

The embalmment had done its job. For the time being. No man, no living man living here should fall, accordingly typographed on a small note.

'Hey, you intend on killing me? Or telling everyone else about what I've done.'

'Whichever's the worst.' He said.

There must be a method that works. They've been ruminating over a method of suicide for a while now, one that works, one that would work without a slither of pain or suffering. So far, the task ahead is only getting much worse by the second. Painful, filled with struggle, water intoxication, hanging, submerging, so on and so forth, things that don't involve the accessibility of a firearm. The alternative is being stabbed, beaten, tortured by other kings of a more rotten regalia. There must be a way.

Orange mountains, a red sea, two ice bridges leading to the Joyful Graylands.

A knock started beating a tray up the walls. Further bastardizations turned God into a mockery of its former self, that, including its worshippers who had fallen even farther from truth, be it as it may, a deity or a Universe falling apart as its Deterministic Universe's equivalent as a culprit, it may not be denied that either or might as might be said that both of them are nothing but the same; the free will's inexistence can only fall ever so short of notice to a small little white rat traversing through a maze; Impossible, impossible, impossible, making it truly impossible to reach the truth; in which case, how can the damned be trialed for being damned in the first place? No answer so far from the trite worshippers or theirs gods. No shame in mathematics of the high regard. But there lays a present storm. A rot-king bearing these inscriptions as they were aforementioned in its cape. Of skin stitched together, the faces on men, all stamped on their brows, foreheads and wherever else.

Born out of the vilest thoughts emerged the monsoon, the eye of the storm but made of flesh, creating a near-bone T and T connected by a swing, entity. The ARMAGEDON DOGTAG appearing from the north, swishing and swashing as if a fish out's its way off out of the water, a leech of a tag tampering with the strange being as if a mosquito, jointing itself once attached, the beckoning of an eye shooting many peculiar chains- forming spheres, balls, and other oddities that form blades and other extending by chains weapons it could not control itself, as to stop this cycle; for each weapon formed a ball as well, and every ball formed a chain of swords sprouting out of them.

It fell on top the mount sprouting out of winged, happened just twice of a boulder's come-between the side of and into the dirt, from which it swung right away.

A street dog passes by. No more than fifteen sheep of man, created by, copyrighted by its corpus-disfigured by neon spheres clone-feature can give the ordinance, now repulse, twice as shy.

In what appeared to be a lonely house there was no one but a cockroach filling its egg sacks with a beautiful array of marble chipped debris. So its children would be born as defects, ripped apart along their way to freedom and escape.

Salty water starts sprinkling from across the sea, all the way down to little old Tennessee, down burning bridges running around the midriff of the sea. Nowhere to run, but closely swam by the lined-shore, at the end of the sea. Same one, red, castrated, left to bleed, rosy-as to be akin to some smaller bee.

President Nigger Obama has just been assassinated by the Orientalid Troops.

There's no knocking on the door, only from the floor, two or so meters from where they're standing. Some light keeps flashing out as if out of some tiny umbrella left behind by some old Mafia member, gang sing, krips and the bloods, something else. A ferry in a bottle, some caveat between the ashtray and the fourth miss-tiled plank, the room in the shape of a radio with a fully extended antenna, that being the bridge. Leading to a metallic, sealed door made of glass, like a bank deposit super-put in the position you wouldn't want a robber to steal all you got. A goat in the vase. Still alive despite being drowned for years. At least its feet keep knocking. Vegetable grandfather, grandmother, and the cousin. But a free bed. On that's charged for by eight credit cards you pay for only if you're really off the deadline. Nigger-thugs thus romanticizing killing this joint. Old days stay strong. There's a dead kike in the middle of the street. Impartiality as one of them has his bloody head-ache fixed for nothing in advance. There goes another nigger-thug. And none say nothing at all. The United States flag molded into the Confederate can only be scratched so many times by hooligans and street-sharks, loan for days, live tomorrow, don't live another day. Fruits and faggots ruined it by piss but not after, as aforementioned, they came with pliers, pinchers, blowtorches and mosquitos, ruined it forever as no day after could outmatch the ruin that was seen. And here comes Charlotte, tall with grandeur, tall but a little stunt left her three legged, but without feet. It's painful to watcher painted in color blocks that don't even belong to get. How awful a stare indeed.

There was no point in trying to escape from where they stood, especially now that they were trapped in a bottle like flies, buzzing and ricocheting tiny baby-stones that were not only chipped against the walls they had been wrung about, but also trying at themselves to make-belief into being turned against one another, an attempt at a play so that the dust storm that had completely encompassed them would give in nonchalantly.

It was something that was hard to un-hear once experiencing it for the first time. A dirty sink was endlessly pouring down a throat. It became something unbearably unrecognizable.

Bag of pus:

A swish and a wash is all that followed quickly after. For the onboard crewmen had been slowly left to roast, off the coast the landing being very much an undisputable impossibility after the fire had been aroused. The sea and waves of flame belonged; there was no chance to escape nor could anyone. Those off-board died so swiftly, butchered like pigs, of some incurable disease other than the brittle-bone cold fire, that refused to die as well, turning itself and the sea in a frozen hell-fire they could not hope to pick a plank, stray off. On the shore, the lighthouse threw but a seal of long cords, corpses, little badgers covering for the lack of frozen fires, lending on a hand, the bridge forming slowly between the rancid, the cold, the ship that only stayed its course. Impelled by what had happened, the captain missing his left part, no leg, no arm but a single metallic pair of transistors, large carriable apparatuses, pumping in and out into a dance of plays, the numbed remains; what could remain of it, unknown.

‘Dear graces, I think I am late by just about an hour in the afternoon and in a circumstance I cannot possibly explain my absence to the gentlemen sitting in front of the gate, that I have barely escape a most awkward discussion I might’ve not been able to endear the likes of, without causing a most bastardy reprieveable, inherently so, circumstance, which would nevertheless have caused me to make a fool out of myself in front of the aforementioned.’

‘Then what made you establish a need to return to this party you could’ve avoided near-kin though it may be, in the first place? You made a fool out of yourself already, albeit unrecognizable by the people you’ve clearly enjoyed the company of, sort of, yet, barely capable of removing yourself from them until the incident happened with the bad crowd?’

‘I am not willing to explain this missing feeling of satisfaction, that has been besmirched, as did my honor when exposed to these puritans that bedraggled my every thought while I have been purporting a chance that I may use to escape.’

The rotten king did not say a word on the subject afterwards, lest he light up a lantern or a crown of be missed.

It was worthy of no excuse whatsoever. This blameful behavior, the wretchedness of it only purported into a pour down his skull as nothing else appeared to do him any kind of ideal return to his so-called fancy. Fire was become the sky, yet it was yellow, purplish, simple changes into the atmosphere that started bringing down men-into a blaze they couldn’t escape out of. Yet neigh said the horse as it rushed by the hellish scenery, returning to whence it came from, with a single limb tied to it. Three of which remain unseen.

‘Bloody think being left on this Island. All alone without a single thought of comfort that could pray to be brought into existence, don’t you agree, Pox?’

‘I’ll see one when I’ll see one, but that ain’t right, is it?’

‘Nothing wrong when it comes to killing women either.’

Myrtle, proud wife in sickened place, who had gouged the eye-shaped legs belonging to her husband now. She was but a beauty anchorage. AN anchorage to the sofa that she never strays, always awake, incapable of blinking for her own life's stake. There comes her husband.

'Morning sun-shine, missed me when I was away?'

'You know I cannot talk properly unless my self-esteem is cut away.'

'That's why I brought you a fish, so we may feast, that we may quickly engorge in it.

Never talk about this on the phone I say to you. They could be toying with your mind. It could all go, if you promise that everything will be left behind.'

'Either way, husband, you'll kill me when the hour has but since struck the clock. I will be dead by morning-light. All because you made by speech, rotten tooth, crippled me.'

'I say to you that you're wrong. My initial intention may have deviated a little but hurting you was something that never crossed my mind.'

'Then why have you returned to the sanctuary here at bay?'

'So I may see the fruit, the labor, what I worked for every day.'

They are both pouring a shower of needles over their heads. Some of them may have already penetrated both, now they're dying as they say. One gets the hard one, while the other little by little. As much as it hurts both to part; there's no misunderstanding to be had:

'My lovely one, is that a bottle made of spine and skin, sticking out of your back, many heads within?'

Most look as if they had been forced to grow, to take on the appearance of her pale white gown.

A rotten one enters the room.'

'Thine company is well received, for you have mistaken your house as one of my, as one of your own. Such a disgrace has never happened to me before, to have my house soiled, my birth-place, the one in which my death should grow, like mold, in desperation, rest assured. One sapient day is all that's needed, to be taken back in willow-cone.'

A reminiscence of the house. It's been delightful, the stay. For now, and all-away.

The allure had never been something to be proud of, especially now while drawing them out, from every cabinet in the house, cans, oysters, locked boxes, all filled with the most magnificent yet incapable of enduring filth- made out of rut, made by empty cannibals, heads that were shrunk, then hid away. Emancipated growths stating their say.

Tape two is being inserted, slowly like some disc barely capable, if permissible, of opening.

No one up to this day understands what the message curtains, nor what it's supposed to contain.

Ducks in the water, with their blood soaking run. Immediately it's insufficiently acquired musk of metal, falling like tiny snow-owls, down the drain where they belong; no, it couldn't be. The blood in the water became a ravenous figure, armed by large construction work-like piles put together to form a spine, bones, as-in-alike to humans, a ribcage, but headless, and without legs, each limb bearing ribbons made out of bolts. Many faces starting to form a pillar that drew out like a worm. Whereas below in, in an ugly pair of boxes rested its every organ. It drew out.

Joined them.

'May I offer you a drink or something? Perhaps something that might calm the waters?'

A sheet of ratty teeth pulled out the very mouth that spoke them

No word taken out of the intruder so far. Darkish figure of a mindless rotting tortured, who claimed his own corner, refusing to get out of it, regardless of the harshness of what came out of it. A bloody stink refined the air. They're savages, all of them, trying to cannibalize their outer tendons, the ones that are tied to the walls they keep pacing around of. A smaller tunnel lays beneath them, leading to a long-river, with hundreds of buried Bavarian-like creatures waiting in the dark, haunted by the used-to-be-alive, whereas their aim depends on simple red dots flashing at flesh. Larger animals or at other men; otherwise, there's nothing there to keep the reins in check.

'I have arrived here, unspoken, unheard, leprous, pus-withheld from me, in waiting circumcision of the very ground I ponder upon, incapable of breathing, yet still survive by means of implants.'

Those were the worst, kilt in action, missing, only to be survived by a false image of himself, jumping, leaping, going up and down like fry-burnt friars. Twelve discs with his stretched face imprinted in every single one of them. Now they jump, as if in waiting to start the questioning again. Worse than it had been before, incapable of self-control, they bring only the last of the fifteen pucker small-mountains in which he is to be burrier. Incapable of self-reprise, the first bloodied infirmary culled arrives at the space between the lower tunnel and the abomination of flights of stairs, ladders, and a cavern that is their long-lost home. Unrecognizable since they live in a giant belly holding all together, in the body of a leviathan hydra' like bearing outposts instead of heads, without limbs, fins, nor could it be found in the middle of any ocean whatsoever. Silently they watch him squirm, on the land-horn and that way down below:

'Why am I being follower, albeit my life hasn't even come to its end?'

'You were called here within reason to abdicate from your most insufferable position. For there are curls and semi-humans of a same ilk-sullen filth reward still trying to shrill the sound of an epoch, wave by wave, in echo's vein attempt to capture the face of their master, you, spoke-some creature, the inbred, the outlaw of skin-torn apart. It is you who should be acknowledge the end of us all if you continue on this sullen path!’

Bowed down and left to fend for himself, soon after he tripped down a vein of the Earth, as mutated as it had been, almost alive, capable of function, a small pickish pair of rats brought to him a much beloved company for the road. For that reason alone would do. This creature was almost man by half-a-lone rotten bulk of soils added together to his insufferable skin-disease. It wasn’t going to cut it, not this time.

Trying to maintain the contact between them was something beyond intolerable.

Morning coffee comes at four am, after a night of drinks. They sit. Not all in one place together, but still. Jonathan was the tall man he had met before, religiously inclined to bob a head down the cross that hanged around his throat, small feet that were twisted around by some growths that were dissimilar yet en-crusts to his head, a rag monsoon twisted yet which held his organs floating as if they were inside a hot-air balloon. Androgynous in appearance as well, plump yet sturdy beneath his waist, with some flicker of some intelligence inside his eyes, a brute with hair that curled around, pea-brained in speech, yet a wordsmith when the situation demanded it. Ravenous and prone to anger, incredibly flamboyant, prone to depression, now resting in a machine that somewhat guaranteed his safety yet not in sight, more like long-ranged controlled as if by a remote. After shocks changing his personality into volatile-incomprehensible to tell what’s in his mind kind-of-permanently in a state of manic-episode dictated by each invisible tazer that was shot in his back. Celibate but only when presented with young, youth-full, purported to lustful delirious desire, which can be immediately be told of by mere flagellant glance. In his mid-fifties with a kind of get out of Hell or barely escaped already fanciful schizophrenic flat affect thing going on there; large legged marathon runner with prune lips, incredibly respectful when at a diner, but waiting for the dispatch to call him back on the play-field.

Mahogany tables, syrup:

‘It’s not as if I don’t trust them, although, I.’

The Umbral Carnage had only began fifteen minutes ago when no one had even the chance to expect it.

‘ We’re here to talk, are we not?’

‘Shoot it then, I’ve been standing here for the last few hours doing nothing but creeping through the files. You’re not the only one that wasted my time, I can most indulgently assure of that.’

A grotto of a room, empty, bifurcated into a neck-like long giraffe-like of a raise, leading to a pair of organic out of the skull brains that pulsed while pumping blood into the air. That’s where they were.

‘Where were we?’

‘When’s the last shipment coming?’

‘I’m afraid to inform you that there’s no shipment whatsoever still going on the clock.’

‘Are you a liar, perhaps? Or have we been misled or misinformed?’

‘That I cannot say.’

Within a minute of self-cannibalization on both accounts, they started running around in large circles, before pulling the butt of a table, then placing it where it was.

‘Don’t bother the other patients, we don’t want to start a commotion.’

He starts brooming up a paddle most furiously. No touch for the time being.

‘Just a piece of mind.’

The weather was wet. The towels were on the left side of some comfortable to sit in –chair.

No balustrade by the sea-side to mind your manners. And the people swimming in the pool, they were as hardly erect as one could be in the circumstance. One of them is beaten up right now. Away from the swimmers, as the policy would have it, no bleeding in the pool. No scathing in the pool. No walking out of the pool wet. Neither family nor death.

‘Told you it’s going to be a fair heist.’

‘You didn’t mention anything of the sort to me.’

At noon they fight.

‘I wish I wasn’t so cowardly when it came to taking my own life. It’s the only most bothersome thing of all.’

They left the mill and were on foot.

‘If only it weren’t so painful, I might’ve done it a long, long time ago.’

Said one of the ten; he did.

A dark crusader followed them on the road. His eyes and face as darkly as the rest of his left-over hour. A miasma of the dark, black was the smoke that came out of him, as mighty as the sword was damned. It followed on their tracks with ease, seeing how these rotten animals only shed their rotten skins on backside of the rode, where he chucked up his sword, revealing his armored hand, filled with many smallish canon-guns, that were shot one after another, immediately killing the brazier on the run. And as fuel, by sword and crone away, when dead-skin turned the fire into a greenish gray, that’s where they went. Hiding for the night from this languorous to be set apart; before this, he stopped, coming down the snake-creature he had rode. Headless as the cockpit drilled inside of it where he would otherwise reside. Incisors capable of shooting then retrieving themselves, by a naturally grown innards magnet; alas he strayed the road.

Pumpkin heads on top the dead; their legs fully plunged into the ground, they grew in sight alone, reaching the moon while twisting the humanoids possessed by them into crooked, hooked to the ground belts. Now rooted underneath the ground, from where the rats-human faced as they were, found the perfect opportunity to arise. One shot was taken and the rest of the body clung, tried, squirmed, away, dragged into the space-abyss, incapable of anchoring itself in the top-of-the-tree-made out of gelatin.

Another one was taken by two shots. Others started wrapping themselves, flying and bastardly attempting to stay alive, they agitated the ground-worms, suddenly up they shot as well. BB gun like bolts, spraying and praying everyone outside was dead, killing without a single sign of there ever being some remorse. A dog is chewing off his ankle.

Cruelty note fourteen:

Saw a pigeon the other day. Chucked a tiny rock at it, almost blew its head off.

Missed it, missed it, missed it, missed it! So close that you could feel its blood start running down into a stream of look-alikes belonging to its race, thrown in the gulley with a fluttering behind. A cemetery lay on the side. And the sounds of the sea were benumbing, to the teller-man taking on the phone. His back was round, his limbs were fatter blobs, whereas his head was kept on top a dark, spiked by springs iron neck, keeping it all together. Without eyes and faceless at most, he moved akin to some snail, wandering about, in waste, and plenty told instead.

The Teller-man ends up being wrung by chains. A lot of whips of iron boding tails. Another dark crusader returning from the front, incapable of stopping or slowing down, there comes a fuming gulley with him, painted pink by rose petals, that ended up there by chance. Each of them had a human head attached. Beneath them, worm-roots squirm in iridescence as the song's about to stop.

Voluntarily he takes out a helmet only to reveal smoke as well as some rod with chopped of strings that spit. Beasts are afraid, they flee at the sight of it; all but the blur of a bear storming in the same direction one should think twice than be-draggle himself into.

'Stop yourself crude bear. Before off might steed he faints, to fall apart in cruelty revealed as you used to be but now the dead.'

Come out of their graves.

'Lest reckon such release, stop.

Rebellious as you've yet become.'

A simple little dark thing, as a shadow from the side of the grave, a nigger no less from the Ghetto, which was connected to this land, now withheld. Many of the pollution houses now were stopped. Forth comes the law of the pavement, against which heads are banged all the time.

'Fucking nigger, you think you're tough? You think you're tough nigger? Show yourself so I may swoop down on you, then break your neck.'

A throat is there, giant, covered in moss. No chance for a safe approach, as the monkeys rummage with violence, rummaging everything, including themselves. Whereas, as the night draws near, the ten kings of rot become conjoined around their hands, like some merriment, some force unruly holding them together from the split. Spinning in circles, about to start a parasitic biological war; not a single cry for help follows, around here or, there, from what's been told, ankles worm around people's legs; being controlled like a bunch of marionettes.

Inside one of them buildings they hide. Baking weed batons, snorting crack and Aids in their rituals down below; the four ghetto-wizards did. They say.

A simple dog is killed down-street, next to the Abbey.

It stands there, without limbs. They bring the neckless heads rounded on wooden wheels, then attach. Attach, attach, wriggling tiny knives around, to fit, cripple, beyond extremes. Next comes the fashioning of walk, ensuring the organs are well put together; the dog is in control. A finger is chopped, then the thumb as if by the magic of make belief, the others but follow by. But only the people staring at him from different perspectives are affected by it, the reason of the hollow eye. Blinds are spared, those who don't stare directly as the dog-wheeled-heads. Nor, within reason, would the pups survive, to walk with gaits before it comes to it, struggling their whole lives. A view most macabre unleashes, by parry scum, wild belief.

'Poor blind man of trickery, he's been cheapening us still, lying for his sole release, rueful if not erected to be had.'

'A liar punished for begging with no cause. 's what he deserves happening to him.'

But that was not all. For chains sprouted from its back, many of which lifted limbs, humanoid-limbs infected. Smallish bulls of green-fleshy, with unnatural see-through 's, infected and infested, grown balloons-like. Yet the dog head remains, as pure as children, as pure as trains.

Trains run down children on a daily basis, yet not a single soul seems to care. All too busy in their stores, dramatically inclined to rip off chins, skins and squares; off the downside of the road.

'Dog, what have you done to the people? Now of all, they're losing their legs all together, their organs flatten, their faces become gas, but arms grow of the latter. Too many for some to carry, toothless ivory, squandering shelly. Ain't no man I've seen before a cannibal. These are good folk you have corrupted, but they beg for a means to eat, since you've lest beheld, without incisors to be arched back and done up stairs. It's all lain in circles but you walk. Never stopping, a scorpion on an errand, sad behind!'

And the dog's name was Nigger.

Cruel down to its very pores, incapable of listening, arrogant and spoiled; like the hooked rats leading behind them. All too subtle. Ruin had begun to spread, the downfall promised soon after. All too soon. Nigger acquired several axes it had stolen from a conical shed. Furiously leading an unwilling to properly follow in its paws, men, women and children that had almost died but for one thing that prevented them from fully dying; that is to say, their gasses mixed, unrecognizable down to the last human enslaved.

Intermission:

They met in a tavern, during a raining day. A few dogs that were unharmed by either the toxic gas released by these humans in the air, uncontaminated, gathered around a round-filled room of taxes, beer and whores in order to discuss what was to be done about it.

‘The assassination should be our top priority in getting rid of this ugly mutt causing us all the trouble the humanoids are incapable of getting rid of.’

‘Aye, aye!’ Was chanted, he said.

Immediately before spitting, partially, a human arm each, which was permanently attached to their jaws from that point on, bearing knives, which were immediately plunged inside the table; which bled on the floor, a copper-syrup close to blood. It immediately turned red, as if it were a moon during some decrepit infertile eclipse.

‘We ought to strangle him before death, showing him what we’re made out of, no more excuses on either of your parts as well.’ He spoke through the hollows of their eyes.

Bloodshot-pink eyed.

Just like the floor.

‘Nigger is practically unstoppable at this point, but high on the high horse as well. Brothers, I say, he must be dealt with at a distance before he cripples us all by hard approach.’

‘Fools, not everyone of us is as blind as a potter’s wife. Hence naught was still taken from us yet.’

‘Idiot, this was a bond of loyalty, this self-blind prophetitazation, this self-fulfilling prophecy of ours and the ones that followed in our footsteps. That we may rise without pain, bold. That we may rise without fear of what might happen to us all.’

A calamity that couldn’t by normal means be avoided as well. For that wretched dog was headed into the ghettos, possibly the worst place one of their kin could stumble inside of.

‘Press do tell, what happens If he does? Would the ghetto-wizards not bear a saying that might force this son of a pup be fallen on the least of an instance? Are these ghetto-animals, the niggers, the one serving the one true white man not be unleashed upon the race of our skin, cruelly tormented in the process of magnanimous transformation, as he is, is he not a dog? A member of our kin? A beast alike to the nigger-kind, in folly and in spirit?

Remember my words and hold them by spiked leash. As soon as they meet the juicy taste of our, they shall not stop until all of our kind is fully devoured!

'But that is completely ridiculous!'

'Hardly, let him speak his mind.'

'We hid for long enough in a world where dogs are killed, mated with purposelessly indecision, since we may not breed with the races of men. This is our chance to make something of ourselves!'

All in due time. For the magic that was being kept in the hood was but dragging the niggers back, beneath them, slaves for these filthy blacks that divided the community. Four great negroes in possession of the community, preventing their evolution, keeping them in as short a leash as humans did with dogs; not that they would allow themselves to move with piety, away and away with witness beheld by chimps in dark holds.

'First we need to reckon a prayer to the chasm, from which we may find ourselves rotting as they with-had, a-gone and a-way with the great demons that were scouring the dreadfully twisted plains of their ruined world.

A king of diamond should hold ten worth of rot, hence we must seek council only from him, if that's what will bring them to their shrouded amnesty, not to mention their edict of loyalty, to the mighty crystal one!'

'My parents are dead. I killed them. I killed my parents in cold blood, I did. Their deaths meant nothing to me. I did it in cold blood. By strangulation. Suffocation, all me. Done it alone, no witnesses.'

Dog-headless said, out of a limb, tis sound coming out of.

'I killed my parents as well, but not the way you did it. I couldn't possibly imagine what went through their heads while it happened, other than my bullet. Both of them done at the same time; this echo hounding me for ages; then I killed my baby-daughter; that bitch of a wife. I slaughtered her family. I hope they're dead. I hope they're in hell, burning eternally. With bullet wounds around their temples.'

Another one of them killed his parents as well, for loyalty, for profanity, decadence, blood. Erupting out them, springing up n' down. The table was filled with sin.

Outside:

Large epochal buildings sprouting from the ground by bars of iron, bolted around them akin to bird cages, sewed on behalf of iron.

Dog of Isis

'I threw my parents straight down to hell!'

It was decided then, ever so needed on the intercom it rose, following them by, but at a distance.

Afghans flee in the distance. Order has once again been restored by the Talibans, whom were lords against men who adhered to such cruelty as they would turn to ride, to flight, in nature's desert, prone to such delights as no man had ever known. Tall man, the Taliban, covered in sights, wizards wearing black, upturned, trying to turn this desert into a plot of diamond sand. Sacrifices would be needed in order to bring their dreadful gods back into the world.

'Behead him I say, in the name of all that is righteous. Gag the females so I may not see her deformities grown erect, spreading like some awful disease that cannot be controlled any longer.

Long Live Isis, Al Qaida, and our groups of angel-fallen stars, in the name of sweet Allah, skin these women alive as you can. Torment them so they might reach no Heavenly abode as we were promised, then squash their heads on the sand rocks.'

As the will of the Taliban emerged, the Pentagon started fuming with fury. American child soldiers were denied the right of return to their homeland. Now prayed upon by the vicious Talibans, they turned to the last civil disobedience orders, so they might not be had. Eighteen hours before the debriefing could start. Stars were unaligned. There was no possible saying of what might happen after, or if the dogs could kill the dog that was stepping on them, in the fury of the sub-polar flame.

'Put them down as the animals they are.'

The ghettos were but slave-factories, created in the will and desire of Kin-Hallag.

'Women shall be fed to dogs from this point, but lo, behold.'

A black storm, a hurricane as black as coal started forming from one of the taller huts. As if haunted, the spirits of the negroes that attempted escape, pretending they're American children as if that would work on either end. It made no difference whatsoever, no matter how close they got to the source of this insanity, the farther they forgot.

Somewhere else

'He's there!'

'Open up the fucking door already before I kick it in.'

Kicks door open, he thinks. Door slowly falls apart, he sees.

'Damn it, there's no one in.

I should've known better than this.'

Somehow the door handle, which was a big bulbous thick bug-torso formation with some interconnected leashes that still pulsed a little by little before the thorax smaller bottle-like container, inside of which it held all of its organs, for safety hood alone.

‘Excuse me, but is that your illegitimate child sitting on the left side of the table, near the sausages by the candlelight?’

‘Not that I could think of but you know how children are. Oftentimes, children should not live.’

‘If that’s the standard procedure, then that’s it. It’s settled.’

Such was that they brought the child to an incubation unit, a large thing with an oval-oblong bubble coming out of some giant socket device with many contraptions, plugs, large mechanical claws and Soviet Union paramecia keeping it together; a shoelace-tied in brick inside of which there’s a single pulsating egg-yolk. With a spike in it, the child got impaled by, dragged inside, fermented until what was left of that humanoid could not even be recognizable any more, other than a puddle of jelly, that is. slowly being disintegrated inside this strange device.

Polygonal stars wearing shogun armor also appeared in her vision, despite all that was said.’

Inside the very own apartment:

All it took was but a simple incision being made somewhere beneath some arteries, some hinder motions postulating a most unutterable shrill that had begun echoing throughout his very own limbs. His organs started contorting into gut-figures, reflecting his own. Stretching continuously as to en-wrap around one another until a six-row concoction of limbs that was unrecognizable as a humanoid emerged from the operating table. Some of the contraptions were borderline as twisted as an uprooted tree’s many roots. An anomalous sea star of the sorts; partially eaten by its very own desire for carnage, lain in a land where cannibalism was at the order of day.

Nevertheless, it was suddenly released; anxious to finally being released, it moved towards the sound that was made, the nuisance not having been awakened as of yet. He wore a simple medallion nonetheless, which lured in the other beasts, that had been squirming in ooze, across the remnants of the previously lived in apartment.

Father Blood-Piss, head of the Pharmaceuticals was one if not, one of the most distinguishable of all guests to be called in the desert during one the awakening of the many spire-towers. His blood was tainted, smeared the sand. A foul stench could only have arose at that moment when a voice clearly echoed throughout the building.

‘Put him down, we have to put him down before he spreads.’

Only about fifty feet below them; they were members of the Wolf Destitution.

‘Cut his cord, fry him up, do something before he wakes up from this stupor!’

Twenty men join in, all armed to their teeth, incredulous and incapable of even showing slight chances of breaking through him. His body seemed to have solidified. The power-plant in which they were, all droned up; armies of the world united at what seemed to be only a small pot of CO2 emissions going off the radar, coming up from him. A murderous heat could only be the sole thing that would describe what went through their heads because of the radiations that were exempted from his body.

And then, he came in. Jonathan Indoor with his family inheritance; the two wailing two-gauge rifle he carried over his back, right over his shoulder. He had taken it from none other than his brother, the one had killed no sooner than three days before their meeting; the serum had driven him mad, the serum beckoned for Jonathan to put him down like some damned dog, leaving him with nothing else to face but this horrid abomination that was no longer a human being. Most important of all, he only dates women with brain tumors, in fridges.

This fridge in it of itself has just arrived, with Indoor inside of it, preparing to, any second now, pop!

Easier for organ harvesting anyway; the hour had come for the flip to begin. As if a cuckoo clock, Indoor sprang out immediately out of his cage before his very own men.

‘Where’d he flee to now?’

‘Somewhere in the desert; it’s uncertain we will be capable of reaching him any longer, with all the energy he amassed from this spot.’

Radiation was still flowering from the point-quark needle shaped holes before them. It was no use trying to deny what had happened there.

‘They’ll know eventually, the word will spread out and once it does.’

‘No one needs to. It’s back in the fridge for me with my love if this fails. But until that, we still have just enough time to find, capture and destroy that abomination.’

‘Very well, then into the desert with us!’ He said, the colonel.

A rough journey follows. All bleak before him; four by four men carrying this cryogenic coffin, while Indoor is busy body-bonding a tootsie inside his shell; no one says a word about it. Almost mechanical in their movement, they follow the wind of spring while they’re still at it.

Two am and there’s already one lost cadet from the flight. Fifteen hundred miles for them, inside a dune, remnants of a helicopter could be seen. Twenty four cadets, mostly dead from the lack of water appear to be moving no longer. One of the living ones, that’s a must see. The coffin’s dropped, all of them pull out their guns. It’s a rough landing. But they meet eye to eye anyway.

‘Put them up and keep them that way if you know what’s good for you!’

Again, it comes. A washing rain, they can’t see clearly, but feel it, roughly. It’s mercury, with some bits of metal in, like razor blades inside of Halloween candy. Now they come in full force, side by side, remade the line, two behind, one for cover, hiding in a small patch belonging to some tinier sand-womb; all rifles pointing at this unknown bandit; eerily shaking yet in place. From behind him, out of his back erupts a crossbow holding a tiny ball, shot immediately like a canon. One officer get pinned down. Both of them die. Buried together before the remaining seven pick up the coffin again. Absolutely no noise is being made any longer. Unusual sounds start piping up again before getting stopped.

‘He has a wife, god damn it!’

‘Unimportant. He knew what he was getting himself into!’

Two am five days ago.

Mummified remains on the spot.

‘My home is destroyed, what’s left of it is less than ashes.’

Large unnatural socket-plugs worming their out the ground, releasing slices of pig heads, just around the farthest reaches they could be thrown in, in order for the piglets to survive. Crates were being left over there. Some uglier human-doll the size dimension of a large orangutan sitting by eight barrels, with flame-candles laying at the end of some short sticks practically glues to some lamp posts. Dead soldiers just around the fields. No one had survived the previous war, hence why what remains after is absolutely nothing but a big, giant flirt. Finally, when the sun’s down there’s still release from the moonlight leaving everything as it used to be. Indoor wakes up from beneath the dead girl he had been laying underneath of, now confused and unable to act but blabber off something incomprehensible, thinking they’re all dogs that need to be sent back to West where they belong. Slowly, portions of the sand start creeping in as well. He’s drunk or seems like it.

‘Settle down, you’re safe, you’re safe, nothing happened.’

‘Other than the man we lost.’

‘Fuck off with that. He’s on an Ivory tower, the head of the chief, he’s survived worse and I think he still breathes.’

Which was obviously a lie, both the man and the cadet they had met in the desert had died out of something that could not be called anything else but a mutual suicidal followed by some unknown-to-the-men revival, somewhere on the dark. They should’ve abandoned the fridge and thrown it over, just like a fried chicken container –made raw, rotting away while the clock kept draining every moment’s shot way. Again, they were agitated, afraid they could say something horrendous, turning him against them once again.

‘Say it, what’s wrong with that thing spotting his skin?’

So fleshy and unutterable, not like some rash but akin to someone who had dug his fingers deep inside, making him squirt with blood, draining it, this pus-ball, eating from it, then stitching it all together. They wander about, now eight again.

‘What about my sleeping coffin, king of cold?’

‘That’s going to be left behind and it’s none of your business what’s going to happen afterwards to you or them.’

‘Them?’

‘ Don’t tell him yet, I think he may be wired?’

Fills even work under cold pressure. King’s triumph, here he arrived.

Seven of their rank take a kneel; Indoor stands tall, stands his ground with no worship, not a thought of it.

The Rotten King say nothing but follows him inside a circle, from where he finds his preferred, suddenly, yet to be taken meal from this kid Indoor, this punk, ready for reaping. Chasing doesn’t work and the rotten king suddenly takes a break.

‘You’re not going to catch me at this rate, and I can guarantee you that I intend on leaving you behind without shoving the proper respect you so wrathfully seem to cull.’

‘Sooner or later much of your kin will fall on the same footsteps as they did. It’s rather impossible to be denied. Settle down and show me the proper respect and I shall leave you as you stand, untouched, unharmed, with everything inside of you still as properly fit as you’ll have it.’

But he continued running, alone this time. Leaving them all as in foul party.

‘I think.’ He said. ‘ That this is going to be a rough play, my feet shall be abandoned by spare-strings, like the ones pulling from beneath the ground, an army of them.’

Many of which shot at him, spears of iron sprouting from eternal sands, whereas but not wherein, the chanted rotten figure merely pulled the cold-conditioning unit off the ground then put in on his shoulder, carrying it without regret, over the spear of hot the next day the rest of his crewmen now withheld.

Box cradle and Pox-Snake pass them off in a raider’s car. It was a rental that went off too high on the sand-rope, ending up in a small chiming in oratory of fields beneath the entire curvature of the desert. Out of the closest reaches, beneath a waterless tiny plot; they had been brought there by inattention, the end destination being a tiny crystal box they could no longer get out of.

‘This time you screwed us both. What do you have to say for yourself. You think we’ll be lucky enough to be found by some savior or something like that? Because I can promise you we won’t. Not in the lowest reef of coral anchors, beneath the sail-less ships, beneath the cost, above it where the submarines can barely reach trimming the ocean, there, where stands a sunken ship. Eerily for a few minutes before the drown; where the crewmen know as much as they’re aware of, that nobody on deck will survive.’

A dead end from where no one could escape the clock. Hidden in the sand-lock, heartless there comes the leper, the one with bulgy eyes, from beneath its head, as many as fifteen, drooping in a sack of flesh. A body of pseudo-gelatin. With hinder legs and morbid-standing by each side of him, appendages. Barely sensible as to walk, jumping most unutterably while they watch. This much was obvious to them.

‘As long as we’re in this box, then we are safe, no one to disturb us and no one to pitch a single venomous injection that would make even the dead falter in their dreaded hidings while we stay.’

‘Should we stay and wait if that’s the case? Surely you need know better than that, to withdraw know would save us both. Perilous as this dreaded jailer is, I think there’s still hope.’

‘I see none, nor shall you convince me of there being any, otherwise. I say this with all my heart. Our cart is ruined, and I feel little that needs be told as well. If this reaches even the closest of starvation fields; in the afterlife, or wherever might do ill. Then we are truly doomed.’

Both of their spirits were fleeing away, incapable of seeing any longer, blinds incapable of hearing the rain. Petals drop in the distance.

‘We should stop and wait.

There could be cadets here, standing and pretending to be still as corpses on a crop.’

‘Have you had a short-notice of either one?’

‘Only that one incident, but they could be anywhere. Of that I’m most certain. I know what they’re capable of, their strength going way beyond ours, by all means of distribution, power, self-thought, strategically speaking and all that.’

‘Translation please.’

‘We’re outnumbered and possibly outmaneuvered by them, even as we speak.’

Actively sweeping the ground for any signs of footsteps, hiding beneath and beyond the sand-floors, somewhere, there, anywhere, swimming like fish, trying to rummage into skin, so they said. They thought of them moreover like some kind of parasites, slowly making their way in.

‘Enough with this paranoid blabber; they’re nowhere to be found. And frankly, they couldn’t live beneath the sand or the dunes, for they are cursed. Indeed, they would mince on their bodies if the slightest chance even passed them, so to speak, if everything is in our favor, then we’ll make it fairly easy. I say.’

Said the king. His henchmen now out of the brow of the sand.

Another dead-point somewhere, one of the submerged, heavily beneath the living area, nuclear plant; where dirt and earth had been swallowed almost entirely, leaving no excuse to one who was after them to stall for more. This beast formed out of metal, out of skin, in-humane as it was, could not force itself to stop. Not until it reached the source of power it so desired. Not while its ancestors were looking from beyond their graves, in that unnatural state they had been forced into. Not living, nor dead.

‘Another one is close by.’

All alone, with no more troops to slow him down.

‘I can feel you getting closer to me, I can smell your scent, your fragrance. It’s drawing near me, and I can truly feel it as it is.’

Radiation started partitioning the moistness hidden in his arms, legs and chin. Something beyond doubt lay clear, in-so-much that this dreadful disappearance of horses now ensured their own reappearance right as they drew in.

‘But I have come prepared. Here’s apples. Tasty apples, enough apples for all.’

Their delightfulness at theses shiny globes reassured a complete cooperation. Nothing would get in his way, not this time, nor ever. Radiation had rotten their guts, they could walk on their hinder legs and pretend their human, but that alone would not stand aside.

‘Do you not trust me?’

Have I not made myself clear in that I seek your friendship as a man to a horse, with all do-respect for your race and mine?’

Neigh, neigh, neigh was all they returned. It was a vice, it was a splendor, it was something that went over and between them, it flew in all directions.

Sand forest and pickles of cacti. Beneath the earth, Charles was busy working on the radio, trying to get a signal he could not reach by any means. Regardless of how hard it was try, there was no sign of it giving in. Twisting, lashing, whipping its wires all over as if it were an entity in itself. No joy came to be. Any dune that crossed on top appeared to be leaving open sore-throats shaped like malevolent frogs with multiple empty holes as legs, through which more sand was being allowed to drift in. There was also another drainage that passed through this ‘animal’s tract, a pouch of some sorts turned upside down, releasing tiny scarabs and sand worms, right on his hand. Charles Angler was no longer a human, by all considerable deals. But still, coffins of cold, fridges found their way falling through the ceiling, almost close enough to him that he could almost release himself from the death trap he was in. Spears by his side; a multitude of unrecognizable any more-arms that got thinner, yet connected, as almost wings, his body humanly ended when his head was become almost a nickel merged into a fleshy stove. His legs twisting still, forming a tail that only dragged down, its every tiny scale being faced by him at every turn.

‘Come on, drop closer, drop closer. Much closer, please.’

He had been almost completely enwrapped in scrolls, ink blotches painting his eyes-these globes. Popping on out, then spreading into threes. Six of them, not including the periphery. The incubation had taken too long. Angler could barely focus on the noise that was coming straight from outside. Yet, the preacher began.

'Blessed our thins with cans of cold; may the lord keep delivering his probes from above!'

Empty, all of them, he thought as he saw them flipping in and out, to the side, crawling as if a pair of limaxes, strayed off the roads, and fell down deeper into the insecticide. Poisonous gas was being release, puffing little by little, his eyes could barely drop during the consternation, that damning feeling that had lifted him from where he dropped, into a deeper hole, from which escape was benign.

'Release me immediately, and stop chanting your most insipid languorous sermon!'

But his voice was drowned with every minute that passed by. And there was little that could be done in his case, since the voices stopped releasing themselves.

Nigger-ghetto above the sand; near a blackened by ashes, ripped by fire, hell-fire brooded, in nigger attire. Continued the three Nigger Warlocks; shameless in display, walking thereafter, yet again. They drained the lesser niggers of their vitals, their blood disciples, monkeys whose wrath would not stall until they came after, all who opposed them.

'Darling, I don't suppose you'd happen to know what he does for a living, do you?'

'Not that I know, since we haven't spoken for over twenty years or so. There's definitely no turning back now, is there?'

'His majesty hasn't even arrived yet, perhaps a drink so we may savor the moment?'

'Whatever you so desire.'

There were a few tables in the café, and only four or so cups and coffee mugs that had unique names painted on them. They were in the self-serving part of the locale. Five or so teenagers wasting their nightly time sparrowing on small blocks of plastic, called phones. It was that awful generation one could not withdraw oneself from. A scoop of ice-cream, she asked her boyfriend to deliver her. Only five or so paces away. The couple looked young, almost as if they were looking at themselves, they observed their temptuous motions.

'I remember being as youthful as he is, always clashing head first into the first girl that gave me attention, diving into it without even thinking or knowing whether she's into me in the first place.'

'Never took you for a charmer.' Said Lilly lividly.

The man they're waiting for is a baker. He should be in any second now, but still manages to find a way to stall. It was a plain-night sight, perhaps irresolute, too irresolute to bring as much as candor as the lights aligned on top the sky. A nigger cab-driver stopped his motor. Here he comes, right before they were preparing to get something for themselves.

'Excuse me for the delay. I've been in the market recently and suffice to say, I was not disappointed at all by what I saw there. You wouldn't believe what I saw there.'

His words were uncanny and his mouth swore to some unutterable wars that happened to do it openly as it came. There was no standards as of yet, nor would he foam at first of the occasion.

Murder means procreation and there could only one be alive, as it was, as it was permitted. The nomenclature demanded it.

'It's a sin to alleviate pain in the middle of a summer's eve, but I suppose you've not confined even the littlest endeavors of your past that may be lain to us to heed the answer from.'

'You're misguided in your approach and truly ignorant in the manner we've both agreed to carry our conversation in. Lay down your arms and don't speak to me.'

'That I may not do, but waste breath no longer, for I am already of a mind to ignore your ignoble approach; trash like you belongs on the streets, but you shall not hear that from me.'

It was utterly repelling, having them both sit at a table. Both Indoor and Charles were already come to a mind to leave everything upturned, leaving everything that was said behind. What an utter ignorance would that be. Not to mention perilous as well. Since the two men had both something in common, which exacerbated and annoyed both parties' implicationists; that being the result of having arrived on the scene invited by the men. Two dames, from what could be told had nothing more to spare, let alone do something that might contrive a simple change in the two men, a change so subtle that it could not go ahead and remain untouched. The subject began again.

'Sit down the two of you, can't you see that you're both disturbing the guests as well as ruining this entire party?'

'A woman should not speak unless spoken to.'

'What was that again? I thought you came here like a chained mutt at my command, if I recall correctly so. You are rather set to bark at the wrong person now, mutt. Capable of barking, insatiably so, but a mutt that would not bite the hand that feeds it; henceforth I will say this again, sit down.'

Charles had resumed his post, taking another sip as the other man joined them without a sliver of fight that could be seen, enticed the whole group-so.'

A few more acres of land would do just fine. If only there was one that could do the mowing.

'Contrary to everyone's belief round this table'.

Radiation appears to be spreading everywhere at a most unnatural level. There are simply not enough computers that palpitate at a radiological form for all of the points where it's coming from.

It had been fun while it lasted, but there could be nothing else left behind other than a fallen-apart, tremendously so, ruin of what's it been. Echoes in the distance, morning sun. A blabbering followed by while the chirps started horning in, and a decade later it had come. But there wasn't any warning about it. No nuclear box or paradox, time groping slowly so. Nothing to bother, none to come, nowhere to be pleased if Paradise had flown and run.

'Open this god-damn gate immediately, before I call the bill-man!' Was said to the Yellow Turpentine Tennant.

'I shall answer to no one but the one in charge with the bills, Mr. Joe, who has been alongside us since May through June seventeen.'

That couldn't be right either, a long road, paired by railway garments, with tiny spliced diamonds sleighing in the collar; everything about John, here and there, John everywhere, with nothing about his brothers and what not. What hurt the most was the face that he had been hired by the post office to deliver, him personally elected for this task, in which case, none 's the matter. Slapped in youth.

Her priscillating rob, disdained while calling off the fine entry of lord Jovl. It was nowhere near attraction, or a real one, pleasantries aside, yet her nightgown endured.

Darkness came early that evening. Almost no one expected it to come again.

Detroit

He was a nigger-by the name of Detroit. Something off him, already seen; carrying a semi-automatic illegality, concealed. In search of a scum-lowlife called exile from the hospice called Brown James. Both turned at the same time, incapable of realizing they were in the same room, the same chamber, standing one in front of another with their loaded guns pointing at the same temple, arm over the elbow, sitting then in a chair. What a wonderful day to be a Christian.

Rain was slowly scowling over the dark-damp cheek of a creek with little frogs adorning its left and right flanks. It was low, even for him, hiding in plain sight.

'I'm going to open fire on you.' He said, pointing the gun ever farther than before.

Cockroaches in a cheap motel, fire started erupting out of Daniel's head. Before they knew it, everything was wrong. So many wasted lives, waiting for some kind of approval from the others, but were stuck in waiting.

'I've seen you on tv, mister!'

'Bug off kid before I make you end up on tv.'

The child immediately left the street stirring at some broken car.

Trains walking by, but there was no way to know who was there inside of them, until that very point you thought you'd jump in front of one, breaking their appeal. A burning corpse was there. Dead men singing on the streets without even paying attention to what was going on around them.

'Open another capsule and let me see if I can make it worth your time. Else.'

'Else what?'

That was the problem with them, there was no else whatsoever that did it. Was it a bluff or some simple niggaring? It was hard to tell them by.

The of destruction was something improbably un-happenable.

'We're all being strangled here, aren't we?' Homeless lady fourteen asked.

'Give us some space luv, or self-loathing might crown the rival.' Bloated burning skull replied to her antics.

And they were all of the same clay, which didn't bode well with Detroit, who was there staring at all, with a pinpointed tiny spec of light, waiting for them to make a wrong move, waiting for anyone to do anything at all before he could jump in and do his worst. As much as he was a hotshot trigger fingerer, that did not bode at all with the Oracle, whose light almost blinded all of them, to the point where they were hardly grasping for breath before being dwarfed down.

'On your knees, culprits, you're all to be immediately judged.'

Except Detroit, who had already scrambled, like niggers do when faced by the coppers; pigs like them, living in the slums, incapable of scalping the crime in the same way they had their way with the injuns. Wholly unremarkable. All for nothing and annoying. By the side of a volley-alley he did drugs, hard-heavy stuff he could barely hope to get out of his system when the sound of the police began again. There was no way out. There was no way in. How could they do poor boy Detroit so badly? Shot eight times in the liver, then bled on the streets akin to some poor animal who had nothing to do with anything.

'It's always the same excuse with them boys. You offer them a finger and they scalp you left and right.'

Before dying, the poor nigger Detroit had scalped the basket-ball court he had anomalously mistaken for a volley ball alley, with his own blood, until he had written ACAB in all caps, out of blood clot. It was a nasty sight, but no one could be blamed for it.

'Us pigs protect, Us pigs annihilate!'

That was how it in those days, and no one apologized for a darn thing. Yet the circus went alone, the oracle being ripped to shreds, many heads erupting out of its body, ring-necked as if pierced by some unholy thing. Madly in-love with the angle that was made of yarn, both dropping and galloping on eight differently sized dead horses that were filled with decay, on a single chariot that looked as if it had been standing below the bowels of the earth, in some sort of a wicked-to mind, worse to the blind, incapable of full-release over the land of the dwelling – sea. Carbon-ashes were left behind, it cursed the blind but cursed the mind.

‘What a wonderful show, don’t you think so, darling?’

There was no response coming from his dead-in-a-chair wife.

No pressure. No pressure at all, near the man standing next to some back or some forsaken place no one bothered to look at or to dream a dreary dream out of which there was no dutiful expense spent. It was a dream of evil, a dream of good, something between them, but sound was missing. If this is what he had become, the read implanted in his head, boneless inside, more of a blob in the shape of a blob-fish, but all together, no ooze. The antlers always gave it away. So lesser-men didn’t dare approached it in its natural habitat. Only men dared stand up to this ugly creature, which was baby-faced, milky and fallen apart. Toothless as well, but for some incisors that were as thin, dulled, yet strangely begotten to look like scissors. Brought out of the swamp by a floating pillar, it moved towards one Kinsley.

Up North there was no such thing. Thence towards North it started migrating. It and all the others like it.

This, this indescribable feeling made everyone feel off, as if in a bad play, living tremendously on some borrowed time they could not withdraw out of. It smelt like berries.

‘Good evening to you too, where might I draw the Zeppelin towards? Oh, there? Right there and no place else?’

A grumble was no less than a direct response he would give. The oppulation was hardly begun.

‘If I may perform as simple cut with my trusty incisor, everything would be fine. But I’m certain, beyond certain that you may not allow me to. Henceforth it must be done at night.’

The deadest hour, most dreaded of all pawns, the lackeys and the jocks. Lighted by some torch, they obviously didn’t wish to be there at all.

‘Well, I suppose I might allow you to extract most of my tired liver fluid if you’re in such a story to make a bud!’

‘I’m drowning, I’m drowning in flesh.’ Woman-horoscope!

Down a little cavern it went, flush and flew and far-thee gone, never to be seen by human eye or dye. Listless tiny people of no humanoid appearance drew out of the ground pouting while there was nothing to be told.

Lord Rickston, in a most inappropriate suite that was scorched as if from the face of the earth, recoiling in place stood waiting near the entrance.

This wasn't it. There was no headache to give it away. Many such distorted sensations came and went away without leaving him as an untreated patient, gone to die off some cliff or some other mid-parking lot he so happened to dose into. Within one of such places was the mill. Some real extravagant violent vandalism threw them off his tracks.

A kaki vest pointing at his shoulders and no barnacles in his shoes – freshly cleaned. It was there and it was not there, merely an image of it sufficed for its existence to be proven. Pivoting a car left and right, stirring in whichever direction his thought had made him want.

Belonging to him, since the day where he had claimed it himself by rite or trial, was, a single little plant-patterned plant, that might've been mightily impressive if it were not for the simplest, most in-elegant spot under its right chin, an hour ago there having been stained again, between the area foremost known as an 'ankle' and the plastic toe, which was revealed to us only today. He was a most refined man. Nothing missing from his outfit, one could guess at least where did his entourage belonged; not among misfits, to say the least. Who else to do it, other than him?

Earlier this July, a scientist and a rapist, or, in other words, an artist.

'Wake up already, you've been snoozing and off for over a day or two. You're not supposed to sleep in the office.'

'Who said that? Who said that?' He said with as little understanding of where he were, next to the shoulder's nest, the neck of the valve, in the cold area, where he froze like meat, speaking to himself. But he knew that. And he also knew that this pure thing wasn't a means to an end for what he was interesting in getting. His point across, himself. Thereafter he got up, after finally being done, having only now realized that there was no one there, having already concluded that it was late, the ladder being rolled down a hatch of light that came right in his visor only moments ago. It was a mess.

It was a true mess he couldn't get rid of.

So many coffee machines, running all at once, pushed around by a gloved hand that was so impartial to getting some second degree burns that, his glove displayed a selection of unpatched areas that turned the glove into a rag. How in-disciplinary of him. All done so he could show off to a selection of nurses, cleaning maids and other coquette creatures as could be found out of the dumpster he worked and lived in. Still, it was late. They were awfully into some worry that they could not get home without a scratch to their fineries, done so that they could put a dent into the NSA, which was purposefully keeping them under the scrutiny of hard surveillance.

In the early days known to man he found himself, by accident, a true tactician whose prowess was overseen by the great mundane, which included some of the worst despoiled little creatures known to mind, known as pity and envy, arms that have failed him at various points in time now perpetually finding themselves at play, as some forces meant to provoke not only disgust as irreconcilable as to what he felt, but as a means of attack, evisceration and other mortal-bothersome jabs he took at himself while his other coworkers were busy bottling the caps, in this fine factory that bothered Jack, since unknowingly he fell into its web, this bothersome trap that kept rigging his fingers' nails next to the floor. A most bothersome thing indeed, with Jack being the patron and all. Incapable of seeing past his own failures, he reached the low-lain, next to his bed's stand, to the right of him, peripherally flaccid-revolver, that was kept unloaded and un-mourned after, since it was not his, that was eventually used, pushed, then had its position corrected, at his temple, in order to commit the final act of supreme pain, that bothered no one at all, once found out, of killing himself. Was there a simpler scene of blood and guts spread on the floor since the fun never ended, the gun having deviated, pointing below his shoulder, it had slipped, then gouged, this dark rifle, modified revolved, that eventually pushed it all out. This scene was impossible to be looked at, the worst of the worst might hold some pity to what happened, if only they knew, but that was not the case any longer, impossible as it were for anyone else to fathom, how despicable an act.

'And as I told you before, we filled out glasses with a finery of wine. We had put all past and sins behind as we sipped from poor Jack, god bless his mourning soul.'

The general consensus was that he was dead. A pale face accompanying broken ribs, a missing leg or two whose nails have been cleanly removed, without any blood having spilled on the scene, that was added to a list of MO's, compared across the States to other unsolved cases that lead the authorities to believe that the culprit was still somewhere out there, in action, yet, what was beyond reason was that there'd be floating above the surface level testimonies, casually dropped by the families of the deceased, that contradicted with the main story fabricated by the cops so far, which only gained addition holes as the time went by. One cannot even fathom where did this initiative that lead to bringing false declarations to the court, while additional arrests were being made for people that have been suspected with committing the crime in the first place, that lead to the false conclusion or the false views carried on by the collaborationists who were present at the mistrials, them being the prosecutors, the defendants and the very jury that have passed the guilty sentence on all accounts, several times, non-acquittable, over those poor innocent people. Such that, the authorities were surprised when they found out that the killer was still on the run. Somewhere out there, like some presently-modern Jack the Ripper.

'What a truly frightening, do you agree with this version of events?'

'I disagree, Jack, or Jamble, whomsoever might you be.'

But this, this was going a bit too far, to the point of having become a reactionary-abstract assault he was not ready to defect or hope to stand against. Barring himself, in the process, to what might be mislaid as an act of passion, labeled so in a most intolerable manner.

'If, in this case, your concubine had been aware of how much of a suffocating gulp of carbon emission you were, enough to pinpoint you to the main reason behind his MO, we'd never have had this conversation to being with, since you're utterly wrong in every account!'

'How can you tell since I never even substantiated my claim and reason behind it?'

'Because I know you and I know you too well. More than you know yourself.'

It was so-so mechanical, how he moved and talked, that you could tell that he had an AC battery shoved inside his back.'

'Yes, the polite way can only be assessed by observing my departure, since you will simply not listen to my retort, you incoherent jackal!'

Thus the exchanged was finished with both parties having departed. Unrest was just as high as it was initially thought off to be. By no means nor way could they avoid the subject any longer since they had both arrived at two simians dictating the motions of much-foreseeable to themselves, scenes. It happened before it happened. Bodies that not only didn't exist, but that nobody could attest to; an entire amiable mess with no survivors left on either side. And it was also raining. A quintet of an oblong followed Jack around, like an infantile nimbus that had its first day, with its cut wings, with the temperature being below five Fahrenheit, so on and so forth, with little chance of changing. Third trimester that was incalculable in clouds, unless scientists got involved, to solve such unfathomable miracles such as they would decidedly go in for the rocks, hard-to see, and in it be, inside a mole-machines that had rocket-thrusters attached to them. Followed by garbage readings and no clear response for hours, all paid by private companies and by the government's involvement, that being the tax monies citizens were unaware of where they ended up being used. An awful situation altogether, but on the bright side it didn't end up on welfare, feeding homeless people meth, from which they ended up in comas and no chance of them being inundated by invisible monsters only they could claim to having seen, these morbid hallucinations of no obscure regard.

'Wake up man, come on already, the bus is leaving.'

'What happened, how long have I dosed off?'

'Dosed off? How about passing out for at least eight hours or so?'

'Couldn't have thanked you harder for it!'

Both seats were part-in open, with every row being almost filled in. One to the side of the window, or one in the middle, occupying both seats, baptized in a ceremonious manner. Privacy is being intruded upon, or if it is not today it will be tomorrow, at eight o'clock, easily verifiable if you don't trust.

And trust goes both ways. It is mimicking pain, as good as any man could go on record of having felt it, that painful thrust inside one's body, inexplicable yet completely unutterable. It is the Marxist way of giving a limb to someone who happens to have the same blood type as you, to borrow it and run around, running out of labor bills upon return, holding this act to the highest scrutiny once exploitation is taken in account. Ah. There's no better view than San Francisco at the midnight hour.

Sylvia knew those kinds of things, was familiar with them to an uncomfortable degree, reached out to the door and out of the courtroom she went. Meets Jack across the way.

When the boiling water had begun stopping the shaking kettle, as soon as the bubbles inside of it stopped fornicating at the top, while the lawnmower finished its last quarter of grass, that's when George came in. At eight o'clock, after Tuesday, on a pompous car, trying his hand in some hand-cutter while his wife was in the backseat, drugged all the way up, that she failed to realize she was still alive, salivating all the way up from her chin to her partially unbuttoned blouse. Freshly come to the dinner-party that was held on the side of the porch. It was a miracle that they arrived as soon as they did, since most of the party was already gone to the other side, half-buried beneath the table, where the mound was. The parking lot was graying out with pines no longer standing erect as the act had begun. Actors, all of them, thinking they could change the world.

'Of course I knew you weren't cut. But where did all this bleeding come from?'

'From the mound, from no other place other than the mound, not even from the flesh-eating bird's beaks, nor from any other cannibal present at the table, since they had signed a waiver against it.'

'Gosh darnin' with you lawn semantics, can't you focus on the dead people beneath the table instead?'

'There's no such thing down there. There's absolutely no mound, no dead people and no observers as had been since the other day when you made the case for them.'

Yesterday had indeed been a troubling day. No matter how hard they tried moving on from it, there had always been a slither of surprise rising up in order to remind them of the act that had been purported by the men. Sincerely said, they had been killed by their very host. The very same host that was present at the out-in-the open diner. The simple fact had remained clear in both of their eyes. It was all due, as it had been recognized a long time ago, their incompatibility had reared its ugly head in. And there was no attempt at retrieval as one might expect in such cases. All bland, donkey with no ears hugging the curb. Yet they yearned for one another for what would end up being thousands of hours, with little to remotely nothing to show in return, not a single act of romance that might ease the waving of the waters.

'Did you think you could get away with handing me these divorce papers, without consulting me first?'

'I was lead to believe that this would be an amiable break up and that we would never speak of it again once it was done being transmitted.'

'Well, you were not only wrong in your belief but ignorant as well to the outcome of your departure.'

'What do you intend on doing to me?'

'My intent is known to me alone, and none other until the moment of partition is well beyond surpassed.'

'I'll ask you again then, what's your intent? And where is this mound you keep referencing with your cheeks?'

‘They’re rather full, aren’t they? I had been well aware that you would ask, since I do intend on harming you for the time being.’

‘Then got ahead and let me see this radiance of immobility, or stand there and do nothing. For all I care, I shall be non-impressed by either action, that you might as well get on with it right now, instead of wasting my time.’

Her courtiers were already hamming in, with disciplinary actions being taken as to not provoke any inflammatory weak remark, that might be had between them, by the commonly used by them, counselor, who was not only aware of them, their actions, their mod of operandi, but who had full control over them. It could be no other way. Many of them being male concubines that had at the very least one mid-length affair with the her but refused to directly say it so in any form of communication, written or otherwise, to her quick-eyed lavished not-so-much unsuspecting husband, who was raging as they spoke to one another about the least-understandable trite subjects. A bane to both ends, that none had the commitment to fully accept it, to the point of it being a fault of theirs, which was the reasonable exchange of words, otherwise known as having the courtesy of telling him the truth.

Miss Mallory von Tooth, being one of the most charming lawyers of the Eighty Fifth Street’s part of the neighborhood, had other things in mind than interfering with other people’s private affairs, or might’ve had if it weren’t for the secrecy she felt laboring over, in hidden askance, as her God- entrusted secret almost got spoiled over a casual conversation she held a few days ago, revealing her delirious desire of being lusted by as many if not more men than she could handle. It was an adversary kind of casual passive-aggressiveness she would not relent on showing out-right, but in a most closeted manner that might leave one poke-blind without knowing what, how and why?

They were serving lattes in tiny little tea-cups, bolstered by all fingers other than the pinkie which was being raised as to signal nonchalance in regards to their high-societal standing. Raised or adopted, it was no concern or hers when she arrived.

‘No mound, I say, there’s no mound over the pout we’re standing, none whatsoever. No corpses nor dead men I can see with my very two eyes.’

‘My dear, you lack the glasses that would make your life much easier than having it put under shade.’

‘Petite clothes sold for five bucks on the market.’ Daily Newspaper;

Somehow that didn’t matter at all. But they were both distracted enough to point at the sun. It could hardly be called a morning, or noon, somehow lost between the two. Plenty of bad marriages left in sight, most of them gutless, incapable of crossing the street in order to stand up to her. These sins were coming along just fine, crawling on the cement-floor. Being banded together by their weeping, flooding and overbearing nature, yet there was no response, not even an acanthus of being acknowledged by either one of them. Mexico had been a wild ride and the fiery blood could not be more dope than it had been at that moment, weirdly engrossing everything in their path, despite pouting like little dogs awaiting for their mistress to finally take them home, these people were just forced into a stillness no one could free himself out of, a gag, or a Greek wrestling match they could not get away from. And the poor Miss Mallory was all but there, her thought somewhere else, a distance away, fantasizing about being Jane. A cut was made in her gut, out of which no blood could be seen coming out of. The strangest thing being that, it was not her long-displaced out of her mind husband, but an apparent 'corpse' that escaped the so-called 'mound', performing the surgery.

Thirty days ago:

It was an inconsistent movement that put weight on her knees. Jane knew better than to run.

Jane had been going on errands all night, undisturbed. No one in sight so far, therefore she chose to walk as kinkily as possible, knowing that no one would observe her, or at least pretending to be looking elsewhere rather than her lowered unorthodox skirt. In foresight, it might've been a better performance if it not were for the dark stranger that showed up at the end of the road. Tall, lean, impossible to fully beheld, an assistant to some doctor wearing enormous stripes all across the body that had the word PHD finely printed on him. She immediately derived pride coming out of this strangely-yet momentarily revealing appendagure he displayed, as to show off and rub it in her face. A Princeton educated fool that made a habit out of wearing a dark hoodie and a trench coat. Both approached one another as if it was an admirable amiability that which was shared between the two of them.

The man presented himself as Thomas, one with little regards to a person's stature or minded of their privacy. Indeed, he was a photographer whose every shot ringed true to the calling of an artist, painting murals with his every shot, yet incapable of revealing his true colors to this lady he had never seen before.'

'Pervert, how dare you take pictures of me in such a revealing morning stroll?'

'It was not I who pushed the first trigger, yet I concur that your mind is empty and you lack the sympathy needed to carry on with this fiesta I'm about to start with you.'

'But my body is not for sale.'

'That's rather false and you know it, my dear lady. It is not the first time I stalked you, albeit that had been in a prior life of mine. I know it indeed to be true.'

He was an opportunist creep in the full sense of the word, but at the same time he had gotten truly in-love with her, as if it was done at the first sight, with the contract, prenup and the paperwork all done. A wolf in search for its pray, a Rottweiler with fumigating foam that started pushing down out of his mouth as he began salivating on the floor.

'What in God's name is wrong with your mouth?'

'My excuses lady, many, many, many excuses for what I've done. But I simply could not help myself.'

'A dog, that's what you are, a dog with a delirious desire to get stomped, to be euthanatized. Not by me anyway.'

I desire one thing of you then.'

'Whatever you want, lady.'

The courtroom had approved her motion for another pair of prosthetics to be added to her body, elbow fornicated in her gut is how she walked for five years. But no one attributed the pain she felt to the misaligned plastic bones, which in turn had somehow managed to grow and penetrate her rib-cage all the way up to her arms. She was serving the stranger at a sidewalk-near sided café they had both almost passed while attempting to cross one another. Many of the flower pots were empty. The garrison of black-fee was almost indisposed if it were not for a false emergency they were recalled to. And once open, always open. The customers had to be willy-nilly thrown back and forth before being served.

It was an awful time to be around them, one hour later, in the afternoon, when the streets became livelier, when they were as sickly as the paves of France, when there was no sun around in the sky, obscured by rain. No garnishes to the walls. No turkey cut no more. Only two cups delivered at the two opposite sides of the table. A few centimeters apart, gazing at one another, while their eyes melted, dripping down like sugar squares to sweeten up their black sodas.

'What's happening? I've never encountered anything like this before. What do you reckon it to be?'

'Perhaps our drinks?'

'I haven't tasted mine, what about yours?'

'Not even the tip of my tongue erected at the pressure of boiled water had felt this. It's interesting, rather incoherently so. I can't understand why.'

'Then slowly shut your mouth off and wait for them to come back.'

Too late for them to retire. It was an awful thing that happened, yet they were momentarily convinced that the situation would deescalate. Definitely had to, one way or another.

'Maybe you came across the waiter and exchanged some ill remarks?'

'Why does it have to be me, responsible for all of this?'

'Because you're the shady man who covered himself in tape and wrote those ridiculous things on yourself, that's why.'

'You make little to no sense. The waiter didn't even see them.'

'He may have eavesdropped on you while we were on our way.'

'To think that this is the reason behind having our sight taken away from us is rather comically ridiculous. It isn't true. It simply cannot be true.'

Silence follows afterwards. It hears talk of something else falling apart, the nails, pink-pressure plates on her, jumping out the tip of her fingers as it launched out of a truncheon. A draconic utterance threatened to shatter both of their bodies at once.

One of the many waiters present at the scene, who had been awake for fourteen hours, had stepped in to interrupt their heated discussion, being reminded of a similar even that happened to scar him for the rest of his life. It was the right time to step in and assert himself to these two societal hooligans that were extremely ready to sue this place for some sort of alleged injury caused by the rising temperature of the boil. Luckily for him and for the manager, nothing of the sorts happened. An amiable return to normality had caused both of their bodies to restore their eyesight without any injury being sustained by either one of the parties.

Jake had a knife on her. Upon waking up of her stupor, she started busting caps on the waiter.

‘Rotten food, let’s go.’

She ran away, seeing everything left behind as mere pawns knocked down a table. It was mirthful of her to ask for his permission, which was never explicitly received. What an awful snare. Lonely despite having her man, before marriage even took place. She had forgotten him.

‘Slow down Jane, we haven’t been acquainted enough for this flight to occur.’

Her saying:

‘Man up already, you’re with me from this point on.’

But someone was chasing them from behind. No precedence of this having happened in the past. It was all new for her.

Jane’s face had been mauled by the Stranger. It truly was something unimaginable. Children ran away at the mere sight of. She was butchered, a pig with no casket. Despite all that, they still remained together. No strings attached.

‘Where are my eyes, Stranger? I swear I placed them in my lap only a second ago.’

‘You ever heard of the expression, treat your body like an anchor, so you could throw yourself into an ocean?’

‘No that I recall.’

Still blind after all this time. There’s yet to be an excuse for it. Whereas another peculiar stranger whose footsteps had been eerily been recorded by both of their eardrums had only now come into play. Two gun-shots were aimed by them. Flashed right after, when, in just a moment did they have a chance to move again. Out of her leg sprouted a little unnatural dark spot that began expanding seriously fast across the street, drawing her in until she had her entire ankle submerged into that pathos of squid squirm. A large elliptical-nigh blob started pushing out. Jane’s body was as open as a door, revealing her insides covered in various locks of granite that completely encased her organs. Her eyes were still peeled out. Cracking its teeth-filled knuckles in it was the strange almost goblinessque figures which had been laughing all this time in hiding. Before she could even begin screaming again, a flock of tiny rat-babyish flying parasites started emerging out of her ears, tied together by yanked-by each other's hands – red puffy chains which withdrew back inside of her as soon as she tried getting her other foot out of the area where the Stranger had been. He, on the other hand, spat a mollusk on the floor, a thing he used to tie himself to with the help of his ruined out of frustration belt he had on him. Stringers of blood, hardened by clot, fell on the clock, pursed by taking wild shots at the figures that began flying around them in the open space. Bastards of glowing beings. Utterly visceral in the way they started shaping their fornications. Ballads are quite simplistic in comparison. There's a thin line between good and evil that was crossed just a few minutes ago.

What would perhaps be a simple act of condescension turned out to be a deadly affair between the two, since the Stranger became a mule that carried a partially open body-sack with most of his strength being split in trying to deescalate both parties at play and trying to preserve what was left of Jane. An inscrutable anchor fell upon her back, theirs was heavier a burden that they could barely pretend it didn't happen at all. Bowling balls made out of the asphalt started slowing them down during the rush. It was impossible to deceive them at this point in time, but nonetheless it happened.

'Are you all right?'

It was an exciting day. The birds that adorned the referee had finally got to have their say in about the issue. As inscrutable, pompous and arrogant as he was, there were times when he was right. This was one of them. He was a bum, you see? And an ugly one at that, but there was no other referee around, so, they had to make best with they had. He was rather clumsy; John and Jane thought; might as well sell laundry to a circus than have a say in the local coliseum.

They coldly looked down. Precious dark faces subdivided by the carbon emission their stinking mouths produced. They were openly gagged during the mid-season. It wasn't getting any easier from this point on. But the bum agreed, it was a red card, it meant that you were in the wrong zone; it meant that it was over for you, and if you thought it couldn't get worse, then you were exceptionally wrong. One of the muses had an open-skulled brain tumor sprouting out of her head.

Mildly exposed to the chemicals that were present in the air, she arrived to the conclusion that this match would be the last one she would passively, yet hopefully to the end, experience the fullest. So many wrong plays already, that she could feel that spindly black mush actively gnawing at her head. An unimpressive thing, to say the least, but it was the primordial aspect of nature, which couldn't be defeated either, regardless of how hard it was fought against.

By the fourth row, north-east of the edgeways stood an easy going bachelorette, standing with her peers; smoking contraband; gulping free discs of comic air that somehow penetrated her every surrounding.

'He is god, is he not?' Asked one of the pigeons.

'A marvelous one at that.' Added the other.

But he had a knife on him, waiting to pull it out at any moment. He had a stroke. He was a stroke survivor. He survived. It was tempting to end his life right in front of thousands of spectators. No shame. He'd do it anyway. It was a slanderous way in which he prevailed over them, the dark pigeons who whispered death in his ears.

A self-fulfilling prophecy that would simply not go away. Blasphemous even, as the very edge of the knife spoke to him in tongues. Ah, a spark of pudgy blood, he knew, the yellow card was miles away now. The cat is his and it is an awfully insane thing that he was granted custody over it. No one could've perceived it a mile away from, especially if judged in accordance with his behavior. He would not stop there either.

As his house was worse than a mess, after leaving his animal unfed and ruffled up for hours and days at a time; a scourge of a man that still found fondness over beating it just so he could get a reaction out of himself. This was the man who was supposed to be the referee, and this was unforgivable. A little here, a little there, some come around, just about everywhere, before the morning was done. And the flesh ran out.

Back where he'd begun. In the field, dinging on red, yellow, red, yellow, red, with promiscuous possibilities of craning his neck, all because he wouldn't go to a doctor for his strain. But there came Jane again, checking on all possibilities, followed by Rudolpho Belsinkin, who was the pro-amateur get-go when it came to writing tickets on cars. Somehow indistinguishable to the other men that accompanied him. Many of which were suits, corporate plugs that had stakes in it. But there was no football match just yet. When they approached him it was raining. In the cold morning. Faces came aghast for every passing moment was hellish for the man they called the referee.

'Hello there, Referee, we've been searching for you for the ripest time and this seems to be the only time we could reach you without making much of a fuss.'

Every single one of them was watched by some careless, whimpering flock. Subdivided by species. An anchor to the north. His globular orbs were blinking attentively. Nonchalantly did his leg fall of, because of the pigeons, that is.

In its enormous bulb of a pecker, they rested in the court of saliva, the nest, where the children and the eggs remained in still silence. Many of them had long-rested wings that were forever caught in some clutch or some awkward movement they could not prevail against. If this was pain, then there was silence. For that's how they lasted so long without being digested by the bird's acidic mouth parasite. Everything or most ruined as they slowly parched into oblivion. No warm food in the gutter today. A hostile environment only allowed for the carol to sing away.

We could see what was beneath them now, as they simply undressed in a most delirious manner, allowing for their rhombus hominid-almost appendages to slowly recede then back-an-forth release until the show of violence was full on its way. They fought slowly, as if tribal. With not one side willing to fully reveal what was hidden in each gut. Some strip of morphine would do now.

Christopher was a masonic man with close to nothing left in his mind. After having discovered a missing pair of ribs and a sprout, roundish little claw-form exiting the right part of his body, his mouth simply froze. Sardonicly poised to leap as a frog would, executing mice on top of which he happened to bring some stomping to, delivering deadly blows that would make their tails spin in agony. Until recently he had been married with a salivating Aborra, mouth drooling escort from South Africa he had picked up from the nearest stand he could find while there. A terrible woman with a scornful sense of fashion, born with a tail that erupted out of her and looked like a giant maggot but who was industrious as all women should be. A vase, two clocks, in the living-room the groom awaited. It was a terrible invitation she had refused some days ago. Always Socratic in her nature, that the many admirers she had also stolen from the poor lady had amiably parted ways with her.

Many of the frogs were not frogs in the natural sense of the word. Instead they seemed to be fatter, more rotund and they also seemed to lack legs at that. What predominated in these creatures were the tender bloated spring-straws or twisted giant mosquito wriggly wires that came from beneath them. The lack of eyes led one to believe, albeit wrongly so that they were blind to a zero margin of error, but that was not the case. Since, what appeared to have dropped beneath them were not giant shades the size of their bodies, but instead the mark of an evil eye that was as real as one could swear to. Pupils as well, dilated. Spherical, or oblong. Even, while others misaligned. What was important was what they had inside, a pair of interconnected leashes that were chaotically spread, whip-cracked and intersected with lesser, uglier, beehive rotten, lesser organs, whereas the bigger organs happened to swim inside the fleshy belts that were constantly dangling inside the body in search of air.

A black plague disease bloated the air now. It was hard to breathe, almost impossible for the common man. The Stranger had checked inside his right pocket, searching for some kind of revolver. Anything would do. But this was not the time to beg or stare. He would eventually have to switch clothes in order to look less suspicious. People were blankly peeking over his shoulder. Sweat ran down his brows and over his entire face. A gun was there, a gun had to be there, it had been there last time he checked. Anonymously. Defected. Unable to get hinged or scrapped like metal, he was stone hard. Standing still, a statue that wasn't letting go of his infraction.

The rows were full in no time.

It was too dangerous standing still, hence why he started walking. And strolling, then quickly running from on point to another until his body started reacting. Beads of powdery water had ran their course, his legs had been eaten almost to an alarming entirety, which is why he chose to slow down. Albeit it wasn't by accident why he did and what he did.

This serviceable car is driving itself down the road. He should be on it, but the chauffeur left him behind.

They lamented the day they were born. It was not fair that the men present there had been chosen died so soon. A moment alone:

'I shall torment you no longer. See to it that you leave the premise before your scent grabs a pound of lavender.'

'But what have I given up and what's been done?'

'You insulted me by coming over. That is the reason why I hold my arm.'

Not to be courteous any longer, she was gone, with her along, no one came back home. Of what's been said there came the wild retreat. The sense behind her rested upon a saw that gnawed at her grainy feet; albeit she wouldn't know, feel, desperate as she may've been, for the feeling of a saw, slowly being inserted into her, gnawing at the wild surround.

By chemicals she wasn't fine. Jane was bitter, mad through all. But slumberous, her eyes did droop before she could enter the pin, enter the motel and strangle such feel. As only those whom she alleged were scrupulous, unknowing, perfidious as one might call her a nun. It was empty past the door. The stranger had followed her no more.

He had been sent on an errand from which he could not easily repartition a run, to come too early as to know where she lived and what was to be done. A magus made out of him as soon as he was distressed, with his clothes off in an alley, no party to impress. But a haughty role in Cypress played. On the run he was again. This time on another smoke to come deliverance, dead men that appeared only came to share, were stunt.

Jane was bedded in one of the four-by-four king sized beds, flooring the door into one of her unclean windows.

Summer had come sooner than expected. To the point when the sky-fire had accelerated its advance towards the Park-Lake area where old residents stood impatiently waiting next to some hot-dog stand. Ugly and tyrannous lookalikes tended to swear. Cursing with the least remote shame they could come up with, while the generals commanded the cartel. Drugs have long reaches that normal humans, even the ones working in pairs are incapable of growing up to the level of. It was an insatiable march, a battle, dealing with the sun and its accesses. Dead people started showing up by the numbers, not kneeling on hot surfaces but standing there in smeared disgust, thrown outside, playful like kittens were the crows that picked on the carcasses. A rotten pile was thrown in one of the most convalescent pit a digger could pull off by himself; a scene of chimes, while the boastful flares were almost gone in the stone, with names written all wrong. In the wrong, unorthodox kind of matter, filth became flirt, talking to the dead old geezers that never woke up as well. Before stumpage became erect putrefaction, some knights of bloom delivered the mops. They cleaned the ashes with their tools of mirth. No flounder of spades, no deep retreat, no nothing too sharp that would cut a heel. But they came anyway and their effort to join in after the conversations was much appreciated.

It was of his deep concern that none of them joined the army. Otherwise he would be forced to put them down like the stray dogs mangling at each other for a big bite, dragging themselves down by force of relevancy to get a second cup at that, for they were deeply attracted to women and would risk insurgency if it got them closer to any of the cadets, a while thing to do at a good and a bad price, erect. Niceties like those were never and would never be permitted unless done by some savants. Some geniuses out there, or some ugly scientists playing in some pond. A poodle set on fire, dried inside an electric cupboard. Rinsed of all blood and skin. Made to feel everything down, or everything relevant done on his pin. Which was alone dragged out with the help of a smallish blunt hammer. A dark thought followed: She should be the one whose empty head should get bashed by a blunt hammer. There can be no other. Gnawing at each other, both the hammer and the ma'am. Both frustratingly beating each other until the splash of milk and crimson never ends.

Next to the hiding spot they had to cross a belligerent mountain to get to lay a pile of brittle bones that had blocked the area by means of avalanche. A terrible night followed through as well since they could barely stand on top their feet, without a fire to warm their cold bodies. God was there, inside a purgatory machine. He was a humanoid without scruples, deformed and giant. To the right angle of his face there lay an eternally melted side that carried along many beady eyes that bore mouths with strange incisors that lend him an insatiable stutter he could not get away from.

'Ah, there you are. I've been searching for you for a while now. I'm glad to be reassured that the cameras still work and that I was right in scanning for your imprint in the land. Otherwise who knows if you had the chance to be alive without me; it's a harsh land out there and you're but a simple woman that can't do any better if left alone.'

'Unhand me this instant or I'll show you.'

'Hush now, my little dove, hush now, because I know I'll get my point through you whether you like it or not.'

She had been instantly tazered then got flung on the pavement like a ragdoll. Drooling and squirming in mid-shake as if she entered into the state of suffering through convulsions. There was a decent point where her could've stopped but didn't.

'Jane, try waking up, will you?'

But she didn't. Out of her right shoulder a tiny baseball bat started slowly crawling towards her frail neck, bending like jelly, her artery being out there in the open, waiting for the wooden vampire to take a hit. It was as if a giant bubble was headed towards her brain. Hit again, then she began, in repulsion, to finally move towards the field downstairs.

There were only a few men in the camp who seemed to be of great importance, whereas the other ones were filler to the goods. Strolling was dangerous now. Well and far over, beyond it even. His hands were already grasping for one of the metallic rifles, the ones that buzzed uncontrollably when the lightning round was put in. Everyone shook with fear at the strangest of noises, there was nobody inside. Not in the rooms, not in the playground and definitely not in the females, which were passed around from man to man; a terrible practice that didn't end up well. Felonies were being committed without scruple.

Noises from afar. A lard-bottle used by George alarmed the whole unit when he was bound to say what's on his mind:

'Ere, later than. I think I stole a man's poodle when we passed through the belt. Now look at my face and beneath it, what do you see?'

It was skin, skin that melted and crawled in his chest, where the cut was. Teeth could be seen in there drawing the skin like an orb-spider would be milked by a machine. Cigars on the torpedoes, he was stocked. And an unfamiliar spirit only dredged itself to be besmirched when his mouth opened again, allowing for his teeth to be pulled in, his face following not to close in, then done. His face was unrecognizable after that. Within a moment she shot a fist inside his liver, not bleeding. Pulling out a pair of heads that had been growing inside like ticks. Pushing them out, then into his malformed mouth, vomiting at the same time, incapable of stopping himself from the pain he had suffered. Right hand already disappeared. A scalpel had red marks beneath it.

Their secret research led them to believe that the god they have been seeking for centuries was dead and there was no possibility of him returning from the realm his carcass had fallen in. Such was it that their crusade fell short of deliverance. What was felt and said was no be-gone.

'Pull it through men, I know you can do it!'

A stream of water was pouring down on them. Many have drowned. But one of the more prepared men used his head to cover up the hole the stream was coming from. One in particular had used a tiny sharpie to scribble on his unbuckled belt. Unsure what that thing was about the others started pushing sharp razors out of their eyelids, noses, and skin, in case something went on. It was a horrendous sight the soldier was presented with, but there was no way down he could go about so he could ease the tension.

The sudden realization they all reached at exactly the same time was that it was night outside, a regular pitch-black without any fluorescent lights; one of them being released from the frontier. The woods were filled with rivers leading towards one another.

Skinned alive, there was the last nomad that could still talk, having his large lips ripped away from his mouth, the poultry dropped, with iron, standing. But the strange man survived nonetheless. Some spider was already on top the panther, making a ruckus out of the weather. It was impossible to keep the rite at this pace. It would much rather be easier to get rid of everyone in the room, despite it being a depreciable thing in its own.

'It's not needed any longer, you may leave.'

Such was the tremor that sunk the ship, but there was air. Down there, beneath the hieroglyphs underneath the cracking deeps, an untapped possibility; like some broken raft, the ship had been delivered to a sack of oxygen that allowed the crew not to be drowned. In some way it was a pathological excuse to live, for it was limited, since all the roads, their weapons and the submarines were well-on and beyond them.

The crew was stranded down there, clapping, snapping their fingers and chucking small oysters at one another, thinking someone would eventually spot them.

‘Can you hear us?’

One of them yells.’

But that was just the thing. No one was listening; no one was taking a further step since they all lead into the exact same direction. A cascade of water that would drown any of them men in mere minutes of contact with it, by mere chance of being pulled in by something that could only be referred to as water-balloons, wombs really; entering and exasperating them with their entirety; in some way brute-forcing them to die before their time. Not that it mattered in any case. Chaos erupted between the drunken crewmen because of their undisciplined actions. Some threatened to break the remaining part of the ship which was still lodged into the water abyss. Others were already cutting their own with their cutlasses, twinkling their powdery locks which were amiably aimed at each other’s hands of wimpy legs.

A disastrous speculation such as this could not easily be dismissed. Not that quickly anyway.

Fifteen days later.

A disease sprouts in the form of a coral-flower. The excitement was something one could expect once in a lifetime, but this was not all. What was queer about it was the fact that this navy of the sorts suckled on the flowers for sustenance without being affected by the toxin it bore. An apothecary between them with a serious illness had his say:

‘Eat and drink for tonight the throne will be sat upon by the captain.’

And so it was, an impromptu skeleton of wood with the floor being ripped apart from a few fallacious planks that were once part of their ship. Not there was truly no way out or in, only this space they resided in. An unimportant corner that could not be taken away, or made do with by any other means or say. Hours now later.

Tony was a tall, blond Italian, who had missed his fine ride somewhere in Chicago and ended up on the S.F. Utterance with the rest of the strange crew of men whose bodies were completely made out of insects. It just explained a lot, given the circumstances, how they managed to survive so far, while he was starving and suffering of a quick drought of sea-salt deep inhalation. It didn’t bode well with him. White linen shirted, an athlete bodied seaman, with long arms and the right eye missing from some sort of explosion at the factory where he worked took it from him. Reprimand it. For the chiefs in charge were the reason he had lost it in the first place.

Pus had been emerging from the flowers as of lately, as he had seen it. Alone in the brooding corner, with no one personal attached to him. How he yearned for them to drive into him and give him hickies, to be devoured by the walking corpses of dirt and mold, to fetch a lout, or come about, or do something to be noticed. With the help of a sharp knife he dug a hole in his forehead, releasing a stream of blood that immediately ran down his pesky skippers. One fruit fly landed on top his pinkie. It split in half. Out of it like some well-done egg came out a man's finger, an act which startled the Italian.

Fine piano hands, missing one fifth,

'Whose finger is it?'

His folded tooth spouts itself out of his mouth. All clear!

There's one more thing he can do. That being, run.

Madame Query was the fine petite house-maker Mr. Query had promised himself he would get engaged to but did. In an un-disturbing fashion he had ensured she would be kept on a short leash at all times, being not allowed to eat at the table or even sleep under surveillance with him sitting in the room at the same time. There had been a good reason for this polite act of control, which may not be uttered as long as she remained in the state she was, completely dosed. She was rarely seen acting on her own accord and was only allowed to eat and piss when her loyal husband wanted her to. On these rare occasions when her words started vociferating the qualms between them, Mr. Query would silence her with the utterance of a loud slap across her cheeks, from one end to another. A horse had left their stables. It seemed a nuisance from the sound of. His skull and brain were shaped like a falcon.

Diamonds, his brother had eaten a part of his leg just now without every attempting to draw out the pain or cover his stump of a wound after doing it. Putting pressure on it was after all a sign of weakness.

'Come on, stop crying, it shouldn't be that bad.'

'I'm sorry but the pain is simply unbearable. I cannot deal with this now.'

'Then do it later, we have an appointment to attend to.'

And they went, step by step without figuring out what was going on around them, confused. Inside the car, his legs were already gone, eaten by the hole inside Carbon's head. He was a fine driver, with a chip on his shoulder, looking left and right after someone who had to appear at a precise moment in time.

The vulgar colony had approached him even before his senses kicked right back in. They were too harsh, too uneven, too undeveloped or underdeveloped to make a fuss, but given enough time that would change. It was bound to, to be eaten like that, alive, was Diamond's worst of fears. It kept him up at night, it made him look up-front at the Italian, just so he could assure he didn't do anything stupid, which would jeopardize his escape plan. Burrowed beneath him was the breeding ground, for the flowers were no flowers, but living, disturbing, hard to look upon their carcasses being that fed upon these insects made men. They had been useful so far, but I'm afraid they will have to be let go, thought the man. Finally, a gulp of the precious toxin-filled air that came only recently; that wasn't what either of them expected, nor was there a chance to flee from sight. Awful as it may've been, the insects were only mildly repelled by what was going on there, under their sanctimonious noses. Noise makers began filling in the gaps. There were gaps here and there where one could descend as to see for himself what was going down there. None dared approached, for they were mainly there for sustenance not exploration. Difficult decisions had to be made.

‘I trust you Carbon.’

He said to the man, whose face was made of put-together faces sutured to his skin. Truthfully speaking, that was his entire body and most of them screamed for long periods of time while it happened. A torturous remark:

‘Believe me when I tell you this, only one of us will survive this hell. And it will only be the one that heads in that hole and never returns!’

‘You can’t be serious, can you? Heading down there alone would only bring death to the man diving in the first place.’

‘And that’s why I think it’s you who should do it, not I.’

‘What are you saying? Was your intent to leave me before I even had a chance to be alive?’

‘You were always dead, surrounded by graves and grave-diggers. Now you will not withstand this alone, but for your own sake you must do it if you want to save the rest of the crew.’

‘Why should I care about some damn insects?’

‘It’s not up to me to answer that question. It’s your decision after all.’

So he took a few steps. Again those fruit-flies splitting in halves, after which more human parts, smaller, some wider, and others more grotesque began flipping over, spitting them out on the ocean-floor. Henceforth he had decided, it was time to jump in and never look back afterwards. Most assured as he was that he was going to die, before leaping in, into abandonment, he bent down, on his knees, collected or picked up a few of the fingers, then he started eating them one by one, pushing them hard in his own throat, making sure he wasn’t going to vomit them afterwards. Then, he was beneath the stones, slowly falling while small, almost spider-thing webs’ algae gripped him. With a bloody knife in his mouth, chewing and cutting a piece of his lip as if it was a gum, he hummed.

‘They got sclerosis in their bones. My children have. I must live for them for as long as I can, otherwise they’ll die without their father’s affection. Afflicted by this unknown disease that chews marrow, down to their very thin, thrilled, and misaligned spine; they cannot live without the cure. It is why I took this lonesome road alone, knowing it would lead me down into this shallow riveting abyss.’ He said to himself, without the fear of someone being there, listening to him, trying or attempting anyway to betray not only his trust but the very sanctimonious disgrace he had fallen a victim of.

A rock down there was unlike no other. Many of the pyramidal stones formed monoliths that moved to their own accord. Fleishy pillars that spoke in tongues, trying to clasp, spin, be spun, and eat from each other’s ‘laps’, albeit it was an irresponsible miss-truth, a lie that could not be curbed of suffering, how they acted, how they deceived, how they simply leaped in each other’s areas was simply too disgusting to be looked at. And they were the champions, the protectors of the roots, the ones responsible for the poison that his men had in their systems. A disease sprang from a rock, visibly, and those afflicted by it were but the giant fruit flies that followed in his scent and in his track. Out of them the fully sized legs of a man, in almost pure-darkness rang and leaped and threw over puke-sores, legged. They moved towards the poor Italian, but before they had their chance to leap, these little ugly appendages changed. Out of them drew out more pompous, inflated, reddish, almost chitin-plate covered in – people, or humanoids if they lacked heads and if they were suns. Many limbed by these smaller claspers, they stopped and started oozing with poison, dancing around him as if they were part of some Bohemian Groove, invited by the guest of honor, him, who was looked down, in that moment, instinctly seen above, by his once venerated companion, Carbon. He started from the cracks, amongst which rocks shook themselves on and off, at strange intervals while following the vibrations of a quake.

Angels made out of dirt slowly began descending down upon him. Their mouths were filled with Quakers, or the remnants of, judging by some ringed fingers belonging to some hand or another, spat down. Was the moment them come. When he realized that he was in the presence of cannibals. That he should've known since he saw them act months prior to this crass landing. It had been inevitable after all, the sinking. Too bothersome to remember the man that fell from the sky, being eaten as if by maggots that were his once known-to him and all crewman of humanoid origin, before being cursed into insects.

It was the mid-February haze, nothing cool nor hot or moist. They were spewing tiny clots of blood on the floor, trying to remark which one was the quickest to hit the bowl. Wide and enormous as it was, they missed. The men in rows separated from women, while the grooms were waiting quietly to rip a shred. Some animals in the shed, unnatural skies boiling the top of their tiny little hospice for canines:

'Angus, are you going to let us loose a while? We have done nothing wrong, certainly nothing that would have us here, rotting in your animal jail!'

'Silence, you know what you've done and I know what you've done, so, there's nothing you can do about it but wait.'

'But the heath is burning us dry.'

He was silent for a moment there, before he strolled on. Water was all shiny and toast, you could smell the powder.

A chain of dough lead him to believe he was still safe in the city, but for the people around, who were staring at him as if he were some yogurt man carrying a dyke, doodling at their competition. Gone enough rough and blind, without saying much. It was a catastrophe of illimitable advice he had received from the couch man, just before they reached the plain water where the couple was. Both of them were dead.

'Don't get close to them no more. This reek's leaked right in their bodies. It's cursed as well as scurvy'

A fine toast that evening morning, with the suffocating trees starting up, pale leaves dropping from them in a sly desert of sand-paper that run all around the building site; no one complaining at the conditions they worked in. No one even bothered to call the chief this time around, while the rising sun started its pale lighted shift. Various men being eyeless, apparently cut away from the source of meat that made them what they were, from the pile of corpses that became as unsanitary as they were to the mold of ages made from a pair of hills that had been cut and delivered on the site.

‘Incest is what bonds us in this dire age, agree?’

‘Hear, hear.’

The rest being incapable of moving from where they stood, since their knees were ironed to the ground; round-around the spinning circle they surrounded, drowned by the liquid cement slowly leaking from the ceiling.

Some scrapings off their skin started slowly.

Emily

What might be curious in her case was the fact that she refused to talk to anyone lower than her recently acquired social status, which included the vast majority of her entourage on several occasions. Born in South Dakota, on her family ranch, Emily has always been interested in dandelions. It was a crude life she lived until the queer age of twenty eight, where she had predominantly took care of the farm animals as well as her dainty grandmother during the absence of her parents, which eventually culminated in their latter’s deaths.

Their house had been a combination of rustic aesthetics, fallen over and filled with many unnecessary nails. On the twenty sixth’s of March, an unknown to her incident had led to a fire which eventually swallowed the entirety of the farm. Left with little to spare and without a claim for herself, she had to live under the tutelage of a neighbor that had become her informal guardian for the ages to come. Lymes were an affluent family which took care of all of her needs, to the very well point of having acknowledged her as a member of their family, and, with all her expenses being taken off her, following the death of her grandmother in that very fiery basin she had escaped, Emily had become a household name. Upon being invited to join her new family’s business.

Soon enough, there was a shortage of cotton in the nearby area which caused a lot of workers to be stranded near the Lymes property. Having their needs not be taken care of, this resilience of theirs had granted them a stay at the near-border between the street and the mansion poor Mrs. Lymes had the amiability to spy upon them from. Word was that the old gardeners had been laid off and that there were a few openings to fill. Had it been known sooner there would be no reason for the earth to crumble underneath them.

Emily's face had been sliced a few times by the edge of a tire iron. There was a man in the room with her, right after the door had been kicked in. Apparently the man that had come before him was responsible for the mess that had become Emily's face. He was relentless, the man had only taken a few steps before planting his crooked foot inside her chest. A few little homunculi-beings started flourishing like flowers out of her, blossoming right in front of her eyes, while the boot slowly departed, leaving her stranded there alone.

Some of the beings turned dead as well, but the others, who had now come out of her body, like some weird C-section made out of her plaque, aided her in terms of releasing some of the pain she felt. With the evil now come out of her. With their tiny horns prodding in, trying to get another shot at her fat. It's what they fed upon now, not knowing whether she was or wasn't alive any longer. One of Lenin's statues laid outside. He pointed at the sky, burning circles forming around his arm. The alarm now sounded. Several of the man came in, pointing their guns at the little devils who went back into her as if she had been a portal. In there they found some relief, creeping only slowly while they took a peek or two, before finally returning to where they came from.

'Are you all right ma'am?'

'How are you feeling?' Another asked, but it was over already. The wound had been sealed by their fiery whips and claws, with her being sutured all over the place. A part of the couch had been attached to her arm.

Out of it came another one. Bigger, wider, winged, filled with tiny appendage-crooked cocked-in pincer-beaks that pointed down. Behind it one could see a few strained feet that became a pair of fleshy walls that thrashed the place surrounding it. A horrible eye lay on its forehead, on what could only be called a surreally, barely recognizable face. Since its body was akin a fat bean in fat. Between the appendages an almost sharp but cruel looking face, almost like that of a man, rested.

'Stop, this female is now a property of mine. You may leave now and do as I say you must unless you desire to share the same fate as her.'

The men were not given much of a choice. Even though she.

'Emily, god damned Emily, how can you expect us to just leave her in this state?'

'I shall do what I must to preserve her face and beauty. But for now I can only sustain her life only if you leave this site and never return.'

'How do you wager we can trust you on this?'

'You may now, but beware, my beaks shall devour all of you if you decide to stay. Do so at your peril alone.'

But the threat did not fall on empty ears. No, instead, she had been dragged in the carpet, with him following through. Back to the submarine, inside the beneath the mansion –frozen tree it had been encroached and held inside of. Some tumor-tiny pepper-shaped organs started pulsating in and out, degrading the skin off the slaves that had been carried in. There hadn't been a way to preserve them, yet pain persevered with or without their adding.

In no time she had awakened in the room they brought her in. That being the servants that had been chained, not encroached and entangled by the foam-tree. A dark light shone upon her misty eyes, and before the beast could know it, there it was, her eyes split open. Almost healed of her wounds, now she stood and waited on him to release her from this shady place she had been thrown in.

'You may relax now, as the pails of light shall bring warmth to your skull and skin, killing off the bad blood that had been spilled on top your hair and veins.'

The way she rested rendered the sight of a pure untouched angel to the occupiers of the submarine. A swish and a squeal awakened her a second time during the dead struck hour of midnight. She was uninterested in the world around her; therefore she was made to awe as the strange other beings who were merely migrating around her personage. Occasionally they stopped and peered down at the pale figure resting on the bench. Long sophomore years reminded her of the days spent in that yellow hell of wheat that seared her memory's eyes. Now a third and a fourth leg sprouted from behind. A face akin to an x now opened while time had come for her to eat. Tiny wriggling worms started encroaching her dainty sharp talons sprouting out her newly acquired wings. Out of her stomach they came again, rendering the suture impartially torn, while the others found a way to leave again, devils, straight out of paradise.

A eulogy started being chanted by the candles. Someone was grinding his teeth in an attempt to sneer at her, following an arrow built out of his shoulder that pointed at her in the dark. Ravenous light's blistered with fuming water. Right from above crawled some king-spiders, with their reddish crowns boiling, sliding and scalding in the splendor of the dark-above. Their reason for being there was for her to be completely terrorized, as high orders had been given for the lady to remain. Now x-split open teeth gnarled around the impish figures, trying to obtain some sustenance. A scent of garlic flooded the surroundings, burning underneath the coal, rubbing in some rhubarb, whereas the blind men had approached her now.

'Speak with us dear, how has the treatment so far? Are you done for?'

'No, I'm still breathing.'

Barely she did, but it sufficed. Cockroaches of steel, stirred in half. It was a long trip going all the way back. Without dismissing any concerns that may be attained by her inattentive nature, one could draw a comparison to some wild animal that would resonate with her current state. It would be akin to staring into the abyss, without realizing that a grateful Lord, or some unnecessary simpleton looked out for her wellbeing. It would be impossible, otherwise to draw a conclusion to her heartless demise. What had come of this being was just an unnecessary cry of violence directed at a beauty that could not be preserved nor repaired. Therefore, one cannot, if assiduous, keep such an important promise as it's been brought about. Such as the creed of some invigorating geyser rushed at the top of a mountainous region, so does the spirit yearn to grow; it was the dampness that really bothered Emily. A bit of her fell off, they were playing around with her feelings, despite being distant.

The weather was not fine down there, since the gloom only added to the pleasure of having triumphed over the order of things. Everything action would bring a great cost to Emily, for her persuasive nature was not to be taken serious. Each attempt was met by a flagellant whip. Every time she got up, she would be pushed back down, being met by an inconsiderable amount of strength that rioted with pompous upheaval. Necessarily it not may've been so, but it was something that could not be departed from, be it done in disrepair or not. Many pillars fell off, some barely sensible curves the same. Water starting to pour off from the ceiling and out of the ground there were spikes that were bloodied by the rain. As if the clot was ruined and its fashionable crimson deepened in the bowels of the earth. It was something inadmissible. Ruined, made her weep, the others came and they were largely unhappy to be met by such a prestigious being.

'Calm down girl, or we'll have to put you down for good.' Said Corn-pox. To his left side or almost behind him stood Bottle-snake; both of them did not care for what was happening around her, all this fuss annoying the both of them.

'Bring a hook or something and let's pull her in the antechamber.'

Right there she would be met by an uncanny familiarity that was uncouth and unmet by any other. While one would disagree with the scope this turn of events and the direction she took, they would forget or turn an ignorant blind eye to the suffering she had to put in there. They carried her in a barrel, for courtesy was included in this ponder, then hooked she was by the machine, and into the chamber she arrived. Or was dumped into, regardless of the execution, she was indeed fine. Put upon a sacrificial altar that had not tasted blood in centuries, she crept. Onto the floor there was water, living fish, Solomon's fleshy treat and treasure, but one thing had to wait in.

It was the electricity the poor being had to take care off. Since she had grown numb because of the impish figures that came out of her, there was something she had not learned.

'Open her mouth.'

'It's already wide-open, what shall we do about it, then?'

Below them the fire hastened to crawl in to a tinier hole. It was livid with skin, coalfish of coal, and butter-awe, feeding pressure with the fluidity of Mars, from where they came. Life-forms lost in dark-eons, billions of years of being left behind, striding with the help of fuel, burning, melting, liquefying, then jumping back in to the start, where they came from, where they crawled. And there were birds down there, Cherokees as well, dancing around the fumes, blinding themselves while watching TV commercials. Trying to climb a lime-wall, only to fail:

Meanwhile, Mr. Lyme was busy reading today's neighbor, who had been stretched into a large paper-sheet, written on him, the news.

'Honey, someone died today. He was shot in the head, then abandoned in a dumpster.'

'I've seen bluebirds flying around the mansion.'

It was the eye staring at the club. Not necessarily a good thing.

They moved like irascible corpses. The weariness of a blob started gnashing at one boot. Such tools, as its sharpened brown teeth had no right to exist in the first place. Albeit something could be done about it, something irreparable, strung to the incisors would come the weeping. Pain was something the blob-creature had no right to bear. It and unutterable suffering would come to the taking. Blood spilled on the floor, right there. In a tiny spot the pool subsided. No longer was it flowing. No longer dripping from the ceiling either. Both sides had been completely cauterized. Like turned-up rancid wounds they shook.

But it was still moving around inside the mansion. Often times, inaugurating its many humanoid catches. Those closer to its mouth were considered assiduous, especially the ones that struggled. It was a miasma of colors that allowed it to dream and draw closer to faces that were formed on the ground. A gourd of their likings quenched their thirsts. Yet there was one thing that could not be delayed, that being the feeding process. In its most distrustful form. An unusual pair of feet started to park alongside the cars. There were no owners in sight, henceforth they were considered as being abandoned.

'Glory to the kings, in this mournful noon.'

An eye started erupting from a rock. It folded multiple times before receding back into the hole it had emerged out from. Animals started crawling and sniffing about. A figure akin to a fugitive started running away. Mild gnawing figures danced in wild rows. It was icky and ugly, almost an earnest shop.

'Guille, my dear friend, where are you? There, where have you been?'

The client wanted to draw some hot air back inside of himself, turning into a puddle whenever he liked the smoked scent of coils, running about in disgrace. An amorphous life-form emerged from where they ran.

'Where are you Guille? I've lost you again.'

He lost sight of him immediately. It was disgusting. Halls started appearing from here and there. Inside the little impish heads, the gargoyles, a chapel emerged. Wild sounds started dreading each ear that came into contact with it. Many stairs lead to it, concocted, erupting evenly. From there the men stopped falling. A yellow tongue disrupted each ear.

The flying column that had been there for over a century no longer dreaded the coming of the light from one of the places above it. As much as an annoyance as it was, the despicable humans invaded their holy place. A pasty blood type AB pasta was shared between the men in the first half an hour. A lame snake almost bit one of their ankles. Such fineries could not be found in the outside world; on the contrary, it was something that was meant for the aristocracy alone to taste. By night they had their skin removed by members of the outsider's cartel, since it had arrived down there long before they even knew there had been a dealing with the Lymes.

Flowers that were as hard as boulders cracked still. There was an ugly man, balding, blind, sitting in front of the beck, right before their mansions. He crept slowly and as miserably as he could, trying to sell the impression of his haggardness.

'We don't deal with your kind here, not as of yet.' Answered Mr. Lyme, but the creature standing in front of him was undaunted by such annoying entrances.

'You've got me in trance and I'm all yours to be commanded. Say the word sir and I shall obey. Pleased to serve as I am, I come with but a single, simple thing to ask. Please do tell me what's on your mind?'

'I beg your pardon, wretch? And for what reason should I open myself to you in such broody mood as you've fined me with?'

'As I said, Mr. Lyme, I'm here to serve, therefore there should be a mutual agreement between the two of us that will stab no further than needed. But a basic sign of trust should suffice as being shared between us.

Courtesy begs for such thing to be offered.'

'And yet you haven't answered my reasonable question? For what reason should I put trust in what you've got to say to me?'

'As a token of some old friendship that now lays almost forgotten.'

'Do you claim companionship of old between the two of us?'

'I claim no rue, but as it is require, I shall show you a sign of rumination.'

'And what token would this be?'

Now Mr. Lyme had been incredibly attentive at the words that had been spoken to him. It was by no means easy to extract from him what little information he had. But one thing was clear. This poor wretch standing before him was by all means Mr. Poly he had known of old. Despite the desperate state he was in, the man was easily recognizable by him. Hard as it had been becoming of him, there was a simple test of loyalty he tried.

'Very well, as I do seem to have had a consideration about your personage, you will forgive me of having forgotten all about you, Mr. Poly. In turn, I apologize and have a simple demand of you.'

'Tell me and it shall be done.'

'There is a girl by the name of Emily I desire you to track down and bring me news of, for she was a dear and a figure that was highly prized by my family.'

'Well then, there should be no trouble finding her then, if this person was as important as you claim her to be.'

'Great, then the bargain is struck.

Her whereabouts are unknown. And the only thing I can remember is that my sweet Emily had been taken away by a bunch of grotto-robbers.'

Emily has always been a plain girl, always leaning of the far end of the trails while the train was passing. Water is yellow with fruits.

'Come on down here commander. I think I spotted another living one.'

'Are you certain about it, colonel?'

'As much as a man could be.'

Then they strolled around an empty racket. The army was prepared to attack any given moment.

'Poor, poor plutonium, what could we do without it?'

She vaguely remembered what life down there was like. In her childhood, in her farm, there was this delirious desire of her to go down and explore what was happening down there. Hush, hush, back in the head came the premise to kill one again, while the beasts watched in slumberous silence. Their teeth were visibly out of their gums, stretched evenly as bog-saliva slowly dropped below.

In a small box laid four men. There wasn't much space for either one to move in. Steam started blowing out of their eyes and in a minute they began fighting one another as if they were dogs. No longer was the box chained to the walls as it simply dropped on the hard concrete pandemonium of a maze of walls, being stuck there for what would seem forever. But the lack of light would never even give a clue of something being there in the first place. Men still fought like they did, the criers started chirping in and before they knew it they were dead.

In a small box blood flooded the room. Men had drowned, stricken down, dead before they had the chance to see it open again, which happened.

The old maniac started conversing yet again:

'The female erogenous spots cannot be easily be found by someone whose sight has been taken away from. It takes a precise mastery of your other living senses only to take a scent in where they're hidden, but even then, there's the problem with the nerve endings that simply drag back and forth, then back and forth again until release.

Same as this, the satisfaction of carrying a gun doesn't come entirely without a cost.'

What had to be a simple discussion turned out to be a battle of wits which vulgarly followed the men in the trenches, who had been separated from the rest of the world; ink-splotches dirtying the merry-go-around they stumbled into.

‘We found land- go in, open the gates, release the kraken for the similitude of men that want to follow.’

An ugly pasty white blob already turned the dark into a placated snow-white. Such crème could not go unnoticed for long. Desperate for some kind of attention, men started shooting all around, wherever they could find a spot or some crawling corner, they hid in, eating their own finger-nails since food was sparse. During the bombardment of foam that came from one of the tunnels, they began poaching the dead. Skinning them with the least amount of passion they could get. You could see remorse in their faces, but they were desperate. Globes of white, full-metallic followed slowly from the hole they were directed to enter for surveillance purposes. Of course of course, who could miss it? It was at least ten men wide and four times as taller. It was heavy and rather flat, skin could not be withdrawn from it as it bore a diamond hairy wheat of puff.

Meanwhile all Emily could think about was broken dishes and candy flowers. Her broad clothes were no longer looking for an insurgence to be found. Nor were there any martyrs around to carry her flag, or swear to die for. It was all silent her memories were all she had. A particular figure, though, flicked her interest, albeit she faked disinterest in him. Polpitt Bronx had been a cashier at the Royal-club in Minneapolis. They both met during a hot summer she had lessons to teach in the district of. Alone, this figure perhaps distracted her from the hardships of her life, which were already overly encumbering her soul, only to result into her letting her guard drop down.

‘What a miserable scent I feel, where’s it come from?’

‘That would be the dissection barrels, miss?’

‘Emily, my name is Emily.’

‘It’s good to know, my name would be Polpitt in that case.’

With an irritating smile, this bright young pale fellow drew forward in a need for soft-caress. He asserted dominance or at least attempted to while Emily was simply standing her ground. Upon the sudden realization that this would be a foe against which the initial idea of disarming it would fail, he backed off. Both of them were standing just a few feet away from one another, unmoving. Many hard life lessons at the farm, during the time-out, granted her the vision of an eagle, with the grasp of a machine. She was simply cold and unrelenting as their eyes retraced their way, slowly connecting. Polpitt’s body, although it had appeared as a figure of iron had slowly been turned to rust. Behind them, the lights started returning to the Casino, whereas the classes were about to have the students fall back into line.

‘Did you want anything else, other than my name?’

‘No. Not at all, I think I forgot what I was meaning to say to you just now.’

He failed, and again backed down a few feet. A ladder was lowered from one of the top floors of the casino, slowly retracting in order to give him a few more seconds to climb back on it, as if he had been given access to a private helicopter. There he went, cigarette no longer in hand. It had been thrown away and he barely clenched his jaw when it happened.

Emily returned to her class. In this case there were no children around, only the animals who attended the lessons. With a thoroughfare in mind, she went on her fork, before shoveling hay back into their mouths.

A gut-tree was opening its large trunk to invite a few passengers in. Breathing was very much out of the question. What happened inside of it was a test of courage and well-standing. She was cunning enough not to fall in love with her pets. Their fate was already determined. In mildew she cut herself red, waiting for the ambulance to go ahead, since she declined them. It wasn't allowed. Her wings were a blessing, for out of them drew some voiceless kites. Many with eyes and tongues, connected with strings near every edge. A pair of switches lay in her chest, waiting to be pressed. This body of hers would blow up any second now.

Outside the mansion the workers were engineering a tiny bomb that would in turn cause the collapse of the entire property. With plenty of time on their hands, they started shuffling about, trying their hands at anything they could grasp and prepared. Several nights had passed and they were only getting angrier than any closer to achieving their plan. To find Emily; and to destroy the Lymes, that had been their new found purpose in life. Since money only came harder, they would have to become ingenious enough with what they had in their hands. Be it explosives or black powder bullets, held in their pockets. So were their guns. But that was a different matter that would not be spoken of. And there was also the problem of where the farmers went.

In a miraculous act of deceit, these "farmers", whose true forms were close to flat shadows with their heads thrice removed and replaced by fumigating smokes of many faces and people trapped in their planted bodies; no longer did they admire time. It was something they failed to recognize the passing of. Instead they stood still while hiding inside hatches, near the far end of the submarine, whereas the great roots, whose cool grasps were desperate to be released once again out of where they stood. In organs, giant beating organs' where they hibernated, unknown hatcheries out of which they knew not when to come out. Since the passing of the time was restricted.

As much as metal bent, the Lymes were unconcerned with what was going on outside the Mansion, since it had been completely removed from the danger-area they peeked into from time to time. No unwonted man would enter the mansion, as they were just as frightened as My Lyme was, in the past, if presented with such a situation.

Emily again met Polpitt. This time the man had been severely aged. No human feature could be discerned of him any longer, for he had dropped from that pool a long time ago. Now he was kept alive by machines, ugly ones that pumped in his back, his front, with openings to release steam; three hinder legs now in the front. The ones in the back were forming an encrusted circle. Within each leg, there was a simple handgun that could be taken out and put to use at his disposal. This was the first face Emily had been greeted by ever since she raised up from her coma.

Then it happened. As she opened her mind she puked two pints of blood out of her mouth. How they gathered around her, the impish figures, bowing down in an attempt to worship the very blooded ground she walked on top of. Her eyes were struggling now. Her nose broken and many of her ribs were no longer attached to the rest of her body. But she recognized the man nonetheless.

‘Why are you here and what happened to you, Polpitt?’

‘I am no longer the man you’ve met that day in front of the casino.’

Her memory was still intact, and his was something else. Somehow that interaction of their, the flashing of the cigar, the lowering of her curtsies, all were stored in them both. And he was as pale as he’d ever been.

‘I can see that. But why have you returned to haunt me in this new state of death?’

‘Because I knew not else to follow, or come onto from the outer depths of death, I had to be sure I saw you one more time, for I have galloped plenty of years only to find you.’

‘That was all in vain, I assure you. For I do not accept you as you are. And to me, you may as well be a specter of its former self, come here with no other reason but to haunt me.’

‘Then I must apologize and seek to leave you once again.’

‘Do as you may, but keep in mind that I shall not come and find your grave when you finally pass, tin can.’

With which they parted ways once again.

Emily had been thinking of Iraq and the war Americans had implicated themselves in. Fire and pesticide had been the natural enemy of the Talibans long before the United States of American invaded their lands. It was something inadmissible to fight them and to destabilize their country with such an austere self-esteem and arrogance. Then she started thinking about Afghanistan and Vietnam, and about the poor people that had died in those for no reason whatsoever. Those must’ve been the dark days of the greater Continent that was formed, when the tectonic plates shifted and where Asia and the Middle East became one great country ruled under Marxism and Communism. Her simple mind drifted back and those soldiers that died for their loved ones and the people of the world, all while her body split again and out of her erupted a great tittering oval organ that was almost completely made out of silver, or gave the appearance of. This is what they looked forwards to worship. And by no other means would they be satisfied with what was going on around them. The tension ensued as quickly as their movements accelerated and when they started profusely sweating.

There was no shame in it. While thinking out loud she barely made a sound. She had been yearning to release everything she held inside.

They held her on the ground once they found her. What followed was indescribable. They could not figure out what was to be done with her once restrained. And that's when it happened. Hands tied behind her back. Afterwards they simply dragged her on the harshness of the carpet.

'Hullo there, where are you taking her to?'

'None of your business old man, mind your own business.'

But he could not. Turning a blind eye to an injustice was something that could not be afforded by him. A colossal temperament as well as her wit returned in the form of a smile. She was enjoying herself. A simple knack for pain turned her on.

Her rector demanded the lass on time. She had just been enrolled in her new College. The hour had come.

'All students may please hand their notes to me by the end of the class. Thank you.'

With which he started. Archibald Territory had been a simple teacher, minding his business when she appeared. Emily stood out in comparison to every other figure in the classroom. She was different, a bouquet of roses with termites in her hair.

They chunked her into a portal, and she was gone. The students laughed at this impertinent joke then returned to class. All was over. Class dismissed.

Lonesome crows that moved towards alabaster, with boils upon their bodies they fell in order. Small expectations were not truly met, hence they had to start over while listening to the others words of the seraphim strokes of horns that erupted out of their backs. Large ovals of faces that were screaming lead the way. Emily could not see until the morning. When she awakened, there was no way she could make out what was going on around her. Since her eye-sight, most precious treasure of all had been taken away from another blind.

'Wake up Emily, class' started already.'

But she could not remember a god damn thing at all. It was erroneous to claim otherwise, since the little she-devil knew exactly what her wheat-y frown meant to convey. She pulled a hidden switch-blade. Made a few steps, in front of the class, right near the professor, then she stabbed herself. With the help of the blood she managed to drown him, with no mercy. It was an awful thing she did. But Emily ran out the class, finding the first victim she would intoxicate with the unbearable scent her body began producing.

A giant demon whose body was composed out of three pillars, whose features were stretched as if on windmills, came to salute her. Emily greeted him with having her back turned. What she stared there for a moment was her body count. It was a miraculous endeavor nonetheless.

Still-Pol was a Finnish-Yugo student that was out there playing with his lit cigar. It juggled between his granny teeth. All of them had been boxed in and were already half-way rotten.

Rotten teeth, rotten Maisy, rotten books that were put on fire, becoming coal began to crack. Under the pressure of the army, she was forced to interact with him. Which was not an easy thing to do. Simpler matters would not do.

Her hands were trembling. It was not something she desired Lord Hugginton to notice or see. This lady was partially too engrossed in her actions to even bother herself with dinner. Many of the guests that had afforded their trip to date were but shades of their former selves. Distinct from other magistrates and little people, of no interest, they had something to offer in the form of a conversation.

It was disgusting how they did her in the moments that followed. Lofty palm trees glancing over with sun-parades trickling down their suave gowns; their couches had just now arrived.

Emily in the meantime was trapped and had little to no idea how to escape her conundrum. Her soul had been split in half. One belonging to the demon, and one which had been drawn into the portal. It took her guts by surprise. Readily as she was, there was no reason not to creep in.

The doorknob loosened. Someone had cracked in her house. With a gun, an automatic in his hand, she was looking for a girl named Sophie. This woman would carry him to his grave, it's been said. The duke of Portinburg had little else to add in this conflict of matters. It was something which was thoroughly disliked and there was no escape from it.

Meanwhile Emily was still thinking about Iraq and the troops that were deployed there. Her right side of the arm was a ram that started going back and forth, then in mysterious trance places.

'The girl is barely in control of her own body. She's barely a body at all, a shell more likely that needs to be boiled a little, an egg in the making, then salted, eaten and regurgitated into who she has been.'

The assistant replies:

'I think she needs a good handling, if you understand where I'm going with this. A little one here, a little one there, defaced, then back to being beaten, that'll fix her!'

'Shut your mouth before any of the officers hears of it. If word goes around, then it shall be death of function for us both, understood?'

'I'm sorry chief. I'll try to keep it quiet next time.'

'Fine, return to your duty and ensure this side of her doesn't go too far.'

It was a reprise that would not end. Her treatment did not allow her to engage with anyone else for the time being. It was imperative that this rule of the thumb was followed to a complete degree. Otherwise, she would simply plunge into despair if she tried doing something nasty. A tall box of iron would fall on top her head.

A few hours pass inside a yellow bath of powder. There's nothing inside it at this point. All of it gone in the span of a few minutes. While there are one or two clues about who might've done it, the pulpit remains unknown. A cucumber skinned Laplander started drawing small ringlets out of a horned bull's buffet. Rivers were riveting with smoked cigars, even bloodied by them. It laid a ton, the lady who had entered the motel. She was high. She was beloved. She had children. None of them visited her during the passing of the hour. It was as if they forgot about her existence entirely. Much beloved she wasn't any longer. That in itself was saddening to hear. A dead-shot canary still fretted around the hall. It was unsubstantiated, the hatred she had gotten from her colleagues, which made her still herself in awe. Disgusted by this act of virulent violence that ensued upon her, she settled on fleeing from sight before other men could come and do her harm. Running in circles, not knowing what to do, they all passed her, trying to get a say in but couldn't do. She was ill, but was forgotten. There was some silliness, never got her.

A tyrant was her husband, a little man by the name of Yarn Copenhagen.

'Have you readied yourself, my love?'

But there was no answer. There was terror in her eyes.

An hour passed. Emily walked up to the door, pretty much nothing in her mind that would allow this princess to elaborate what happened to her, or how she got here. There was a stained knife in her hand, which she refused to let go off. But by the time anyone came to notice, it had already been snugged in her pocket.

A large mammal body of eighteen meters, with legs all conjoined, bearing a fleshy gun-tower of a head with multiple smaller long teeth coming out of it drew closer to one of the registers, devouring, in the process a few of the people around it. As it did it, it shook its head back and forth, spreading tiny crimson pearls that were their remains. It was unacceptable, but something that could not be coped with. They ran away. Mostly everyone who came to chase it died. There was only one exit door, so the ladies, accompanied by their husbands simply ran upstairs where they would not be ran into. The fire had already been started. And this place was a shelter of books in form of coal in waiting.

What an irresponsible thing to do. To add more fuel to the fire; Charlotte did. With the help of her busy husband Yarn, they were both intruded upon by a shelter of tamable dead-cats that had been dragged from the dark abode. They danced with them before stopping, in order to have a taste of them. It was impetuous to not wait for the others to come, but the feast was already starting.

The weather outside was not on par with itself twenty days ago. It was an ugly thing that broke the marshes as well. Giant thunder-lords made out of gurgling tiny hairs conducted electricity while flying. They were ruining the atmosphere. But inside of them they had goliaths and leviathans, whales and other similar to them body-parts that shifted between slender and fat. Laughing aroused panic, but the seagulls were at large instantaneously killed.

Paranoid was something that was lived day and night, with nothing even close to sharing the winds, or the skies with. Planes were taken down, flies in the gutter. She trembled at the thought of, she was no longer alive to see it. Emily's younger sister.

A heart that was ripe open screamed with disgust. The air-flow was being cut from many meandering men, below. They were incapable to make out who or what was ruining the skies to such degree that it had become a storm without thunder. Suffocating them by the hour, men became flies and dropped. What had once been a hot climate now turned into a cold one.

‘I desperately need some coughing medicine. A bottle is all I need. Give it to me now!’

‘All right, have some. But don’t waste it all on one whole gulp. There’s other men before you that asked for the same treatment and were rejected.

Yet I’m not entirely unreasonable. By which I mean that I can see how desperate a situation you are in. So I’m going to do my best to help you.’

‘If you want to help me, then keep it coming. Turn the valve and let it rip!’

How desperate he’d become, it was impossible to put a stop to it, now that he had gotten it all over his kaki shirt, even the buckle was unbuckled by the looks of it. He had to stop and he had to stop immediately before he overdosed.

‘There, there, I think you’ve had enough. Too much of the juice will kill you. I’m simply letting you know.’

‘As I said, keep it cranking. Let it flower in my mouth, and let the bird come in. Nothing wrong will happen to me. You have my word.’

‘What’s the worth of a dying man’s word?’ Asked one of the hooligans in the back who refused to resuscitate the conversation.

‘It has nothing to do with you, old man.’

‘But oh, how wrong you are, dear fellow. To think I almost allowed a low-life like yourself not only to cut in line but to steal all of you cough medicine, is deplorable.’

And the man had a knife on him as well. They were still in the motel and so far, anything was a given. The man standing in front of him was at large, unrelenting.

‘Think they’re going to start something?’

‘Only wails of empty threats, no more. Trust me on this. I know how fast things can blow off. We’re here to deescalate the situation if something happens and don’t forget that.

The casino had been broken in. There weren’t enough people in it to stop the vandals that crept in. Armed to their teeth with bones, they destroyed most of everything there. Blood was on the fire, in a small bowl atop a fire in the garden. In it a whiff of smoke started rising up the sky. Nudes of women he had fucked. All in a register, locked up. There was a time and a day for someone to come and kill the garden, to burn it, quick and quicker, then to go. No questions asked.

‘Will you please leave a skull standing over there? Right there, next to the pile. Thank you.’

But the man didn't respond in the same sense he did. Since his ears had been bitten entirely, poked out of his face was a nose that didn't work any longer. Sweat ran down his cheeks. There were days in which he died only to refuse the funeral and walk around a cadaver. Yet that day, that day was something else.

There were no exceptions whatsoever. Not even for a parson like Emily, who was tortured right before her life even began.

'Mr. Lyme, are you certain that the whereabouts of your daughter.'

'Adopted daughter.' Mr. Lyme interrupted.

'The whereabouts of your adopted daughter are unknown to you?'

'Certainly, I can't tell where or why she decided to leave without giving a notice at all.'

'She has become a public person, has she not? Be reassured that we will find her eventually, despite you not being much too excited over her disappearance.'

'The girl comes and goes all the time, so I wouldn't be entirely shocked if she came out that door any moment now.'

'All right then. That should do it. We will stay in touch.'

He left afterwards. He didn't play it coy enough, else something might've been made out of how and why he acted that way.

Way too suspicious.

After being left alone, Mrs. Lyme had just been done with hiding. She yearned to mourn for the loss of her later daughter, only to seek some form of consolation coming from her dear husband, who was indisposed. Fireworks were starting to pump the sky, despite not being the Year's Eve. It was disgusting and in bad taste. It was unnecessary and could not have come at a worst time than this.

'What's with the fire out there?'

There came no response from anyone around him. Instead they motioned for him to shut up. It was beyond dangerous for him to come out. As if inclined to take a stance in this unwholesome situation, he stepped a few feet back, then proceeded to the door. No one would insinuate anything about me. He thought. Definitely not a coward as everyone else here, with which he puffed some hot air and came to the door, turning the knob slowly, before making his way outside. He was beheaded before he could say a thing. The worst part was the fact that these winds that had done so left no bloody mark around them.

One of the other tenants ran towards the door, risking not only his life but that of others if he draw the attention of the winds. IT was a cruel thing to day, speaking ill of the dead and such but:

'Bastard, you almost killed us all.' He said, with the door closed and with no other way for the others to come in. But from what could be seen from that sudden opening to the hall, and the stairway, the place was filled with tall figures that could not be made out of. Whatever they were, they were not humans at all. Yet there was another thing. A second glance revealed that some of them were just as quickly beheaded by the winds as well. Just like one of their men was.

This might've been the reason behind them not coming in, making their way to a feat of women, men and children, from which none of them could come back to. Cones started coming from above, moving slowly. Spinning like drills until Vertigo was attained by most of those who stared at them. Some blood clot formed out the shallow flower pot. It was beneficiary for both parties to succumb to the disease it brought into one of the puerile trees.

Emma was put on the spot, after hearing from the herring that was her sister. It was an ugly thing that couldn't be made out. The picture of them both, from childhood was lost. And on top of that there was also the resentment she bore towards her since she was the only one adopted. Mr. Gun, who had been her protector since her youth had nothing to do with it; since he had become her legal guarding, it was his proposal, or at his disposal, the day and the place she'd had to be brought in to meet her sister in the first place. Since found out just now that her sister was still alive.

But there was another thing they had to deal with, that being the blood clot which had formed a pillar of many blood-crows that spat out blood diamonds, sometimes poking them both in the process as well as the other people of the motel. They were safely locked in another room where they had nothing to deal with, with what was going out right there.

'Chop your fingers and feet it. I'm afraid that's the only way we may be able to stop its expanse.'

'At the cost of my hands and possibly my arms? I don't think so, I do not intend on doing it and that's it.'

'Know that you will cost us both of our lives and that you owe me one for all the years I've been looking out for you.'

She was on relapse now. Last time she almost overdosed on high Emphatimil. And someone almost raped her as well if it weren't for him.

A large totem made of non-vertebrates clung to a chain, attached to a chair as well. The cutlery that was being used to cut her open belonged to some on the streets doctor that handed them to Emily as parting gifts after being remarked as a grafter.

There were bullets in the loaded gun. Reading herself, she failed to compromise with the hobo about who was the one to handle them in the first place. A liquorish juice was prepared for her to take and swallow before the next hour. It was disturbing, how irritated her foul neck was, not to mention her breath.

It was Autumn at eight a clock when Emily received a call from Polpitt. Fret not was what she thought, since she was fully prepared to go on with it and kill the man. The very streets were shades where she went, heavy and heavier they began being for no other reason that the lack of a disciplinary action that entered her curvature. That being what she called her pocket; and it was a tight little thing she offered to no one.

Since she was rich after all, there was no need to employ the help of servants, especially not the ones that had gone missing while she was outside, partying with little neon signs that chirruped in her ear: "Kill me" with gasoline in her hands. Now in Vegas, away from the fart, gambling and drinking, high on nasty cigars. And she was not trying to render anyone an invalid. That's why she got her gun in the first place. Now she was playing with it. Just like she was playing with them. It wasn't necessary, but she did it anyway. Madly squeezing the trigger, pissing on a little man she laughed at. Poor lad was five feet four, drenched in champagne, with a robe of fur, stuck in some nasty toilet. With paper on the go to follow, they laughed at him when he came out.

But the wheels were still driving ever after she came into the port. It was madness how she would forget to brand her tiny forehead, forth. That's where she went, lending the gun to an assassin man that had been hired by her. It was long-due since this is that same man that killed her parents. Sent him her regards, before she went all out.

The streets were dangerous. It was awful outside, raining during a thunderstorm. Someone stole her car and now she had no way to come back home. Is how she met the man at the casino again; couldn't remember his name well. Eh, it was enough to see his face. That's all.

'Man, you sure got to let me in, it's raining!'

'And you're drunk and not my type, remember?'

'I'll be anyone's type if he let me in.'

'Fine, but I won't touch a single hair on your lap.'

That's how she got into the casino, and gambled her life. With her teeth sticking up, with the hairs of her hair electrocuting anyone who got near her.

They strapped her in a chair, but. It was nice, she as aware. Not a single man found her gun, since the assassin had become her protector that night. Always hidden in the shadows, walking like mad things in shades, trying to get in touch with her once again. Meanwhile, the sniper was put on the roof, had climbed the ladder and was close to shoot the former. Man, who had been speaking to her. It was a dangerous thing, being in her proximity. But he asked for this and this would be his bed. That's how he's made it.

'Do you hear something?'

Not here but below, an exit from the submarine lead to staircase of ice that led to an opening beneath the earth, in which she found a hot room. Inside of that, there were a few figures, all dressed accordingly because of the heat. But what she could not understand was that there was a chance for her to get ahead. Meaning she pushed one man in the flier, and took his clothes, none to lie for, or to die for, or to do her nasty in order to take revenge. Mutiny could mean death on either side. It was the mean side of things, admitting it, but what could she do now?

Every spotlight was on her. Regardless of her being on the inside or on the outside; some other man in the suit offered her a cut of the deal.

‘What are we hunting down ‘ere?’

‘Heat-diamonds; you’ll get your share once we find some.’

‘And if I get a big one ahead of you?’

‘You either share or wake up with a pick inside your head, twisting that little, pretty one of yours.’

‘I’m much in love with my gray matter. I think I’ll pass that.’

And they welcomed her nonetheless, doing God’s work in the same depths she had been abandoned in. It was hard, the conquest. It’d be heavy, trying to reign on their parade, and the space was hardly cool enough for her to rest in. All that heat, where did it come from?

They were poking in the depths of hell, some flowering bloom ball of suns that somehow trickled itself or were dipped inside the earth’s core. It didn’t much matter. Instead there was the great stalagmite man that was moving, legless, towards her. And towards them as well, in order to chase them away. No one needed to know what was going down, down there, but on the other hand few people managed to escape in this line of business.

‘Here, have some drugs, Emily, they’ll do you good.’

Perhaps I should, she thought. But all of the sudden, another one of her colleagues pulled out a gun and shot her fifty times in her one leg, breaking bone and muscle apart, reaping it with a great force, greater than they could ever master.

Blood was on Emily’s hands, and this was unavoidable.

There was a triangular platform leading to a set of plates. Most of these plates were welded and on top of one another. They lead to a small hexagonal tunnel which had a stairway at the end of it. That led to a small circular corkscrew twisted glass room, at the end of which there was a small conical but without a tip - room. A simple door led to it. It was an office with four to five file cabinets with a table in the middle of it. Various documents lay inside every single one of them, all written incoherently in a combination of multiple languages. Behind the desk there was a completely black, as if painted, man that stood there in silence, smoking. His eyes were black, as were his pupils, the clothes he wore, and his ugly hands. The arms were off, only by a long-shot and he had just finished smoking his cigarette. His mouth was dry, and he walked awkwardly towards the intruder who was none other than Emily.

But his intentions were not impure. Instead, he brought her a simple note and bade her farewell. Upon their departure, she had to walk all the way back through the screw, down the stairs, the plates and onto the platform. It enormously tired her and she wanted home. There was something about the fact that this place was hovering above the void. And there was nothing else she could make out of it that made her uncomfortable. That and the fact that she was poked by the textile heads of some unknowns that were invisible and wanted nothing to do with her.

After a few minutes of closing her eyes, she opened them only to find herself stranded on the foyer, in the cheap motel, five days earlier than she had checked herself in.

The rain was horrendous, but at the very least it was outside. Her fingers trembled upon checking the note she had been given. It was a countdown which immediately ended, blowing up in her face. She fell and died with half of her body being scorched, whereas the other half remained wide-spread across the foyer and so maimed by the shock that it became utterly unrecognizable.

At noon, the Lyme family Mansion falls apart. A wreckage is met by some of the gardeners who have returned. It is unrecognizable.

Half of Emily lives still. Albeit in a pathetic parasitical form, she managed to crawl into safety. No longer worshipped and adored by figures that would have nothing to do with her. How far had she befallen that she resumed walking on the spot. A large pass-through of eleven hundred miles allowed her to continue forward, without being touched and unmolested. The very floor she stood on felt like hay, with a little here and a little there entering her 'sandals' which were her utterly broken apart feet. Split even.

Anything, really, that came out of her disgusting body was in some shape or form, deformed and broken beyond repair.

'Knock, knock, have I disturbed you?'

'Not at all, come in, come in!'

'What is this which I am served?'

'A cup of wine, there's nothing more benign than a cup of wine I have made up myself. I concocted the very potion with a fiery passion and am delirious to force it down your throat.'

That you may choke, wretched girl, that you may choke and die during the time I shall dine upon your wretched body.'

How glamorous it was, a spade in his hand, burying the hatched in her was the plan. It was ridiculous, what he'd do to her.

Various ships were landing from above, most of them concave and dark green. They had man worn arms attached to them, which all moved and seemed to be alive. Chained to the ships were jars that held the souls of men that would not capitulate to anything, let alone the sight of a parasite being feasted upon; the knives were ready.

'But no, you will not die here Emily. There's a special spot for you to settle on and die as displeasingly as I wish for you to.'

A few steps were taken back. Fast enough to avoid a shot being directly taken, that aimed for his head. If it were not for those few moves of precaution, then; the hole was smoking, and the floor was partially lit, in the area the shot had been taken from.

The scary thought was that she was perfectly placed in a stockade of many other bodies that had been delivered by the ships. From beneath them, they revealed long tongues that allowed the grappling and the transportation of her, right where she needed to be.

A car-formed giant spiked sphere with a few plane wings, burning, and with large chains dangling about it was made way for as to enter. It swooped past everything and instead of allowing one to grapple Emily, it strangled her itself. Coiling up and down, dragging her into the fire and the spikes, then lowering her back where she was. Then it exploded a few times, trying to impregnate her, only to fail. In doing so, it followed the other ship which were heading to the cryogenic chambers.

Hermetically sealed, they released no cold vapor upon the approach. Blood was running down the ashes. There was no one in sight to put out of the fire before they arrived. This forest of steel was falling apart. Emily just woke up from her coma, ten days later. And she was done rehearsing dying, not anymore, she simply thought, as she would not give the ships their satisfaction. No pilots inside them either, which could simply be observed during the day, or night, or whatever it was.

Inside this house of steel, they parked and crackled linoleums with battering electrical hammers. Shot down, and put down, they started bringing ferrets to the king.

The scent of the fresh air was liberating. She had finally been released from the mousetrap, and from where she stood there was absolutely no one in sight to bother her. Strokes of pearls started flashing before her eyes. There was no turning back now, in the rain. Emily's face was pallid, appalling, suffocating. At the same time it was denigrating, stooping as low as she was. Having nowhere to go and nothing to do but play with the giant moths that surrounded her. Time had come for her to make a step. Yet the ground was shaky, the ground beneath her breaking. Bells rang, the marriage heap started. The groom was nowhere to be seen. Meanwhile Emily was darting around in a broken car she couldn't start. It was icky. It was bland. Standing around, loitering, it was what she did.

Some canons from afar started conquering the clouds, destroying what was left of the sun. Polpitt was just behind her, preparing himself for the assault to commence. They were both struggling to get away. The men hunting them down were a bunch of army-men, soldiers trained in bland blood.

A tank:

'Reveal yourself and present your ID to the front scanners. Come nearer with slow and concise movements.'

But they ignored it, this warning. It was in the Mid-Afternoon of Twenty sixth's December that she met with the Cuban Deserter Maldive. He was tall and blunt, with a thick moustache, wearing a war-veteran's green covered, green shirt, with poodle splashes of red on it. That was not his blood. He had a giant bulk in his back that pumped meat and muscle into his body. A ring of iron that was rotating continuously separated them. At times the meat would recede back into that spot from where it came from. He slowly pulled out a broad sword that was pointed at her head. It was irregular, but the man, Polpitt proceeded to come forth with a pistol in his right hand, next to the empty pocket, in his jacket.

'Think you can beat me and the tank? Hah, with that little peashooter? Do not jest and come along.'

They followed with some perverse reluctance.

'You want to know what I said the other day, to the man that didn't want to follow where I took him?'

'What did he say?'

'He didn't say a thing. His teeth were sore from all the iron I pumped into his frail gums.'

'You're mad!'

Polpitt thought, but he was reluctant to add more to the subject. Instead he turned towards Rose, his assistant, and told her to prepare the ID. Once the two of them were confirmed by the tank's scanner, Emily was the one to follow. Regardless of what she thought about the process, she did it in a heart-beat, only to have caused a red alarm flash.

'Well, well. I think we're done here for the day. What do you think?'

The tank retreated as did Maldive. He had disappeared only for ten minutes, which was spent by Rose, Polpitt and Emily by sitting in peace, waiting for his return. He did as was expected. Their data and body-copies had been safely stored and transmitted fifty hundred thousand miles away from where they were, in a laboratory in South Dakota. It was raining out there. Thunder and lightning candidly befell from the open sky. It was a ludicrous expectation to wait for something to happen or come along, and to stay this long. But thin hands still worked with what they had.

A fax-like machine started beeping. With four minutes or so, the likes of Emily and company had been transferred to one of the great computers. It spat out three body copies that ended up flaccidly squirming on the ground. Something about this laboratory was off, but not for the watchers, as it was surveyed by a few soldiers working for the Company.

They were all worn out, waiting for something to happen, something extraordinary to be recorded on the channel, not to deal with more clones that were squirted out some back-trash hog-car trumpet.

But Emily was not perfect. Albeit she was the first to rise, she was still wrong from so many points of view. She was just standing there. Until her arms and legs spread, and out of her head came out a stalactite that reached the ceiling, breaking the single light bulb that illuminated the room. A red flash followed, just as if out of the tank. This is what the scanner had seen. Out of the stalactite came a great fleshy organ with pot-flower-roots spreading out of it, both from below and from above it. They immediately impaled everyone in the room, including Emily herself, the company, the scientists and the soldiers. Then it flashed out of existence.

Emily-clone was still alive, but hardly breathing.

Many if not all the rooms drew their iron curtains down, in an attempt to seal whatever it was inside the room, if it was still there at all.

Thunder and lightning still above. There was a simple unsubstantiated threshold of fire which began spreading in that room, as a measure of preventive purification for the contaminated area. Nothing more than turning it into a screaming knit of fire to wake up Emily from her sleep.

They've been carried on inside a car. Miles and miles long, with Maldive in the front seat.

'Where are you taking us?'

Emily asked, but she was confronted by an answer she herself deemed unworthy of reproach.

'I'm taking you back to the Lyme Mansion and that's that. I've been instructed to deliver you there unharmed and that's what I've done.

As to your friends, I felt pity for them; therefore I decided to bring them in as well.'

Anger rose up in her but there was nothing she could do any longer since this was a convoy with many other cars around it, slowly pushing in and out of the freeway and on the side, crushing stone-mountains as they rode.

'Get out of the car!' He said.

There was a shortage in the circuitry. Some cables had been unplugged. Nothing too exceptional about it, but the car was still in a holdout. There was no one inside who could make too much noise, or too bothersome a scream if things got serious. Mark had always been left handed and his palm was imprinted on the car. As was the cat he had just killed now. More of a dog person, he fancied himself struggling to put another dent into, right there.

'Come on lady, I don't have all day. Can't you see that I'm trying to pry your claws open with a screwdriver? Unless you let me in, I think we're going to have a lot of trouble.'

And that was not what he wanted. Too much attention could draw out the cops, and the other stationed soldiers who were just as armed as they were. Not to mention that this granny was one fifth of a centimeter away from honking.

'I'll make you a deal; five hundred bucks and I'll park it. No, let's make it twenty bucks, how does that sound to you, ma'am?'

'Well, I don't know if I can trust you, young man, since you just killed poor Inni!'

They were at a crossroad neither of them could pass. It was debilitating, just having a sniff of her scent, but this was it. She was distracted, they were distracted, and everyone was distracted but him. He pulled a gun and shot her in the head. And her body melted. Vanished in a second, and before he knew it, he was in the car, driving away. A large ear-plug was passed from hand to hand, in daylight, just across the street. He noticed the model, Carl-eight-hundred, a good model that he had used before upgrading to Charles-one-million. The killing instinct had just hit in and he wanted some fresh blood. Something to kill that wasn't an animal and didn't melt as fast as she did. But there was nothing he could do without attracting attention. Since he knew this was the last time he would get such an opportunity as he got.

'Come on, drive!'

It was the aerosol which poisoned his eyes, bloodshot both of them. And with a razor he was shaving inside, careless as to where the hair fell. It was just not yet ready, the gun had to charge.

'Henry, what are you doing on the streets, alone?'

'I'm just playing.'

'You should be home or at school, shouldn't you, kid?'

'I'm sorry, but that's none of your business. You're not my dad.'

'And I ain't your uncle either, but I can god damn sure report you to the popes.'

With that he quieted down, for the moment, at least. It wasn't going to be easy, getting a scoop as he drove, but taking care of the neighborhood's children was the least of his concerns. At least not for the time being; since he got out of the car, pulled the car like a chariot with both of his hands, and ended up at a convenience store he thought about killing the guy who offered to clean his windshields even though the car was not his and he had already wiped them.

'That'll be ten bucks, or whatever you could spare.'

'How about I spare this?'

With a single shot he was put down like a slowly walking dog with no ears. His heart bled dry. He was done hard and he was done bad; at least that's what he was let known of, after crouching down the body in order to see what he had on him. Only spare change, what a waste of time. What a waste of a life as well. It was just no worthy of anyone's time, this trickling line of blood he kept playing with. But if he did it for too long, someone would come and notice. So, instead of leaving it there alone, he picked it up and threw it in the car. Lighting a cigar while he was courting the man's pockets for some spare keys, or something; but no, there was nothing on him, other than the spare, which he took.

There were some sensory problems; his eye-device was giving in. He drove eight hundred eighteen miles into the distance while playing with his pocket lighter. He could definitely have crashed into some car or done something worse, caused by his inattention.

He stopped at the bar Polpitt and Emily were dining, next to the casino. He joined both of them and ordered three martinis. It's obvious enough he's not a human. He does not think like a human. He is a mechanical animal. He wishes to enjoy torturing the both of them, but he cannot.

'Mind if I disturb both of you?'

'Not at all, do what you want. You're free to do as you please.'

'Wait a minute.' Interrupted Polpitt, but then he realized something and stopped himself from opening his mouth again. He noticed the trail of oozing blood but had decided to keep his mouth shut. Right before he could see it coming, the gun was pulled. He was toying with the gun. Mark knew he could take his life in a second and theirs and no one else would even notice it happen. That's how it was with him and there was danger, coming along.

A few bodyguards accompanying a VIP had just offered a giant leviathan their souls, and allowed this boat-like formation with many long arms, pushing out of greater hollow holes it bore in its body to come in. Its only ailment, or favorite drink was blood, humanoid. Warm and still drooping from a skinned man; those were its favorites. And he could not miss the feast that was prepared for him. A splatter here, a splatter there would kindly bring a mouthful to his many children; it bore on the other side of the exoskeleton it bore.

Not much was known about his gun, other than the fact that he used it on himself from time to time.

It was Paul at the door. He had returned from the well, and was already a different person, based on personal experiences anyway. He would not do, as he wasn't fit for the hard labor which entailed him. His girlfriend was an architect, valedictorian as well. She graduated top of her class and refused to suckle on the blood drop that had fallen out of his head, after the axe-man split his head in half. The scene of the crime was horrendous. A play of shadows in the theater began. His soul was eaten but she was starving and died as well, as her unquenchable spirit refused to let go and rise.

Both of them opened the door of the ride, a small two segmented cubicle with many spiked seats on top of which they stood. Resting for a while, as they waited for something to happen, or someone to release them from the trap they fell into.

The giant god had picked it up and threw it into one of the least probable stops.

They were playing with matches, trying to one up one another, in the rolling road towards salvation. Large octagonal bridges drew towards them, in an attempt to squish them between the ground they were stranded on, and if they were indeed stranded there, then there was no chance to get them back.

'Come on Lucy, come on, get up! Please say something to me, anything, I'm trying to help you but you just won't respond.'

Poor girl had spikes erupting all out of her body. She was always known to be ticklish, therefore he at least tried.

But that wasn't enough to stir her back into the right direction. Finesse did not bring her back into her body. It was a lost cause.

And all this was something that Emily had experienced before. At the bar, she quickly disarmed the man who was playing with her. It was pointed at him now. Seats had been changed and between the gun stood Polpitt, trying to deescalate the situation, even though he knew the man didn't deserve it.

'Put it down, immediately!'

'You're not in the right spot to give me orders. I'd rethink the whole situation if I were you.'

'Then you'd rather kill me and him?'

'A lady got to do what a lady got to do.'

With which she took a shot at him and at the man behind. The bullet wasn't even dislodged into either of their bodies, yet they suckled on their own blood as they both fell on the floor. Emily got out of the bar, ran, found the car and started driving. Windshields on the way; a miasma of lilies in her nostrils and the road ahead was filled with cars. The traffic was at an all-time high. But that didn't scare her at all, thinking she could get caught and be brought to trial for two homicides hadn't aroused her either.

It was midnight, at the soul of the hour when she finally parked near a tree, making it seem like an accident before wiping off her fingerprints off the wheel. What in turn was disappointing was the fact that no one saw it happen. From what could be told from the scene, it was less of an accident and more of an abandonment, without reason, of a finely made car.

Emily madly ran in the dark forest, trying to trim her finger nails before running with the spirits. She had gone mad, this lady was mad and there was no man around to put her in her place. How she yearned and dreamed of it, happening. But her guts told her otherwise, her brain no longer in control. Painted in the blood of a moose she had killed herself, with a clean shot that practically paralyzed the entire body of. The animal was feasted upon. And she painted herself in the blood. And she ate what she could raw, worse than an animal. She had been out of her mind, to think of doing it on a whim.

Survival instincts kicked in, and before she knew what was going on she ended up back into her new home, the Lyme Mansion, where she was greeted by tea and biscuits of the hardest, grainiest flavor and state.

'Come on, my dear, I think we've squabbled for long enough. I don't think there's any miasma here to share any longer.'

'I'm not tired but I'll go to sleep anyway, after few shots.'

The servant disagreed with what she said, and even pointed out to her how inappropriate it was. But he gave in, reluctantly.

After twenty shots, she had barely been able to stand on her feet. She dashed to her room, drunk and pissed herself until the next morning, where she was greeted by a gentle sun whose waves prevented her from intimating with herself.

As they say:

'It's unfortunate that you would present yourself this way in such a fine afternoon. Come to think of it, I'd rather have you come in one piece rather than, say, present yourself in such a manner.'

Her new father died and was replaced by a look-a-like. The syndrome he was suffering of was dementia-psychopathic-sleepless dissolve. Which slowly burned out his brain, threatening him to become a separate entity, that would steal his body instead of allowing them to live like partners of arms. It was simply sad, how many scruples they lost.

But he was shot by her, by Emily, who still had the gun. And when she'd done it she said:

'That's right, better to put an animal out of his misery than allow it to proliferate its madness to those that are not afflicted by the disease!'

Many of the servants, except one had applauded the young lady, who was glad to receive so much attention. It was a life worth living after all.

This sector's clear. So they thought. There was no reason to believe otherwise. A boil inside the balcony started fusing with one of the radios that had been forgotten the other day by a woman who didn't know who it belonged to but refused to hand it to a police officer in fear of being accused of theft, henceforth leaving it where it was, on the balcony. A greater fine alone would've hunched her. Meanwhile a seagull was shot down. And its bones were still there, in the midst of night. Close to midnight even, when the troops that invaded the city marched. Back and forth they went, dissipating the smoke nectar coming from their Cuban cigars. It was a mad view. The scene was set. And there was no one coming or walking ahead them. They were left to their own regards. The bones were dry and there was nothing to be done about it. Despite there being flesh on them:

'Hullo. Where goes the candy?'

Cherry-pearl mint, the sound that came after allowed it to fall in silence.

'Pay attention, pay attention, pay attention now!'

Her voice wasn't clear. It was reverberating. The gun spoke to her. It was prepared to be pulled out of her jacked and expand both sides of it into a crossbow. Despite not altering the way it shot, this form or shape it's been cast into bolstered Emily's confidence by a ton. But what the other people around her didn't know yet was the fact that she was mean. So mean, the meanest, nastiest girls that ever were. She pointed forward and shot a man's foot like an antelope. Right into the night sky she trembled wearing herself under. If she did something wrong, this would be it. No return would quench her desire to harm other people. And by this she had a lot of fun. Her fingers slowly pressed again. Before she knew it, she killed several of the servants. And her expression didn't change either.

'Emily, you may stop now. It's late. Go back to your room, young lady.'

'But what is I to do if I don't want to?'

'You will do as you are told, and you might make it till morning. Here, you may have a taste of my brandy, but only a taste dear. I don't want you all broken up in the morning. It's something young ladies should not do.'

Otherwise, her poor light head could fall in the wrong places. Or even against a rock against which bashing the back spot of her brain would not come out as a favorable instance of crude awakening. Nature promised to take back all she had been deprived off. Emily did not dream, instead she was met by the ugly rearing head of a nightmare. Split in halves by swords, by large figures that swished and swashed her entire body. With little regard to her safety, these figures were none other than the servants of the house who had been replaced in the following morning as she found out from Miss Lyme.

'There, there dear. No one has to know about what happened down there. If you'd only just put your head in my lap.'

'But no, mama, I don't want to rest. I slept enough, wild enough throughout the morning, how dare you think otherwise of my pre-natal situation?'

'My dear, I have not insinuated anything of the sort. Trust me in this. You're more than welcome to do as you please with the rest of the day.

Know that I love you daughter and now you are dismissed.'

With a flail of hands, and unreturned affection, this had been faked so far, for the sake of the bourgeoisies; she retreated in the drawing room, where poor Emily would not dare turn to. For her own sakes, it better be a good number of staff members she didn't find unlucky as thirteen. Because if that was the case, she would not only foam out of her mouth but things would truly become nervously broken by her. This was her dismissiveness in action, for she sought for reasons to hate them further, even though they hadn't been introduced first.

In terms of how well she was doing, there was this oeuvre of cats that slid across the street, waiting for a dog to eat them. And a dog did, the size of a car, carried by her neighbor, a giant, whose eyes flashed. His eyebrows turned into mushy forests. The heat did a number of him. He ate the dog as well as the cats, his belly becoming full. A cannibal by nature, he called himself Ricardo. From some unknown state like California or Colorado or Idaho, wherever he could pass as a rich foreigner that could conquer ladies with the promise of lots of money, which was something that all women secretly desired.

This Ricardo; the gun was still in Emily's possession. This Ricardo was a fourth-blood related cousin to Polpitt. And one night they met in some bar, right in the outskirts of town, where they ate brazen nuts and were sullen as they lay in a most pompous bathtub they had both carried in the bar. And if anyone would believe it, by sight or by word of mouth, they had filled the tub with beer. The bartender lay in awe. At this magnificent sight, and thought to himself that this was the sole reason he had turned to this job in the first place. It was for the sole reason of being amazed and drawn to these magic moments. That rarely happened.

But somehow, it was there. That promise, the promise that Emily would somehow manage to ruin this magical moment between two cousins; the promise of her killing them both. Despite him surviving the first shot that had killed the other man, he survived. Which meant that there was still the promise of more injury to be done; it was infuriating, in every sense of the word.

The gun was ancient. It spoke to men who arrived nowhere. It evoked some kind of feeling that was unlike anything ever heard.

During the following nights, she considered the worst having happened. What if someone stole her only means of defense? What was she up to during those cold nights? How far would she go to protect it?

An eye kept her wake at night, this particular night, when the new servants were asleep. Giant spider rings crawled out of the ground, trying to leap into her ear. That was dangerous, if they got her during the night, that meant. That meant that the gun would be holstered by another master. Something she could not permit. Slipping out of her palm during the day, when she almost lost it. Her mind, that is.

During late hours songs started pushing right around her head.

Karl:

He began his live anew on the other side of the continent, where there were no people around to see or judge. Every man that had ever existed there had died of unknown cases. Their bodies were met by twin, doubles and doppelgangers that had died in the same unknown circumstances as they did. He was an ambulance driver in a van. This house of his was filled with syringes and other narcotics he refused to talk about.

Everything was shaking around him. Now he was axed on what was he doing there, since there was no way for him to grow his own crops. Having no knowledge into it as well, he continued driving. Someone jumped in front of his van. He stops, stooping low; the van goes into circles, ends up in fence. He looks around, there's no one. He drives back. Then it happens again, another person jumping in front of his car, perhaps the only living person out there other than him.

This suicidal thing cannot be explained, nor why the motor won't stop in the absence of flesh. It was a guaranteed success. So far he didn't expect to end up doing this. But he found a row of eighteen hundred replicas of a single person, all who rose to greet him, partially, from neck-upwards. He followed the road, driving slowly.

Before noon he ended up in Amsterdam. And he was unstoppable. Entering the first obelisk he could find the vicinity of, the man disappeared. It was pretty much known when he first came into contact with Emily, but that was about to change.

Moon rises up the sky. The feeling of debauchery follows as soon.

A large helmet shaped by a body that enters it in every direction by arms comes into view. The bulk was organic. The eight heads it bore all one eyed and almost mosquito-mouthed. Only one leg it crawled about shaped like a fetus. It was none other than Karl.

On such a lonesome night he crawled through the many bodies that lifted up graciously to acknowledge him as their guest. But these hosts were not meant to do or interact with him the way he did. In turn he was God, and had appeared in his leviathan armor, made out of the morsels he had gathered along the way.

He had never truly met Emily, but a copy of her, in hay of stashed bloody bones soup. What came to his immediate reaction, as if all-instinct was the chopping of her head, which he did. With his mighty blade that expanded like a giant billboard post he had proceeded to chop her into tiny little pieces. He was the butcher but this lane of bodies did not offer him any satisfaction. As he wanted more; he wanted poor Emily all to himself, to abuse and do with her body as he pleased.

At the time it happened, Emily was trapped inside a closet she could not escape from. It must've been a practically inoffensive treat, finding herself then and there, but she would not do without it. The entrapment got her high. It was another thing Karl wanted.

Off-side the many ploughs that had been abandoned since the birth and the deadly haze they had been presented with. Slowly they rose all at once, an entire continent as well.

Throughout the continent you could hear the echo of thousands of voices all at once.

The mansion falls at noon, and the Lyme family simply died within the crash.

A dark night arises.

There's a bunch of flowers taken out of their pots but no one seems to notice that the owners were gone. All good men, who visited the landowner, thinking they could get something out of it after putting all the effort behind the locust lot. They grew out of the ground, and became as tall as corn. A special kind of pesticide would not do either. Since it only accelerated their growth.

So, what happened next came as a giant surprise. Terror came into the eyes of children who didn't know what was happening. Karl ran a few of them over at high-speed. It was something to see it right in front of your eyes, something different, something reassuring in terms of having barely survived to live and tell. For this was the grand entry that awaited him, ever since his return; and he was followed, right from the other side of the continent, with an army at his disposal that he himself had created thousands of years ago. Leaving them so; the chariots started running around the Coliseum. It was a trap for bike-riders and skateboarders as well. Neither of them caught up with the good part of the day, when their relatives still lived and where there was no need for any kind of intervention.

A cruel thing that did not suffice was that he took his time with his victims. Like a serial killer or an innate psychopath, walking around in an attempt to put them to a fiery inferno of steel. For he still was in possession of the same van he first drove into the country.

There were fourteen skeletons inside the room, all of them eight headed to one crawling pile of fat that dragged them. The mass moved slowly towards the bucket. Inside of it there was a selection of sardines and living crabs that have failed to escape one another's clutch. It had been left there by a man, whose identity remained unknown. Closer and closer it got, allowing the skeletons to move on their own, to feast upon the meat and deliver it to the mass. Slowly they started munching with their bony tooth, as the real ones, that had been once had no longer meant anything. One of the skeletons escaped and ran away as quickly as he could, as farther as he could reach, no longer trapped, it managed to flee from the grasp of iron that had shackled it.

It was out of a butcher's shop's basement in the middle of the night, right around midnight that he made a run for it. The butcher was nowhere to be seen, and unheard of, for at least a couple days. He had not come down to check what was going on without his blessing. The skeleton took this opportunity and broke one of the windows, running across the street, wildly, while expecting never to be caught by any weary hand that might throw it away, or spoil its suffering, throwing it in the gutter. A pit-bull started chasing it, albeit no longer relying upon its saving instinct of fear, after it. But the skeleton turned around, in full stop and chopped the dog in half by simply turning and entering him with a slow display of strength. The scene was messy. The musk and the scent were severe. It had been an uncharitable act that resulted in the approach of a few vultures in the shape of felines that started eating the poor mutt.

No light on any street. Windows were mainly shut and there was no one that saw it happen. Instead of trying to get rid of this evidence, the skeleton simply ran away, in search of a body it might hide inside for a while. A homeless person came to mind, albeit no rotten brain was help in the cranium.

He, who had been so in a prior life, before being kidnapped, tortured and enslaved, had second thoughts after approaching the hobo. It was too easy of a target but socially low. That also provided some danger when it came to. His other heads started growling as well. Every single one of them wanted to be in control. But this was his body, as he had fought them for the dominion of, for a long, long period of time, only to acerbate this victory he'd come in terms with.

For now, though this would do. Beggars could not be choosers, and there, he killed him with ease. Silently his soul started beckoning its way out its body, only to be dragged back by the other skulls who fed upon it, slowly extending the poor man's life, who, while he was dissected by bones, could still see what was going on.

A single man's face was shared between the eight. His body was thin and short, most likely from starvation. But their one skeletal body was tall, reaching even eight feet or so.

'The prognosis for today is:

It seems like the weather is about to take a change for the worst. From the looks of it, it's going to rain, and that rain will slowly become cold, until the point where it will begin to snow. So it seems anyway.'

Came out of a few TV's displayed behind glass inside the store; something dripping from the ceiling. The skeleton barely managed to look human, having created a disguise of many clothes and extended skin, and. The most important part has yet to be reminded of. He had eaten the old man's skeleton, only adding to the bone-mass that was already contributing to his growth, from the last supper it had been presented with, for the mass to quench its devouring gluttony.

Now, some place, some warm place was to be had. Somewhere, where no one would suspect a thing; or come out in search for, what would one day, as thought, become an urban legend.

But blood dripped from the top shelf, in the doorstep, and on top one of those TV's. They all reminded him of the butcher and of the mass. It made the skeleton paranoid. It made him think about what might happen if, only if, he stepped out of boundary and was found by him outside his store. Or worse, by the journalists; who were less of a threat than the mass and the other skeletons who could simply absorb him just like he had absorbed many in their place.

It was justified. He crawled on top floor, after floor, after floor, above the windows, and the many apartments, until the top of the building was reached. From there he leaped from one to another, taking breaks in the harsh, cold wind only to think about what might happen if, and only if they got notice of him and his presence there.

When all of the sudden, every "thought" had been disturbed by the presence of another skeleton that had been in hiding. This one was normal, as he lacked the many heads his kind was in possession of. He was of a different kind, belonging to another specimen that was foreign, almost alien to him and them. Could this be a spy? Was he sent here to track me down and hunt me? Was he a servant of the butcher? These were questions that remained unanswered.

AT first sight of him, the second skeleton began to shake, almost dreading to look at what seemed like a body-stealer. Body-theft being somewhat forbidden in those parts of town, which was met by him removing his overall body of a man, and presenting himself, temporarily as an eight headed skeleton.

The smaller one sprinted in a different direction. Running out of air while the decorous flashing Christmas installations from the last year, started flashing. Dashing and running under a sky that seemed to fall over itself because of moribund stars that instantly disappeared.

He found something lodged into its back. After leaping from grill to apartment, to a high-roof then onto the streets; it wouldn't let go. This monkeying pile stilled itself no longer than needed in order to reach a higher edge it could prod with its cold bony feet. An epiphany arose. If only he could reach the bugger in time, he could grab and absorb him in.

A colony of skeletons stopped them in a dark alley, hiding behind a dumpster while the rest of them continued marching. It was something he had never seen before, nor would there be a better time to restrain him. Putting him in his place; where all of the sudden he stopped. Looking straight forward at the tall banners they were carrying with them. Not only were they marching, but it became insufferable.

The ascent into the distance now stopped.

He had forgotten a piece of the cloak somewhere behind, but it was too late to turn now. The two of them didn't even realize that they were stumped where they were.

A small parcel somewhere in the distance; where a couple of flies started madly munching upon a small corpse. It had been beaten beyond release. Where it stood now, there were a few muscles painted in red. There was a hive. Beneath the hive there was a rat that kept it alive with the help of his brothers. All sacrificing their bodies while being crushed by the weight in hopes of getting some of the sweet honey that was above them. It was unsanitary, to be in the same room with flies, with cockroaches, with silverfishes and with another man, who was tall. He was youthful looking. And from behind you could see a giant ship connected to his body, a ship that was a Zeppelin, encroaching his fingers which were tied to it; whereas his eyes, the poor lad's eyes were twisted in and out their sockets, until nothing remained in there. He suffered from bad breath and the lack of blood that was in his veins. His teeth were long and flaccid. And he could taste the sugary water that was not given to him. Slowly he had strangled his wife with his legs, which were four in number and all pointed perfectly in a square. As if they could fit in one. It had become disgusting to stay around. And see this, what could be called a feast, in motion.

He stepped outside, the man did. The general area in front of his porch had been completely ruined by means of fire and flames, brimstone and little charnel drops. Giant ones that fell all over the crops, ruining them as well; and he was becoming desperate, beyond that, seeking someone who was still alive. Then he turned to the road. One of the passing in the wrong direction, stopped to ask, a few hundred miles away, for directions.

'Give me some directions, before I put a bucket of shrapnel in between your eyes!'

'To think that I have come so far to be beaten by a puny man.'

His mouth was fornicated, his head was taller, his cranium almost elongated, his arms now slowly stretching away, as if gathering all that strength to create momentum. There wasn't any doubt about it. If he could do it, he'd do it in a heartbeat. Killing him in an instant. Preparing for it, but the man waited. Both of them waited. Now it was too late, for he already started pushing in, and with a rush he destroyed the car, splintering it and the man inside right before he could get his gun and enter the needed motions to put the animal down.

'Your directions come as follow, dear head. What had remained of you shall not go anywhere, any longer. For, know that you are being led astray, in the wrong direction. You should've turned back and went on the highway, doing something close to a run-about and run-about in. Without giving me a migraine I can't hope to resolve!'

It pained him, every second of it. Not only had it encroached his every sense, but it had also come to spread like a cancer across his body. He was in pain. He ran back to the house. And there she stood, his angel, his wife, alive. But with her eyes closed; in his arms she was taken, and in an unfair attempt, he began opening her eyes.

Slowly and cunningly, he positioned himself in a way that would put in him in a favorable position, as to not give in the act. The fact was that he didn't know what to make of it. Her body simply fell lifelessly on the floor again. It was as if she had only pretended to be alive. And he didn't recognize that until it was too late. There, she died again.

'What a pitiful way to go my dear. I wish I had the chance to stay with you a little longer. Though I'm afraid our time together has come to an end.'

And an end it was. Quickly as suddenly felt. A storm was gathering and the hurricane was only starting. Somewhere in Dakota, news got to him as it's been brought by a bell-boy, who was eaten after. It seems like a certain person went missing and there was a huge nod given to him about it. The reward, that was something favorable. That was something that would do him a lot of good, if he had come into the possession of.

But the weather.

'Puff, I shall do with what I have.'

And he simply began levitating with the help of the distorted Zeppelin. Approaching closer and closer, the clouds.

This hot air inside of it started granulating, hardening the entire structure of his back-ship. There was no point to turn and run because he had decided to keep his calm. It was half-a-state away from where the new of the missing person had begun spreading. And he in turn would not walk alone, that would be a horrible mistake, since there were broader plans at play there. He crushed her skull with his very thigh, just as an assurance that she would not rise back from the state she was in.

When all of the sudden, a giant tsunami hit the ground, washing up the crops, weirdly aligning them after the fall. A dark meteorite had fallen somewhere, near the sea. Its landing caused this ruckus.

'God help me, there is another one.'

A delivery boy had arrived on the premise. He was short and smug, ugly and nasty, as was his entire being; the kid having been beaten the other day around midnight. On some street he could not name.

'This one is too young to end up the same as my wife. I should thread carefully before I'm being caught and trialed.'

The fear was something else. Since the house they had lived in was partially broken, as to sustain the standing of the Zeppelin, which had been used now to get out of sight. The sheriff would know about it, he'd find it out quite easily. But that didn't matter.

He slowly rose from the ground even farther, now reaching those black clouds, dissipating into a mist, covered by rain, looking down as the watery devastation which had yet to reach the house as well as the ungrateful brat that started going round the house. A bomb would do, he thought. His chest opened, releasing a nuclear bomb that instantly detonated upon reaching the roof.

'This should take care of the brat. Now, as for the missing person.'

He still held the sign to his breast, careful as to avoid the contact with the falling of the raindrops. He could barely put aside the inscrutable sound they made.

A ruinous fire had destroyed the city. There was no one alive in there to have a say as to what had happened in that un-scorched cottage, where they took refuge in. Had they been outside their fate might've been reckoned to be just the same as everyone who had died in the fire. As long as they stood inside, everything would be fine. Yet it wasn't, inside.

'I demand you go outside to search for other survivors.'

'My girls depend on me, I cannot!'

'You will do as I say, or you shall be whipped like a dog and put in your place. Both you and your daughters.'

But the woman refused, giving no other reason but the burning man that was tapping on their window. It had been like a lightning struck bolt come upon the ground. His presence there was frightening. He was burning yet his figure somewhat looked the same. A skull and black bones made him who he was, and there was no way he'd return to his prior form. Despite that he lived and shook in his ugly boots of iron, with a gun that didn't work any longer and cocked at every attempt to get a shot.

His target had been him, all along, John Free John, who was delighting himself in the mid-sweep of a simple stallion's decay. He ate bat-rabid wings and their disgusting guano, thinking that would protect him from the evil spirits which resonated with the weakness the females displayed. The three of them were in a corner, shaking, not daring to come any further than needed. Displaying little hindrance, than it would be allowed for a woman to display in front of her husband during those times. And there hard times both come and ahead.

'I want you to open that window and let him in. I think I recognize that badge. That is, if I'm not wrong, my brother!'

'Your death brother, that is.'

And no, I shall not come any closer to his madness than I will come in term with yours. Please leave if you will but leave me and my daughters alone!’

‘That I cannot do, blood of my blood shall not stay in a rotten box of plied wet wood and not face the Inferno with their caring father!’

‘They shall die if I let them go!’

‘Let it be that way then. Let it be, perhaps that’s for the better.’

He refused to open the window himself, but in turn came to terms with his being and his act. Turning upon them with the dark thought of a severe beating, a punishment they were not deserving of, and that they refused to stay in line for.

‘Better do as father says, and let the fire come in!’

Now there was not a single window tapped, but every window inside the cottage, everywhere thereafter, as many had gathered around every outside corner they could find a beatable surface they could continue their bashing in.

‘Come out, come out, wherever you are!’

But again, a sister stopped another. She would give in, with time. Every single one of them would. And they were tall, and broken. They split in many halves and walked like sharks spreading blood on the floor and everywhere their musky arms and limbs could touch. This was unexpected, even for the father, who took residence in the basement.

With him there was a gun. He had gotten a bullet too. And a handy knife, a razor, a bat, and some sharp needle-racks he injected chemicals in himself. Yet there was a simple problem. Where had the mother gone, where was she?

She had to be there, somewhere, in the hiding, but so far it had been unknown not only to him but to the daughters as well, who were out of control as well. The derelict had to show itself sooner or later.

The march of the skeletons had been abruptly stopped. The emperor of blood would not easily unroll his sleeve at this failure to advance. What had been promised to him was complete dominance over the state, and nothing less would suffice. His tastes vary. You could not take your eyes from his bloody cloak. The procedural ticking of a clock distracted some of the men hiding inside one of the abandoned stores. Drones have not been released yet, neither were bombs. Doing so would mean adhering to a full blown war. If only they came in time. Eight heads all shook in crime. As they slowly munched upon the skeleton of a man, a short piece of a machine made noise somewhere else. Kids were playing outside. But at this hour it was something inopportune. These children were not normal either, as they seemed to lack in humanoid appearance. No heads but out of their bodies drew out large tails, as wide as brooms at their ends. With long legs coming out of their vestigial mammal’ arms, they moved slowly to allow the mouth to fully propagate itself. That in turn was an ugly three headed rat –figure. Shaking in place, it waited for the body to move and allow some of the smaller men that were in the house to come and feed them, as, some of these kids were in, while the others, the ones causing all that ruckus of noise, were outside the premise.

Four a clock, they gathered with sharp spears, all pointing at the children. Standing between the two of them was a heavy air. Its weight droned around. All of them, including the skeletons that pinned the children in a corner felt that abominable weight being put on them. Incapable to fully retract and go back over to where they've been, what they were holding was in reality elongated cones of gelatin. Shaking all over, moving and coming apart. Their mouths drew out leaping skeleton incisors, filled with poison, aimed at their feet. So that the children would be incapacitated, allowing the acid to spread in their body, breaking them apart with every passing moment. Albeit a worse fate than death would soon follow, readily enough as they begged for mercy, the effect of the acid already kicked in. They fell on the ground, without feet to sustain their stay, above the cement, the asphalt moved, they damply rolled, but falling apart. Hollow spots in their guts, revealed as the skin started melting, but no red blood could be seen. It was as if they were empty in there, costumes that had been worn for a while.

Only for a short while at that, while the ones who had been sitting inside the costume were, they were incapable of self-sustain. Their hearts started flying outside, grasping for the walls, jumping and leaping from side to side, incapable of being taken down even by the skeleton archers. This invasion had been dropped from the very start. It had been a failure of magnanimous proportions.

But the children, the children, the children and their bodies, were shaped like giant pears, hives with down trodden rodents, legged by two segmented mantis-look-a-likes.

They moved slowly inside the room, waiting for a chance to get out. The pray was somewhat near. They could get close to it and disappear. Some others knew about the capture and had dared not come out. For god knows what might happen to them in similar circumstances. It was fear which drove their very bellies into standing there, up-turned, down-turn, with their insufferable noises making a quick rascality upon the hindrance of the moon.

For it was moving, coming closer, he was sure of it, the eight headed one, who was madly squirming out of hiding, daring to come out in search of a way to return. Somehow the butcher returned to his shop.

'What happened here?'

He said to the mass. The mass pointed at the missing one. And he understood.

By simple gestures the two of them communicated.

'I see, then I shall venture outside and search for that petty one who thought he could outsmart the butcher!'

With this in mind, he grew larger in size, grabbed a meat cleaver the size of a car door, then started running to the middle of the square. Where there a better chance to get a better view of what was going on out there; no fire so far, but everything would not be all right. Not without him giving himself a pat on the back for what seemed to be a job well done. His scent, he could feel the bone scent, but what was that? It was intoxicating. He next saw the marching skeletons, or a battalion of them, thinking they could somehow punch a rib out and in a simple man as he had been.

But the problem remained. He leaped into the sewers, carefully turning the lid up and turning it down, he wasn't seen. It was a dangerous maneuver. Murder instinct was in his veins.

'I shall find you at all costs, and shall bring you head by head in, with no remorse!'

This was his promise, albeit there was not a chance just yet for him to traverse a city without time.

Meanwhile, the fire that was left behind, the farther in, and pushing far. Was the man with the Zeppelin attached to his back, in search of her.

Emily, where was Emily? Where had she gone, who had taken her hostage and where had he hid her?

From where he was, it would be much easier to survey the areas without being himself seen, as the many gathering clouds of storm somewhat kept the same pace, and not only that, they allowed his accompaniment while thrusting forward for the girl. She had to be somewhere out there, unless she was in hiding. That little thought bothered him. Since there were places that he could not enter, but merely prod around.

Damned was the Neolithic foundation that shook the construction site. It was the middle of the night and a man walked upon the streets, without his legs. The authorities claimed to have seen this man before, loitering. Somehow he avoided capture. He stopped an actual shock wave with his two hands outstretched. Cutting them in halves all the way to his elbows, where the wave reached its limit. Such power and such a display of strength and endurance was formidable, even for a man like him, who did not bleed despite the full on front assault he had endured. It was a pity that he ran, hiding in the dumpster, while they started chasing after wild geese. Insomniacs on delirium broke a bunch of glasses from every store they reached. It was an unnecessary evil, since they didn't steal or do anything else. But that was the least of his concerns. More at noon:

'Are you there? How have you been, answer me immediately!'

'What do you want, why have you called? Was it to bother me and wake me up from my precious dark dream?'

'It's called a nightmare, and that's not why I called. My reason is simple. I wanted to know if you're well.'

'More than that and now you can put down the receiver; I'll have none of it anymore. I need my beauty sleep for tomorrow morn.'

'Wait, wait, wait, hold on for a moment longer, will you?'

'What else do you want?'

'I need to know whether or not you're all right with me hanging out at your place tomorrow and possibly a few days after.'

'No.'

'But I've no other place to go and no one else to phone anymore. My contacts are all busy, haven't the time or outright refused me as you did. Perhaps you'll find some pity in my desperation and allow me to come?'

'No, I cannot. I'm extremely busy and will not bow down my head to a wretched person such as yourself.'

'Only for a night, please. Or has our time together meant nothing to you?'

'Perhaps not, but I won't let you put that card out again next time you find yourself homeless and in need of a place to stay.'

You may stay here with me but only for a day, nothing less and nothing more. After that, I want you out of my life entirely. Do you hear that?'

'Loud and clear, chief, loud and clear!'

So she went on the next day to spend a few hours with him and without him. Since the key to his apartment was put on the same spot she knew he'd put it. Just there so she could enter. The last time she attempted a gag like this without calling, she found herself locked in the building, unable to find the secret place it was stashed in. He wasn't home. This was unexpected. But he left a note there:

'Dear Emily, I expect everything to be left in the same condition as I left them before leaving. Keep in mind; it's a day only which includes the night in my apartment's guest room. I owe nothing more after.'

She had occupied her stay with doing nothing, while the master of the house was missing. No cleaning maid, no room service and only a fishy scented fridge did for her. It was amazing just how many people died in a single day. Looking outside was depressing, since in the neighboring building housed approximately hundreds of suicides. And they were suicides that were all performed the same way, by hanging. They forgot the lights on. But since they were dead, the electrical bill didn't matter as such. Not to mention the eeriness of seeing that many bodies dangling, as they could be seen from the windows. This was not a sight for a young, attractive and superlative woman as Emily to be exposed to.

Still, no one forced her to watch. It was her honest desire, and curiosity which drove her to look at the buildings. Fore-front and below, near the side of the street, there was a boy smoking something. From the looks of it, crack, a blunt of crack, a joint, was in the boy's mouth. He practically rinsed with it, and as his mouth was watering, so was his slapped face once Emily came down to him. As they met, Emily took his head and bashed it against one of the streetlights, causing the smoke-maker to fall out of his hand. He raised both elbows up in order to prevent her from beating it till death but that didn't work either since he was stuck in a motion that entailed the throwing off of the shirt. Something he had seen a lot on the news, when adults wanted to fight, so they could not be grappled or something like that.

And she beat him; the living steam out of his ears only conjugated more fury from him. It was a show of violence that could not be resolved between the two of them rationally. Emily kicked him in the gut, before throwing him in front of the street, where a car almost trampled him. Then she simply walked back into the building, back in the room and looked out again. There was no one down there any longer. The streets were clean because of her, much cleaner than expected.

The TV had no shows on it, only commercials on every channel. It was a good moment to admit herself back into the mansion, where she would be treated like a madwoman because of her prolonged absence. What bothered her most in this line of thinking was the fact that it was inevitable. She knew she would come back like some poor dog wagging its tail. She knew she would be punished accordingly. But to be treated to inhumane, as an animal would be treated like, that was not only undesirable but also something unconceivable. So she spent the night in.

They were sitting in a field like targets waiting to be shot. While the winds were blushing with the coming of spring, the seas were ranging on the nearest shore-side of a raised cliff upon which the entire city hanged on. Boilers started cooking meat, in them; there was little space to move for those animals that had been put in. Unknown to them, they were slowly being cooked without the realization.

Another tiny rock was added to the pile. There were eighteen of them in total, piles that is, that made the foundation of a great platform. On top of it there was a little tubular elevator which led to a spiked sphere of a building. In there stood two soldiers.

'In, coming, next Friday, twenty troops, armed with nuclear, what's your order?'

'Let them come in, I think I'll find a way to drill into them.'

The cavern hosted a lot of military buildings. It looked as if they had been put there on display. Women were suffering in cages and the place was completely filled with them. But that did not bother the men who went out of their way to have their fun. Pointing their guns at them, forcing them to drown from time to time because they liked how they reacted.

'Women deserve to suffer from time to time. It's the law of the nature. It can't be stopped.'

It got the fire running. Whenever they would go, the time would say so.

A rifle was in the air. It floated about the top of a building which was near as tall as the Eiffel tower. From there it started shooting like some chain gun whose bullets wouldn't stop. Even when over-fired, it would shake the earth's crust because of the way it shook. It flew towards one of the other rifles once it stopped. A giant reptile was in the cavern as well. Some men were playing pin-pong at a table. It was the eighties. Moon-landing hadn't happened yet. And there were flashy lights and a rodeo down there. Krishna had birthed again. It was a show of steel, played by buffoons that were giant, all the way from Mississippi to Colorado, but closer to Nevada; they planted daisy chains of explosives that could go off at any moment now. Guards were being summoned as was the militia. Smokes of the highest quality and vodka were being shared between them. The unseen demons and the niggers were playing their hands underneath the table. It was unknown who pulled the strings.

Fire was running out of a gas cylinder. And rolls of rocks had been thrown by giants in order to fall and cover up the volcano which was shooting the poor men in the beginning of the war. Many victims found themselves down-cast and unable to breathe from all that vicious poisoned air. The mustard gas; Germany, coming from Germany while Germany had come to power, they had refused to surrender during the first four wars. And swore revenge upon every single cadet that deserted, with a fury that would be unmatched, filthy pigs they said, all filthy pigs will end up being culled. And what would you know? It happened. The madmen did it, they tortured the poor bastards and came into the cavern as well.

Emily was in one of the cages, but her primal fear only arose the rising of a scented candle that had melted her brow. Among her were eighty more doppelgangers that fell on the floor and turned into liquefied water. Or some slime that was anything but domesticated, despite it being rode upon as if it were water horses. Not the ones that happen to be fish but the other kind. The kind that was never seen before and made no sense, yet existed, and were played with. The world itself could explode at any moment.

The division of dragons shot their bazookas in their airs after smoking cigarettes from some piles they left behind or hid inside strange boxes. Everyone held a grudge against one another and this time around it wasn't even hilariously funny or entertaining. As a matter of fact, it was, at large depressing. No one wanted to be around them, but no one said a word. It was as if the entirety of the world wanted to come in the cavern, for safety but couldn't. Or wouldn't because it was just as dangerous as it was safe. Perhaps safer, or, perhaps more dangerous, Iraq knew that. A reason stood behind it. They did not want to invade just yet despite having had enough with their own government and the sovereign one.

Fireworks were being shot out the sky. Slaps to women's faces, their bodies aroused suspicion. That would not do, especially not by them. The evil men, the spies, who were there inside the room, spying on one another, with their arsenal of lies being thrown at each other, trickery and double-faces, triple agents as well as power aces. Yet their heads all exploded because of all the lies they had harbored inside their head. And it was a given. A giant skeleton head floated and had drank the blood and ate them entirely within a gulp.

The cranium itself had flashy eyes. And bore a giant sword that was held inside its mouth. That began glowing, with a radiance that was unmet by anything in this world. Not even by a well-planned and executed Blitzkrieg.

So it went out of the cave, unwarned, killing a lot of people that were just as confused as it was about what was going on there. Being slit and cut, and turned about. Off with their heads, no more legs. Flooded by a rain that threatened even the likes of Moses, if he were to return, but couldn't because the water, the entirety of it had been frozen in place. A cold nuclear winter followed. It was painful, staying there, but one couldn't do any better.

The minstrel started singing in the small spot they allowed him to perform the one tune he knew not only as being the favorite, for his admirers, but other songs that he didn't and never even heard of existing in the first place, denigrating at the same time the other men who had come prior to him and who made a fuss out of not being allowed to perform what they wanted to in front of a crowd that didn't even know who they were. This event, per say, was preceded by the intoxication they, the people suffered from drinking soup and tap water in order to fulfill their needs. And they were hard to please, incapable of doing it on their own, mandating the government in return with taxes they weren't even aware they could fine it with. It was as if they had discovered some form of power they could not afford to lose.

'There's still no hurry to pick up and leave yet. Come on and show me your teeth and let them be set on paper-flights and go on for hours, for I know what your heart's desire, what is required of you and what is required of you is to serve.'

Join the conscript, joint the draft. It's all illegal but what about that? Minute after minute he started at the ground, waiting for words to appear on a fleshy board of numbers that kept computing permutations at bay. It was so exciting, for the first time in his, Polpitt thought he had befriended someone organically. A machine that would respond nor reply to any other human than him; it was flattering, at best. This machine did a lot of marvelous things, as it slowly amassed enough power to bequest the invasion of a country and enslave its population. Niggers had to be lynched. As well as other disgusting races that all amassed in a single day of work. It was worth it. It was incommensurable, the feeling of letting go, only to have it recaptured again, like in the first day you got it.

The monster was a giant in height, bore gas-filled tendons that puffed up. Its lower body was closer in appearance to that of a leviathan, or a killer whale, which curved as a wasp would when prepared to attack. Near its every end there were large limbs that formed semi-circles, which all bore pincer-flat claspers that had been connected to smaller, maggot bodies. All men-headed, but with the faces of terrified men who did not want to end up killed or wiped out of existence. Mad were the demons that accompanied it, for they spoke in evil tongues that could not be deciphered by any humanoid. And rage continued abasing everything that was living, since they hoarded piles of garbage, these filthy sub-human creatures which bore their fangs out, their eyes cocked back, their many arms front, with their lower bodies being belts that rotated continuously, spreading maladaptive invisible parasites that could only attempt to infest human hosts but in the end couldn't.

It was frightening how only a bunch of men remained there, conscripted, for no nation, since they had deserted their own, being there only to provide a means of stopping the hunger these beasts displayed with their drools, their pesky claws, their tender voices laughing, since they knew that no man could harm them. Other than the stalagmites beneath them, there were only smaller bridges that were set on fire. Whose display of inertia preoccupied only the ones that had been cold, suffered from it, yet observed with mighty suspicion. Knowing that something was happening there:

'Arm the canons, arm the guns, prepare for a war you didn't sing up nor did you prepare. You are to go and die for the country and turn your patriotism into a mileage for future generations to look out for, and flee, in terror, knowing they will never rise to the expectation that had been created for them!'

Everyone would die this way, or turn their heads away as if from the sickest plague that spread around the globe. In looking back to a darker future, they found something bright, a pair of a few flowers that were untouched by the nuclear simulation. Too much oversaturation.

Two men were fighting each other in a ring. One of them used his heel to push the other one a few meters off of where he stood a few seconds ago. Then he started wailing on him, punch, punch, punch, punch after punch, until his teeth started bleeding, a few of which fell off. Plenty of tottering pineapples rolling out of a fruit stand. Hellfire coming from a large sun that was slowly being disintegrated; while a cow squelched; the cow was killed; the sun regained its power and now was evening.

Lightning and thunder came out of the skeleton's sockets.

Emily was gambling again. She had been doing it for at least five days now. Her face was irreparable from all the beating she had received from one of the soldiers who didn't know who she was. She barely escaped. Her life almost come at a loss.

'The nation has suffered way too many casualties for this to be allowed to go any further. We must be united, in these dire-days of mischiefs.'

And there was fire, brimstone was spreading far. In those days, there was war. And there could not be a day that passed since there were no registered historical consistency to what happened in the north and west, and several other latitudes and countries upon which war has inflicted much harm upon. Many a man thought himself safe, or had done so. In reality, there was no way of knowing what was going on. Disease spread incredibly fast during the passing of November and there was no possible stop to it. Gods were forsaken and most religious activity died. Leaving nothing, not even a legacy that could be revived by the people.

Dark entity

They surrounded it already as well as the smaller one in its vicinity, which, granted, was perhaps even more dangerous than its predecessor, who had been put down twenty six miles away from where they now stood. A battalion had been deployed. Twenty or so brothers had answered the call to arms their country demanded of them, and they did not look pleased at all, to be called to serve. Inside this nest of theirs there were the eggs. Their deployment served as nothing else than cannon fodder, since these beasts seemed to kill them by the number.

It was as long as a battleship, the dark fiend that emerged. It was made out of two bodies that were connected to one another, plump but fatty like eggplants. They diverged into almost corkscrew-appendages that filled their bodies, which, appeared to have large jars at their ends that bore humanoids that had been recently birthed. Their organs pumped in and out. Inside they were hollow, like husk, or dead-on the inside trees. They were rotten and constantly fell apart only to regrow immediately. Their existence, theirs and the younger ones was inconceivable since they had been hidden away from humanity for eons, until this one dark night where they decided it was time to emerge in order to feed upon the fauna, being mainly herbivores. Carnivores and voracious but timid only when driven to it; that's how many animals as well as hicks ended up being eaten somewhere on the outskirts of the city, where their dark cabal had summoned them, after appearing in a dream, a single man becoming a prophet of the end days which had been prophesized since ancient times.

It was raining. The city's power-plant had been destroyed. There were nuclear bases here and there, placed and indispensable. Cowardly apparatuses were trying to discern who was human and who wasn't. These machines failed to prevent people being killed and eaten alive, as well as their children, the women and the weak. What they did in turn was slow the process of recognition down in order to make sure something was going right. Since these dark fiends could shape shift and change size. A miasma started crawling from one of the prying birds. They would be eaten soon. The scent of blood was somehow intoxicating and would not easily be given up, once the taste buds got activated. Somehow the scent became watering like frozen ice melting down.

A meeting took place:

'General, what are we going to do about these intruders? Now that they have been released, we can do nothing more for the general safety of the population. The threat of nuclear warfare is but at a single footstep away from us and our total annihilation.'

'We'll invade then. If they thought they could simply barge in and do with us as they please, they were wrong. Because I want nothing other than their, and their complete annihilation, before mankind falls.

And you, second in command officer, of the naval frontier, will do everything in your power to avoid any direct conflict outside their place of origin, the place of their hiding and regeneration as our Intel said. '

'Is this not dangerous then? Should we put an end to this war with a nuclear bomb?'

'Frankly that might be the only solution we have. Our only choice rests in putting them down before they start breeding, blocking them and their mole holes, then burying them beneath the Earth's crust in order to buy ourselves enough time.'

'Then do we have your agreement to put the ion guns to use as well?'

'Of course you do, and make haste, for I am needed elsewhere.'

They departed with an unmet immediacy. Spineless torpedoes, that's what they called them. And it was of no use calling them anything other than that. Flowers of destruction, the glowing robe of god, the pillar that hunts from the skies, the eliminator, the putrid fire that reaches heaven, so on and so forth. They wanted home but they already advanced and it was too late. The entire city suffered of a black out. There was no way back, other than fully throttling forth and doing what was needed to survive. Now came the shots, the first sounds revealing the degeneracy that became of the army.

Soldiers were now more awake than ever before. Their shots penetrated but there was no use since these things simply regenerated to their complete state. Other birthed human-look-a-likes were released, cannibals that now chased the retreating troops, neither of which expected this to happen. They ran in terror, but their return and chase came to an end. They had been surrounded. Every shot mattered, but it was too late, the cannibals had arrived then jumped on them. Puffing smokes were the artillery men who began throwing pimplly rocks at them.

Click, click, click it went, but soon enough it stopped. The treatment they received as prisoners of war was unfathomable, being released only to die there, tested like animals and tortured, and scanned in order to produce a finer quality lot of clones. Henceforth why they were inside the fiends, why and how they were studied didn't matter at all. It was cruel how easily they defeated the tanks, floating above them, then lowering one of the jars which cracked and shattered. And whose pointy shards cut through steel, iron and alloy. Many men have been executed on the spot. Canons and arrows had been used against them at a point in history but no one survived.

A giant among tiny people started jittering in place. Then started following the more fertile appearing women who had to be made out with in order for the impregnation to occur. Otherwise, there would be no way in, no way out, they would run around, make a lot of noise, and burn everything that wasn't looted from the store.

'We have failed, general. Any last words we may say?'

It was hard being alone while being alienated by an enemy's territory. There was a cigar still lit at the end of the cavern, most probably a sing that one of this comrades had been executed and that's was the last thing he would remember, smoking before dying. An invalid's escape, to go tomorrow in the same place meant death to him, to ail the debts, mortgage being very much unpaid for. But the dread did not end there, as particles of air appeared to give vibrations a run for their money, materializing as some form of hallucination to these dark fiends themselves, that in turn demoralized the poor man who could do nothing but shake like a sullen rat in his place, waiting for the finality of his life, death to follow after and soon enough for him to take a deep breath and get a hold of that god damn cigar. He wanted at the very least to puff for one more time. One last indulgence before he died, for his country, for his brothers in the Marine Corps and for his wife and child who waited for him at home, being lied to that this husband and father had a chance to survive. As was said by the Pentagon itself, you die for your country and your people, understood soldier? It was hard. Accepting this one solid proof he had yet to acknowledge, he served as cannon fodder, as did everyone else. But so distilled with fury he got up out of his hiding, tried ignoring the hallucination he had absolutely thought as being what it was, and marched towards the cigar. One taste, he got there, picked it up, another taste and he could been a bullet between his teeth, as if by suicide or someone who wanted to get their life back together and could only do so by killing another man, thus allowing the beasts to feed on him. The debriefing wasn't that accurate at all. On the other side there was not a single fiend, but illusions made out of smoke and dust that even passed through him as if they were phantoms, triggering in him an attack of anxiety and the asthma he didn't know he was suffering of. War is dangerous, as are the men that lay down, completely doused off, sleeping with their eyes open. No. Not sleeping but very much awake. In a state of pseudo-catatonic freeze they could only trail their eyes on him, paralyzed, sticking to themselves, some crawling, some POW's, among armed children who had been sent there. It was an awful sight, but he could do nothing to save them.

Since there was no way to fully verify them, and figure out whether or not they were on his side, he did only the sensible thing, that was, looting them. A pack of cigars, guns, ammo, body-armor he had to formerly discard because it had been ruined by an exchange of fire. But that did not serve as a deterrent in here. He had disarmed every single one of them and continued deeper in the distance, having ill-repossessed a torch one of them was carrying. Albeit this was not a normal cavern by every mean; he stepped lightly while trying to ensure none of them would spring back to life in order to drag him back for this, for this war-crime he was aware he had done, this looting being punishable only by vigilantes that were not there to begin with, but who would most likely come in nonetheless if a fissure in the stony blockage, this barricade, was made.

'The US government though there would be a need of nukes anyway, so why should I care for them?'

The soldier, tagged fifty six, as his name wasn't fully disclosed, thought out loud. It was a preventive strike to his ego, seeing all these wild formations that had been raised by these dark beings. They were at the height of a skyscraper, came as many as eight of them, pillars, stacked together, crossing and curving around one another, as to mask the giant legs that were kneeling but very much shaking and trying to get up. They provided support to a structure that didn't deserve any. Such was it that he tried taking aim at them, but the soldier stopped before he ended up doing something unnecessarily stupid. Something unforgivable that would ruin even the wholesome sensation inside his mouth after eating a candy bar he found on one of the looted bodies. Will I end like them if I venture too far? Is this cavern safe from nukes and ballista? These were real concerns he had not only about his life, but at the thought of his family, friends, companions, fellow soldiers who've yet to arrive and who would be sent nonetheless to this site in order to check whether or not driving them back was successful or not. But, judging by the presence of these illusions, there wasn't any doubt about the plan having failed. In turn, it became too obvious that they would be sent there to die just like him.

Else, he wondered just what these structures were and what was their purpose there, all too mighty to be uttered. They looked like altars. He was met there, the deeper he went by rock-shady blocks that moved around, or crawled as if they were carried by a strong man.

'God help me that I might survive this.'

He said while looking in the distance at the sight of some ghosts, some apparitions that looked familiar but he couldn't put his finger on. It was a hellfire out there. There wasn't any doubt about the incarceration of the deserters as being punished and killed, shot in their heads, dressed in lady's clothes as there was no respect for the dead, or their enemy.

It was this kind of impotence the Government was mishandling, with tenure come from above, with them being possessed but not knowing about it.

The vicious tower stood before them. Inside of it the eight armies of the North amasses. What stood before them was a barrier of three bridges that had been chopped and added together as a means of protection. A female rises. Her name is Emily, she's in the front lines; her and Polpitt join the rebellion. But on their way to the fight, they're stopped by a scene of two men fighting one another. One of these rivals cuts the other's arm, following a killing blow that completely severs his face in half. A match is won. One of four flags is being raised. The duel is revealed as being one of many. On their way to the bastion, they recruit one of the duelers by the name of Ivan. His strength is unmatched by any in combat, which is immediately displayed once they are met by a fallen willow in the middle of the road. His right arm expands three times the width of his body, cutting the tree in half with ease. After being praised by the men, he continues to display similar acts. They finally arrive to the tower. Standing before them is the fort they made. Rain starts. There's a lightning fast thunder-play in the clouds at night, illuminating the entirety of the fight. At first what follows is a flight of arrows from both sides. There's no armor proof against any of that, only the flesh which barely hardened at the touch of iron, which came from the iron-disease that was innate to the citizens themselves. It was hard to fall amok off the ivory tower they had climbed into and refused to leave since there wasn't any incentive to do it any longer. The warmth and coziness were inviting and there was no foulness that would cripple them from any blow. Connoisseurs of the arts followed right in. Their desperate plays seemed puerile to everyone on the outside, who refused to take their arts as being anything serious, when in reality, they were bringing the storm down with the help of their shamanistic dances. They invoked the rain. Ivan ripped the earth in half, which caused a wound on both sides that was immediately sealed by the wind which pulled in whatever it could in order to fix itself.

A bunch of willows that surrounded the good half of the area were pulled in. The duelists marched upon the bridged and charged the tower, leading the rebellion. Inside the tower a fellow knight-centurion by the name of Michael is met. He is met by Ivan and they fight at first glance. Two blades meet, and the fight ensues. They are wounded around their knees, their arms, their legs while the army and the rebellion charge midst-battle, wounding and bringing hurt to one another. Desperate means leads to dissipation, and one of them dies, having his head struck against the side of a rock, while the other is left bleeding, not living for long, Michael remains the victor of this fight. He is disregarded as a victor, since everyone around him seems to die as well. Timed stops during those few seconds. It's all muddy and unclear, what's happening. Drops of glass fall into the tower and the men and women are already set in flight on both sides, with their fate unknown to them. A giant monster appears, bearing two heads, eight arms on both side and legs like chariot abominations of skin, bone and steel. It's met by a few men who propel spears at them with as much efficiency as possible.

They are met by nothing short but a desperate attempt that ends up into nothing, as they're incapable of piercing the beast's skin. During the fight there was a marriage that ensued between Mary and Karl.

Who were present there as well, confused while Emily had barely arrived there unconsciously. She did a good job in displaying sportsmanship at what looked to her as a lost fight. Which warranted a retreat she immediately took; as after all, what life would that be, thrown away at the first sign of ill-pleasure?

Men may've died on both sides, but the northern armies were too much to handle. The rebellion was stumped. An increment of spades followed as soon as the entreaty followed soon after. Much was won and plenty was lost on both sides that only made the situation worse, as the thunder finally split the furious tower in a few pieces, turning it into an unrecognizable thing, a shadow of its formal self that relinquished and relished in its own pity, while decades of torment followed through.

'Alas, my good friend, we live to see another day, and in spite of all, we still reign victorious over theses mumbling morons who all lay dead and wild spread like fumes and wasps beyond their broken hornet. I say this will all the pity I can muster. We are saved and that's only thanks to you and your sacrifice, I say! Hooray to us and hooray to you!'

She cheered to her friend, Polpitt who she had barely met at the casino only a few nights ago. And she was happy that she allowed him to follow her in this strange place she called her dwelling. Where death had been a trifle that couldn't be allowed to be ripe if all agreed.

The council would meet for the first time:

'Enough of this war, enough of the battles, missy, you've got a lot to answer for yourself!'

'And who am I to be judged?' Asked Emily with every bit of indignation she could pervert by her tiny pinkie.

'Twist around and turn your back no longer, young lady, for you've been summoned here for a great reason whose immediacy will not be denied!'

This she reproached.

'I'm not to allow myself be tied to this place. As I may leave whenever I desire it.'

'Not this time, Emily, not until you're confronted with what you've done.'

Umbo

Mid afternoon after they left. They were trying to pick a lock out of fun. Was there something else to do? Next they played with fire matches next to a beautiful hay garden they intended to set it on fire as the gardener was sleeping under a yellow pillow of strands, with his hat on blocking the rays of the sun, his fingers barely shaking and his breath stable. They did just that, and the man was too fast asleep to notice what was going on. He had been incapacitated. Completely! He didn't even notice when he was set on fire. And the smoke suffocated him before he could rise. The ground fermented beneath him. It was a rising sun which caused scars on both of them after having achieved third degree burns out of that ordeal. Not to mention that there was no way of ensuring what would follow next, when they ran out of things to do. This fun of theirs was dangerous to enact and to maintain. It sparked a dose of dopamine and oxytocin every time they did something they weren't supposed to. When they broke the law, when they fashioned loose nooses for drunken men they met on the streets, spending their time finely trying to convince them to do it when inebriated; when they ruined and vandalized property and when it was possible to kill someone, they were there. Smiling and performing the nastiest of acts they could get away with.

But something wasn't right. This do-wrong feeling on theirs started fleeing away. And they were both aware of it. Both Umbo and Peter had their days numbered. As police started tracking them down, being after them from day one, with the exception of doing nothing being reasoned as such: They wanted to catch them during the act. To see what they were doing and catch them red handed in action. That way both parties would be satisfied. For the boys, deep down, wanted to be caught. They felt guilt and remorse for having pushed things too far, having kill-gilt ruin their once finely, as they supposed, sleep at night. During the day as well, whenever they could they would attempt trying to find a place to dose off. Only to be completely overwhelmed by hard emotions they could not get rid of.

Before their eventual capture could happen, one is supposed to be aware of their respective lives of these shooters. Umbo spent most of his childhood in an abandoned orphanage. He had been beaten up by a bunch of ghosts. He was a cripple by daylight, howling at the moon. Nights did not concern him though they should. It was in those lonesome nights that he was tormented by nightmares that would rest in his mind for the rest of his life. Rabbits flying on fields of morrows, being shot down by sharp-arrows shot through the eye-sockets of giant beings. They were legless, and levitated above the ground, three armed on one side and zero on the other, bearing holes all over their bodies through which organs could be seen dangling, all ill-equipped with eyes that stared at him, startling the poor boy that could not wake up regardless of how hard he tried to.

He was stuck there for a long while, sleeping for months at a time, hibernating in a coma while being breastfed by lingering spiders that considered him one of their own. He was turned into a cocoon. They took shifts to ensure the boy would survive regardless of how long he was asleep, lactating a strange ivory substance taken from the marrow of the bones that had been found inside the planked walls. Their gross nature would frighten any child or man who'd stumble upon this abandoned ruin. Creaking floors were awkwardly nailed. The ceiling was coming apart as he slept. The windows had been completely barred. The nursery had stopped, whereas the maidens who had once been there now rested in their entombed rooms, ruminating in an exfoliating dust that started gnawing at their cadavers. It was in this environment that he saw them for the first time. Awakened for the first time in months, he had seen the creatures following him there. With their red organs growing in size like balloons then receding back into their simple, bean-like forms. They fed on flies, the mouths that had been impaled in their living spears, which had come out of their three arms, each in possession of a chatterer that could feed them on absolutely nothing for months, without feeling hunger at all.

They spat on the ground, which coiled into a solid mass that twisted in place and spread like a diseased little pool of human fluids, liquefied remains of what had been a man. With his organs no longer being able to escape from that one dimension they were trapped in. Albeit the impression of their faces still lasted. It was unnerving, seeing the sun rise. As it only garnered the entry into another one of the livid dreams, which promised to haunt him forever. In one of these dreams he met Peter, the man that rest his fingertips against his corduroy chin, slowly making a fist, before planting him beneath his neck.

‘What about it? What about it? What do you plan on doing to release yourself from my grasp? Are you going to simply sit in your cozy spot and allow me to strangle you?’

‘No, I won’t. Let go of me this moment!’

He said while trying to unhand himself after being hit and choked. It was quick. It happened. He made a fist and knocked his hands off his neck. Then he started away, not looking behind while making it into a field of roses. He was almost blind, ignorant to what was going on around him. He wanted to get as far as possible and he did. Not making a sound, he hid behind a thorny bush near two standalone trees.

Suddenly it was interrupted. Sleep was so-so this night. There couldn’t have been a better half-a-day coming than this one when he was fully prepared to embrace the morning light, which extended through supper, dinner and mid-supper as well. Throughout the day there had been urges Umbo felt, once finally released from the cocoon. It was unquestionable, how he lived so far, as he thought, based on his very own resilience he had managed to get through the most obscured passages that had been lost in the dark. His ailment had been in his belly all this time, and his stomach must’ve entered a state of partial attrition, whose concubine was a piece of meat and candy he had somewhat remembered eating a long time ago. But that wasn’t all that went on there. He knew and was very much aware of someone stalking him, other than the fiends that levitated in the wild surroundings. He hadn’t been entirely acquainted with them.

Those who lived in the walls themselves, whispered to him the most atrocious and unexpected nonsense that barely managed to wake him from his partial dilemma, his slumberous partial state of thinking.

‘Peter, you’re still here, after me, aren’t you? You’re toying with me and my mind, you must be! I know where you are, I can smell your putrid scent from a mile away.’

‘Then find me you little twerp and see if you can lay your hand upon me if you’re so gutsy as your arrogance seems to show.’

‘Just you wait till I find you and ere long your head will hang out with your feet!’

He didn’t seem to respond at the latter, though it was so and so. He would have to find him elsewhere, perhaps onto the streets, if he dared head out. The streets were beyond dangerous and there was something telling him it wasn’t right, heading out. It was a malicious fourteen legged and eyed four headed giant rat with a gait that rested on top one of the window frames who came into contact with him. His informant, Michael the bar hearer:

'He's hiding inside the wall filling. You won't be capable of reaching Peter by normal means, not while you're still partially sleeping. Here, let me chew on your head, perhaps that will release you from the miasma of dreams. That way you will be capable of finding him in no time.'

'Will this hurt?'

'Only a little, but don't be worried, as my saliva will be able to cauterize whatever injury my brown teeth might be able to inflict upon you.'

There had been no mention of the many rods that kept the heads together. And the winged tale that was made out of worms. Or the fur he bore, which had become so rough it looked implanted like some kind of dreads. Its eyes though were life-like decahedrons, which also twisted and provoked distressed if directly seen. As for the teeth, they were angular incisors that were curved and formed circles that seemingly cut off entry into the mouth. Also making it peculiarly unsure how he was to take a bite of him in the first place; but that would do.

'Come closer, do not let me come at you.'

'But the light, it's far too bright for me to approach. It might render me asunder.'

'Then let your skin be scorched for a while. You're in need of the sun, despite your un-well condition. And it might just do you good to have your body warmed by it.'

Peter interrupted the informant, as he showed up walking out of the floor, after opening a few planks as if they were the opening of a coffin. Came near the boy and sliced his ears off. Umbo screamed in despair, which alarmed the spiders as well who came near to his rescues. He slid off and walked alongside the walls, straying from the path ever-so slowly as to leap off the stairway and fall one floor below.

'You're not going to kill that child.' Michael said.

'I don't intend on doing that. I'm only starting. And I won't end up any time sooner until my satisfaction could be reached.'

His feet were shaking and the chase began. The informant did not follow, but entered a shade, allowing him entry into another dimension, where he fled. Others like him waited there, in question. They danced upon his apparition, and dreaded salt, as was brought by him. His vile fur reeked of it as if he had been cooked in a pot. It disturbed the very fiber of their being, and they dared not approach any closer until the state of his being was determined.

'Have you been purposefully contaminated in order to avoid any confrontation with us?'

'I am guilty of performing no such experiments on myself. As a matter of fact I'd even go as far as saying that I'm pure, completely unspoiled even.'

'Yet your scent betrays you and your dark deeds.'

To this he had no retort. They were surrounded by pink flatness, which went on and extended from beyond the mass into a strange egg yolk of a sky. Some of it fell off; it was livid skin after all, patched all over. But somehow still betrayed its lividness as one of the arches coming out of the ground bore the appearance of many men put together into forming one great pillar which was being worshipped by the inhabitants of the isle. What made it worse was the fact that the sky had been artificial, and beyond it all was dark. A permanent night and emptiness all put together, beyond it a space without stars. And they basked and prayed upon the pillar for change to come. For something or someone who might guide them beyond having to resort leaving their home and joining that of humans. Whom they very much resented beyond any kind of reason, yet, one of them had taken a liking into.